Court of Appeals
of the State of Georgia

ATLANTA, April 15, 2016

The Court of Appeals hereby passes the following order:

A16A1415. ROBERT LEMONS v. THE STATE.

Robert Lemons pled guilty to four counts of receiving stolen property, for which he was sentenced to five years, with two to serve in confinement and three on probation. The trial court revoked his probation after he violated the conditions thereof. Lemons then filed this direct appeal. We, however, lack jurisdiction.

An application for discretionary review is required to appeal a probation revocation order. See OCGA § 5-6-35 (a) (5); Andrews v. State, 276 Ga. App. 428, 430-431 & n. 3 (1) (623 SE2d 247) (2005). Lemons's failure to comply with the discretionary review procedure deprives us of jurisdiction to consider this appeal, which is hereby DISMISSED.
