FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLORADO
Judge Philip A. Brimmer

Civil Action No. 26-cv-04799-PAB

MANUEL ANTONIO FREITES GUZMAN,

Petitioner,

v.

JUAN BALTAZAR, Warden, Denver Contract Detention Facility, Aurora, Colorado,
GEORGE VALDEZ, Acting Field Office Director, Denver Field Office, Immigration and Customs Enforcement,
MARKWAYNE MULLIN, Secretary, United States Department of Homeland Security, DAVID J. VENTURELLA, Acting Director, Immigration and Customs Enforcement, and TODD BLANCHE, United States Attorney General,

Respondents.

ORDER

This matter comes before the Court on petitioner Manuel Antonio Freites Guzman's pro se Application for a Writ of Habeas Corpus Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241. Docket No. 1. Petitioner also moved for a temporary restraining order or else a preliminary injunction requiring respondents to release him during the pendency of his petition. Docket No. 3. Respondents filed a response to petitioner's petition. Docket No. 8.

I. BACKGROUND

Petitioner is confined at an immigration detention facility in Aurora, Colorado. Docket No. 1 at 1. Petitioner attaches to his petition documents from U.S. Customs and Border Protection and the Department of Homeland Security which indicate that he is a citizen of Venezuela who arrived in the United States in 2024. Docket No. 1-2 at 1-2. Petitioner brings five claims, asserting that his detention violates the Due Process Clause, the Immigration and Nationality Act, and the Administrative Procedure Act. Docket No. 1 at 12-19. As relief, he seeks immediate release from detention or, alternatively, a bond hearing. Docket No. 1-1 at 23.

The respondents do not address the merits of the petitioner's claims in their response. Instead, the respondents state:

> For purposes of this specific case, Respondents are not submitting a brief in opposition to the Petition detailing the facts and circumstances of this case. Respondents recognize that the Court may then decide to grant the Petition and award appropriate relief. Respondents submit that if the Court does grant the Petition, the appropriate relief would be an Order directing that Respondents, within seven days of this Court's Order, release Petitioner from detention. See Santillan Quiroz v. Mullin, 180 F.4th 1226 (10th Cir. 2026).

Docket No. 8 at 1-2 (emphasis in original).

II. ANALYSIS

The Court considers petitioner's due process claim. See Docket No. 1-1 at 17-19. Pursuant to Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 335 (1976), the Court considers the following in weighing a due process claim:

> First, the private interest that will be affected by the official action; second, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures used, and the probable value, if any, of additional or substitute procedural safeguards; and finally, the Government's interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and administrative burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirement would entail.

Given that a "person's physical freedom is the most elemental of liberty interests," see Granillo Chavarria v. Baltazar, 824 F. Supp. 3d 1170, 1174 (D. Colo. 2026) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted), the first factor weighs in favor of petitioner.

Relevant to the second factor is the fact that petitioner was released on parole in 2024. See Docket No. 1-1 at 2. In releasing petitioner on parole, the respondents necessarily determined that petitioner was not a danger to the community or a flight risk. See Ekenge v. Baltazar, No. 26-cv-00630-SBP, 2026 WL 617341, at *5 (D. Colo. Mar. 5, 2026). Respondents do not provide any indication as to why petitioner's parole was revoked. Here – where respondents have provided no change in circumstances that alters the initial determination that petitioner is not a danger to the community or a flight risk – there is a significant risk of the erroneous deprivation of petitioner's liberty interest. See Ekenge, 2026 WL 617341, at *5 (finding that the "risk of erroneous deprivation is also considerable" where "[i]t appears to be undisputed that Petitioner was previously released after it was determined he was not a danger to the community or a flight risk"); Perez-Cifuentes v. Warden, Denver Contract Detention Center, No. 26-cv-02371-NRN, 2026 WL 1733489, at *3 (D. Colo. June 16, 2026) (finding that "the risk of erroneous deprivation is considerable" where petitioner was previously released on his own recognizance and respondents "do not contest, that at the time of his detention, there had not been a material change in circumstances" (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted)); Uzcategui v. Brooksby, 2026 WL 622751, at *11 (D. Utah Mar. 5, 2026) (finding that the second Mathews factor weighs in favor of petitioner because "civil immigration detention, which is 'nonpunitive in purpose and effect' is typically justified under the Due Process Clause only when a noncitizen presents a risk of flight or danger to the community," "Federal Respondents do not contend that [petitioner] is or was a flight risk or a danger to the community," and petitioner was previously released on parole) (citing Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 690 (2001)). "A re-detention, without any individualized assessment, leads to a high risk of erroneous deprivation of an individual's liberty interest." Orellana v. Noem, 807 F. Supp. 3d 745, 754 (W.D. Ky. 2025). Thus, the Court finds that the second Mathews factor weighs in favor of petitioner.

Regarding the third factor, "the government clearly has an interest in enforcing immigration laws, but [the government's] interest in detaining petitioner without a warrant, notice to appear, or any justifiable reasonable explanation for [his] detention is low." See Uzcategui, 2026 WL 622751, at *11 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); cf. L.G. v. Choate, 744 F. Supp. 3d 1172, 1185 (D. Colo. 2024) ("It would stand to reason if a noncitizen was neither a flight risk nor dangerous, there would be no government or public interest in detention."). Furthermore, the Court finds that the fiscal and administrative burdens associated with evaluating whether a change in circumstance justifies petitioner's re-detention are low when compared to petitioner's interest in being free from the erroneous deprivation of his liberty. See Ekenge, 2026 WL 617341, at *5 ("The Government's interest in re-detaining non-citizens previously released without a hearing is low and any costs are far outweighed by the risk of erroneous deprivation of the liberty interest at issue.") (alterations and citation omitted). Accordingly, the third Mathews factor weighs in favor of petitioner.

Pursuant to Mathews, the Court finds that petitioner's due process rights were violated. Respondents provide no argument to the contrary. They also do not contend that petitioner is a flight risk or danger to the community or provide a reason for the termination of petitioner's parole. Further, respondents state that if the Court grants the petition, the appropriate relief would be an order directing that respondents release petitioner from detention. Docket No. 8 at 1-2. Thus, the Court will grant the habeas petition on the basis of petitioner's due process claim and order petitioner's immediate release. See Perez-Cifuentes, 2026 WL 1733489, at *3 ("As to the appropriate remedy, the Court finds that Petitioner is entitled to immediate release. Petitioner was released from the custody of the [Office of Refugee Resettlement] in 2021 and he has since remained at liberty relying on that determination." (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)); Ekenge, 2026 WL 617341, at *7 ("other courts have found that . . . releasing a petitioner immediately remains the appropriate approach, at least where no evidence has been provided that the petitioner violated the conditions of his release pursuant to an OREC or similar status, [or] where little or no evidence has been provided in support of respondents' claims as to what the petitioner's conditions of release are"); Murzi v. Noem, No. 26-cv-00359-CNS, 2026 WL 395111, at *2 (D. Colo. Feb. 12, 2026) ("Immediate release is the appropriate remedy. To be released on conditional parole/own recognizance, there must be a finding that the immigrant does not pose a risk of flight or danger to the community and Respondents do not otherwise argue that Petitioner poses such risk or danger.") (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); Sidqui v. Almodovar, 823 F. Supp. 3d 364, 396 (S.D.N.Y. 2026) (finding that "in light of the Government's failure to provide Petitioner any individualized process either prior to or contemporaneous with the deprivation of his liberty, which was formerly granted by the Government, and the Government's inability to point to any evidence of risk of flight or danger," petitioner's immediate release is the appropriate remedy).
