ORDER RE MINDGEEK'S MOTION TO DISMISS [440]

22 Before the Court is Defendants MindGeek S.A.R.L., MG Freesites, Ltd., 23 MindGeek USA, Inc., MG Premium, Ltd., MG Global Entertainment, Inc., 9219-1568
24 Quebec Inc.'s (the "MindGeek Defendants" or "MindGeek") Motion to Dismiss 25 Plaintiff Serena Fleites's ("Plaintiff") Second Amended Complaint ("SAC")
26 ("Motion"). (MG Mot., Docket Nos. 440). The Court heard oral argument on March 27 7, 2025, and April 24, 2025. For the reasons set forth below, the Court GRANTS in 28 part and DENIES in part MindGeek Defendants' Motion to Dismiss.

1       I. BACKGROUND

2       A. Factual Background

3           1. Plaintiff Serena Fleites

4       Plaintiff, who is now at the age of majority, brings this action against the 5 MindGeek Defendants; Bernd Bergmair, Feras Antoon, David Tassillo (the “Individual 6 Defendants”); Visa, Inc.; Colbeck Capital Management, LLC, CB Media Ventures DD, 7 LLC, CB Agency Services, LLC, CB Participations SPV, LLC (the “Colbeck 8 Defendants” or “Colbeck”); and the Redwood Capital Management, LLC, Redwood 9 Master Fund Ltd., Redwood Opportunity Master Fund, Ltd., Manuel 2018, LLC, 10 Ginogerum, LLC, White-Hathaway Opportunity Fund, LLC’s (the “Redwood 11 Defendants” or “Redwood”) for allegations related to her sex trafficking when she was 12 a minor. (SAC, Docket No. 385 ¶ 10).

13       In 2014, a thirteen-year-old Plaintiff was induced to make a sexually explicit 14 video by her then high school boyfriend, which he uploaded to Pornhub.com, a 15 pornography website owned and operated by the MindGeek Defendants, without 16 Plaintiff’s knowledge or consent. (Id. ¶¶ 11, 448). Plaintiff alleges that a MindGeek 17 employee reviewed the video of Plaintiff prior to making the video publicly available 18 on Pornhub, as MindGeek Defendants have repeatedly claimed they do for every video 19 uploaded to Pornhub, and therefore knew that the video of Plaintiff constituted child sex 20 abuse material (“CSAM”) as her age was apparent, not only from the image itself, but 21 also from the title “13-Year Old Brunette Shows Off For the Camera.” (Id. ¶¶ 448, 22 449). Despite having knowledge that the video contained illicit material, Plaintiff 23 claims that MindGeek posted the video to its Pornhub site consistent with its overall 24 business model and practice. (Id. ¶ 449). In addition, MindGeek “categorized, tagged, 25 optimized for user preferences, and disseminated the images, tags, and video” of 26 Plaintiff on Pornhub. (Id.). Plaintiff alleges that MindGeek also uploaded the

1 optimized video to its other tubesites<sup>1</sup> and incorporated the video into its algorithmic
2 playlists and suggested videos. (Id.). MindGeek also placed advertisements alongside 3 the video, through which it earned revenue with every page visit, impression, 4 engagement, and conversion. (Id. ¶ 450). By the time Plaintiff discovered the video, 5 the video had already garnered 400,000 views. (Id.).

6 Impersonating her mother, Plaintiff contacted MindGeek to inform that the 7 video of Plaintiff qualified as CSAM. (Id. ¶ 451). After two weeks, MindGeek 8 finally responded, acknowledging that the content was CSAM, but took another two 9 weeks to remove the video after continued demands from Plaintiff. (Id.). During this 10 time, the video continued to generate views, and MindGeek continued to earn 11 advertising revenue. (Id.). In addition, the video was downloaded and reuploaded 12 several times by different users and with different titles, including by MindGeek 13 Defendants.<sup>2</sup> (Id. ¶ 452; Opp'n at 47). One of the reuploads had 2.7 million views.
14 (SAC ¶ 452.). Others had hundreds of comments noting that Plaintiff could not be 15 more than a teenager. (Id.). Each reuploaded video was reviewed, accepted, tagged, 16 categorized, and optimized by MindGeek. (Id.). MindGeek itself even uploaded the 17 video to its other pornographic tubesites. (Id.). Every time Plaintiff discovered a 18 reposted video, she would request MindGeek to remove the videos. (Id. ¶ 453). Each 19 time, however, MindGeek would ask Plaintiff "to provide photographic proof that she 20 was the child depicted in the video before removing [the videos]" and would take 21 weeks to do so. (Id.).

22 As a result of the viral dissemination of the video, Plaintiff's life spiraled out of 23 control. She was harassed and bullied in school to such a degree that she started 24 skipping school and finally unenrolled to attend courses online. (Id. ¶ 455). Plaintiff

27 <sup>2</sup> The claim that MindGeek Defendants reuploaded Plaintiff's videos after they were 28 initially taken down was not expressly alleged in the SAC. Plaintiff, however, clarifies this point in her Opposition. (Opp'n at 14, 47, 51).

1 did not tell her mother about the video, and so her relationship with her mother 2 became strained, as her mother did not know why her daughter had suddenly begun to 3 skip classes. (Id.). This led to Plaintiff leaving her mother's home to move in with 4 her sister. (Id.). A year later, she moved back in with her mother, whereafter she 5 attempted to hang herself, only to be stopped by her younger sister and her mother's 6 boyfriend "who removed the power cord from her neck." (Id. ¶ 456.) Plaintiff was 7 admitted to a mental health facility in Bakersfield. (Id.) She would attempt suicide 8 several times in the ensuing years. (Id. ¶ 260).

9 Not wanting to face her family after the first suicide attempt, Plaintiff moved in 10 with a friend. (Id. ¶ 457). At her friend's house, an older man introduced Plaintiff to 11 heroin, to which Plaintiff became addicted. (Id.) To fund her heroin addiction, 12 Plaintiff—still a minor at this point—created sexually explicit videos at the older 13 man's behest, who in turn sold the videos on Craigslist and Kik app. (Id.) Some of 14 the videos were then uploaded to Pornhub and were still available on the website as 15 recently as June 2020. (Id. ¶ 458). One of the videos was titled "Teen F*cks Guy In 16 Car," and had a user tag that she was underage. (Id.) Some videos even had 17 comments about Plaintiff's young age, such as "she looks like she's f*cking 12," 18 "And she is 13?!", "she dadass looks no older than 16," "sh look s like she's 16."
19 (Id.). Plaintiff alleges that MindGeek nevertheless reviewed, accepted, optimized, 20 categorized, tagged the videos; incorporated the videos into its algorithmic playlists 21 and suggestions; uploaded the videos to its other tubesites; and placed ads alongside 22 the videos through which MindGeek earned revenue. (Id.). While MindGeek profited 23 from the CSAM featuring Plaintiff, Plaintiff was intermittently homeless or living in 24 her car, addicted to heroin, depressed and suicidal, and without the support of her 25 family. (Id. ¶ 460.)

26 2. MindGeek's Business Practices and Business Model

27 From 2013 to 2023, MindGeek was the dominant online pornography company 28 in the world. (Id. ¶ 2). MindGeek operates several pornographic websites which 1 generally fall into two general categories: (1) free “tubesites” that contain free, 2 purportedly user populated content and (2) premium “paysites” where it sells content, 3 services, and merchandises. (Id. ¶ 38).

4 MindGeek’s business model is predicated on maximizing views and driving 5 traffic to its sites. (Id. ¶ 44). Traffic and content are crucial in MindGeek’s business 6 model because greater traffic and content directly correlate to greater profit through: 7 (1) garnering and driving more traffic to MindGeek and third-party “premium” 8 paysites or services; (2) selling ad space on free sites for the services or products of 9 third parties, which generates revenue with every visit, impression, engagement, and 10 conversion; (3) selling the data of persons who use the free sites; and (4) harvesting 11 data to optimize their website content and become the top result for queries on search 12 engine like Google, which further drive traffic and content. (Id. ¶¶ 44–45, 450). In 13 other words, MindGeek is incentivized to have more content and drive traffic to 14 maximize its profit.

15 The “gold standard” for generating traffic and obtaining content is to be the top 16 result for queries on search engines like Google, which can be accomplished through 17 Search Engine Optimization (“SEO”). (Id. ¶ 45). SEO “is the science of optimizing a 18 website’s ability to garner top search rankings and depends on many factors, but most 19 prominently, content volume, how well that content is described in detail, the 20 website’s ability to capture and analyze user interactions and preferences, and traffic.” 21 (Id.). In service of its SEO, MindGeek proactively helps users with messaging and 22 content development to enhance the video or image’s ability to grab attention. (Id.
23 ¶ 40). For example, MindGeek provides instructions on “how to succeed” and 24 maximize attention with suggested titles, descriptions and categories that MindGeek’s 25 SEO analysis has determined most effectively draw attention to particular types of 26 content and better reach their intended audience. (Id.). MindGeek’s goes even further 27 by having its own formatters review and modify the presentation of the videos and 28 images as they deem appropriate, including the titles, tags and categories, as well as

1 the videos themselves. (Id.). MindGeek combines posted content with other, 2 similarly described content and recommends it to users in the form of proposed 3 searches or playlists to further drive attention and traffic. (Id.). Finally, MindGeek 4 itself uploads content to its other websites, at times as a matter of course. (Id. ¶ 43).

5 Disturbingly, CSAM drives web traffic. In 2020, the National Center for 6 Missing and Exploited Children (“NCMEC”) produced a report describing the 7 “insatiable demand” for CSAM between 1998 to 2019, with 8.4 million such videos
8 posted online in 2018. (Id. ¶ 54). The same is true for other forms of nonconsensual 9 content including adult sex trafficking, rape, and revenge porn. (Id.). Plaintiff alleges 10 victims, employees, advocacy groups, law enforcement, press reports, and government 11 agencies have all made MindGeek Defendants aware that CSAM and other 12 nonconsensual materials appear on their platforms. (See, e.g., ¶¶ 99–101, 154–155, 13 197). For example, a 2020 New York Times article exposed how “modest 14 investigatory efforts easily revealed” that PornHub was “infested” with videos 15 depicting “child abuse and nonconsensual violence.” (Id. ¶ 307).

16 Despite being aware the ubiquitousness of CSAM and other nonconsensual 17 content on its sites, MindGeek maintained what Plaintiff describes as an “unrestricted 18 content” business model to feed MindGeek’s “singular priority of using SEO to be the 19 top search engine website result in any porn related search.” (Id. ¶¶ 56, 57, 110).
20 Under this model, MindGeek allegedly “knowingly and intentionally solicited, 21 optimized, and commercialized content of any kind, including child pornography and 22 other nonconsensual content, and avoided any policy, process, or technology that 23 would exclude illegal content or limit or even slow the upload of content generally to 24 its websites.” (Id. ¶ 57). Specifically, Plaintiff claims that MindGeek achieved this 25 through three knowing and intentional practices. (Id. ¶ 58).

26 First, MindGeek systematically ignored the laws in the jurisdictions in which it 27 did business by setting up “shifting, opaque, and Byzantine international corporate 28 structure” which “obscured MindGeek’s ownership and operation” in jurisdictions

1 that are known to be “havens” for tax evasion, money laundering, and with weak laws 2 and enforcement related to pornography. (Id. ¶ 58–66).

3 Second, MindGeek knowingly and intentionally created a faux “moderation” 4 process that was “hopelessly under-staffed [and] under-resourced,” which consisted of 5 an exclusively human moderation team of no more than 30 untrained, minimum wage 6 contractors in Cypress to review 700-1200 videos a day. (Id. ¶¶ 58, 67, 73). Even 7 worse, this team was not only understaffed, but also perversely incentivized: they 8 were offered bonuses that depended on the number of videos they approved for 9 upload. (Id. ¶ 79 (emphasis in the original)). Thus, despite touting that every video 10 was reviewed and screened by a moderator prior to it being available on MindGeek’s 11 website, (Id. ¶¶ 67-80, 103, 471), these so-called moderators were not actually tasked 12 with excluding CSAM and other nonconsensual content but rather proactively 13 attracting, optimizing, and monetizing it, while also masking it from authorities by 14 “scrubb[ing]” words in the titles and tags that unequivocally indicated criminality.” 15 (Id. ¶¶ 58, 74–77). In other words, while providing a “public veneer of legality,” the 16 real goal for these moderators was to let as much content as possible go through, 17 including CSAM and nonconsensual materials, to maximize revenue. (Id. ¶ 79, 101).
18 Consequently, Plaintiff alleges that MindGeek never verified the age, identity, and the 19 consensual nature of the videos uploaded onto their sites. (Id. ¶¶ 205, 295, 297).
20 They also clearly underreported CSAM to NCMEC. (Id. ¶ 99–100). Until 2020, 21 MindGeek purportedly never voluntarily made a single legally required disclosure to 22 authorities in the United States or Canada. (Id. ¶ 99). With little policing done by 23 MindGeek, it was largely up to the victims to flag, report, and request takedown of 24 illicit content to MindGeek. These victims, however, were often met with delay 25 tactics and/or stonewalling, especially if the content sought to be removed was 26 “performing well.” (Id. ¶ 88). The delay would permit MindGeek to preserve the use 27 of content as long as possible so that it could continue analyzing a well performing, 28 albeit illegal, video so that MindGeek could refine its algorithms to push similar

1 content. (Id.). If and when the illegal videos were successfully removed, MindGeek 2 only disabled the video but kept the webpage with its title, description, tags, and 3 comments to that video so that it would still continue to increase its SEO and users 4 searching for such content could be directed to similar content that were not disabled.
5 (Id. ¶¶ 90, 96). Moreover, because MindGeek’s website allowed users to download 6 videos, removed videos were often reuploaded, requiring victims to constantly 7 monitor for a reposting of their videos. (Id. ¶ 137). Perhaps, most disturbingly, 8 Plaintiff alleges that MindGeek systematically and surreptitiously reuploaded removed 9 content that it had been forced to disable. (Id. ¶ 97).

10 Third, MindGeek proactively used its extensive SEO technology to curate 11 CSAM and other nonconsensual content by further “optimizing” its descriptions, tags, 12 titles, and video formats and arranging recommended searches to find, and curate 13 playlists of, such content, even though it had the capability and the technology to 14 exclude nonconsensual or other banned content. (Id. ¶¶ 58–59, 67–68, 106–107). For 15 example, MindGeek directed users to use up to 16 tags that describe the video and 16 performers; select up to 8 relevant categories, and where applicable, use niche specific 17 categories to ensure the content would reach the “right” fans; and write creative titles 18 that described the scene. (Id. ¶ 114). Amongst the “preexisting” categories that a user 19 could select for a video were categories such as “teen,” “school,” “babysitter,” and 20 “old/young”—all categories that purportedly targeted views who are interested in 21 CSAM. (Id. ¶¶ 113–114). And on the page explaining the video categories, 22 MindGeek represented that “Teen” is one of the most popular categories. (Id.). In 23 addition to providing guidance to the users, MindGeek’s own formatters added and 24 edited content, including the tags and categories. (Id. ¶ 115). They would also create 25 a graph or timeline underneath the videos to help viewers identify and quickly 26 advance to various levels of sexual activity within the video. (Id. ¶ 116). They also 27 created thumbnails for the videos on MindGeek’s tubesites, some of which were 28 created from CSAM videos. (Id. ¶ 118). To reach their intended audience, MindGeek

1 would edit advertisements on its websites to frequently highlight terms such as “girls,” 2 “boys,” “broken teens,” and “twink,” which are terms that promote the creation, use 3 and viewing of CSAM and “encouraged for use by MindGeek.” (Id. ¶ 120).
4 MindGeek’s platforms even allowed advertisers to build campaigns around keywords 5 like “13yearoldteen” and “not18”; indeed, they were even allowed to target ads to 6 people searching the term “child rape” in languages other than English. (Id. ¶ 121).
7 The result meant that MindGeek would retain its position as the top search result for 8 all porn searches, including CSAM and nonconsensual content. (Id. ¶ 123).
9 Accordingly, Plaintiff alleges that MindGeek’s sites contain a trove of obvious and 10 easily accessible CSAM. Plaintiff alleges that “in just few minutes of basic searches, 11 users” could seemingly find countless videos clearly depicting child sexual assault or 12 exploitation, where titles, descriptions, and tags bluntly describe the illicit nature of 13 the videos. (Id. ¶ 125.)

14 B. Procedural Background

15 On June 17, 2021, named Plaintiff Serena Fleites and Plaintiffs Jane Does No. 1 16 through 33 filed this action bringing numerous causes of actions against Defendants 17 MindGeek S.A.R.L., MG Freesites, Ltd., MindGeek USA, Inc., MG Premium, Ltd., 18 RK Holdings USA, Inc., MG Global Entertainment, Inc., TrafficJunky, Inc., Bernd
19 Bergmair, Feras Antoon, David Tassillo, Corey Urman, Visa, Inc., Colbeck Capital 20 unnamed does 1 through 10, and Bergmair unnamed does 1 through 10. (Compl., 21 Docket No. 1). On February 10, 2022, the Court granted Defendants’ motion to sever 22 Plaintiffs and ordered Plaintiff Fleites to file a First Amended Complaint (“FAC”) 23 with her continuing as the only named plaintiff in this action and dismissed Plaintiffs 24 Jane Does No. 1 through 33 without prejudice. (Docket No. 119). On March 21, 25 2022, Plaintiff filed a FAC consistent with the Court’s February 10, 2022, order.
26 (FAC, Docket No. 124, Ex. 124-3). On May 23, 2022, Defendants filed motions to 27 dismiss Plaintiff’s FAC. (Docket Nos. 135–140). On July 29, 2022, Judge Carney
28 granted in part and denied in part Visa’s motion to dismiss Plaintiff’s First Amended

1 Complaint. (FAC Visa Order, Docket No. 166). Judge Carney also ordered the 2 MindGeek Defendants and the Individual Defendants to submit to jurisdictional 3 discovery and granted Plaintiff leave to amend her complaint after jurisdictional 4 discovery was complete. (FAC MindGeek Order, Docket No. 167). Accordingly, 5 Judge Carney denied the MindGeek Defendants and the Individual Defendants' 6 motions to dismiss in light of the "near certainty that Plaintiff will file a Second 7 Amended Complaint at the close of jurisdictional discovery." (Id. at 8).

8 On May 23, 2024, Plaintiff filed her Second Amended Complaint. (SAC, 9 Docket. No. 385). On August 30, 2024, MindGeek Defendants filed a Motion to 10 Dismiss Plaintiff's SAC. (Docket No. 440). On October 31, 2024, Plaintiff filed an 11 Omnibus Opposition to Defendants' Motions to Dismiss, including MindGeek's 12 Motions to Dismiss (Opp'n, Docket No. 477), to which the MindGeek Defendants 13 filed a reply on December 6, 2024. (Reply, Docket No. 501).

14 On March 7, 2025, the Court heard oral arguments from all parties. At the 15 hearing, Plaintiff raised for the first time certain arguments and case law with respect 16 to the personal jurisdiction issue over MindGeek S.a.r.l. The Court allowed for 17 supplemental briefing on the issue. On March 21, 2025, MindGeek Defendants filed 18 their Supplemental Brief Regarding Personal Jurisdiction (MG Suppl. Br., Docket No.
19 553), to which Plaintiff filed a Reply to MindGeek Defendants' Supplemental Brief 20 on April 4, 2025 (Fleites Reply, Docket No. 573). The matter is considered fully 21 briefed.

22 II. DISCUSSION

23 Plaintiff, in her SAC, alleges 14 causes of action against the MindGeek 24 Defendants: (1) violation of Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act 25 ("TVPRA") based on a theory of direct and beneficiary liability pursuant to 18 U.S.C.
26 §§ 1591(a)(1), 1591(a)(2), 1595 (Count I); (2) conspiracy to violate the TVPRA 27 pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §§ 1594(c), 1595 (Count IV); (3) Receipt, distribution, or 28 transport of materials involving the sexual exploitation of minors in violation of 18

1 U.S.C. §§ 2252, 2255 (Count V); (4) Receipt, distribution, or transport of CSAM in 2 violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 2252A, 2255 for the transport of CSAM (Count VI); (5)
3 Public Disclosure of Private Facts (Count VII); (6) Intrusion into Private Affairs
4 (Count VIII); (7) Placing Plaintiff in False Light (Count IX); (8) Common Law
5 Misappropriation of Name and Likeness (Count X); (9) Misappropriation of Name 6 and Likeness in Violation of Cal. Civ. Code § 3344 (Count XI); (10) Distribution of 7 Private Sexually Explicit Materials in Violation of Cal. Civ. Code § 1708.85 (Count 8 XII); (11) Negligence (Count XIII); (12) violation of the UCL and FAL under the Cal.
9 Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 and 17500 (Count XIV); (13) violation of California's 10 Trafficking Victims Protection Act under Cal. Civ. Code § 52.5 (Count XV); and (14)
11 violation of civil conspiracy (Count XVI). (SAC at 150–53, 155–56, 166–71).
12 MindGeek Defendants advance multiple grounds for dismissal under 12(b)(6), lack of 13 standing; and lack of personal jurisdiction over MindGeek S.à.r.l. The Court will 14 address each argument in turn.

15 A. Legal Standard

16 Under Rule 12(b)(6), a defendant may move to dismiss for failure to state a 17 claim upon which relief can be granted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). A complaint may 18 be dismissed for failure to state a claim for one of two reasons: (1) lack of a 19 cognizable legal theory; or (2) insufficient facts under a cognizable legal theory. Bell
20 Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007); see also Mendiondo v. Centinela 21 Hosp. Med. Ctr., 521 F.3d 1097, 1104 (9th Cir. 2008). “To survive a motion to 22 dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a 23 claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 24 (2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557).

25 The court must construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the 26 plaintiff, accept all allegations of material fact as true, and draw all reasonable 27 inferences from well-pleaded factual allegations. Gompper v. VISX, Inc., 298 F.3d 28 893, 896 (9th Cir. 2002). The court, however, is not required to accept as true legal

1 conclusions couched as factual allegations. See Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. A claim is 2 considered to have “facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that 3 allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the 4 misconduct alleged.” Id. In deciding a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a court “may generally 5 consider only allegations contained in the pleadings, exhibits attached to the 6 complaint, and matters properly subject to judicial notice.” Swartz v. KPMG LLP, 7 476 F.3d 756, 763 (9th Cir. 2007).

8 B. Analysis

9 1. Section 230 of the Communication Decency Act

10 MindGeek Defendants first argue that they are immune under Section 230 of 11 the Communications Decency Act (“CDA”). (MG Mot. at 2–8). Section 230 of the 12 CDA affords Interactive Computer Service Providers (“ICSSs”) broad immunity from 13 liability for content posted to their websites by third parties. Carafano v.
14 Metrosplash.com, Inc., 339 F.3d 1119, 1123 (9th Cir. 2003). The statute immunizes 15 ICSSs when plaintiffs seek to treat them “as the publisher or speaker of any information 16 provided by another information content provider.” U.S.C. § 230(c)(1). That is, 17 Section 230 applies when a plaintiff alleges that the defendant is (1) a provider or user 18 of an interactive computer service (2) whom a plaintiff seeks to treat as a publisher or 19 speaker (3) of information provided by another information content provider. Barnes 20 v. Yahoo!, Inc., 570 F.3d 1096, 1100–01 (9th Cir. 2009). “When a plaintiff cannot 21 allege enough facts to overcome Section 230 immunity, a plaintiff’s claims should be 22 dismissed.” Dyroff v. Ultimate Software Grp., Inc., 934 F.3d 1093, 1097 (9th Cir.
23 2019). “Courts consistently have held that § 230 provides a ‘robust’ immunity,” 24 Goddard v. Google, Inc., 2008 WL 5245490, at * 2 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 17, 2008)
25 (quoting Carafano v. Metrosplash.com, Inc., 339 F.3d 1119, 1123 (9th Cir. 2003)), 26 and “that all doubts ‘must be resolved in favor of immunity.’” Id. (quoting Fair Hous.
27 Council of San Fernando Valley v. Roommates.com, LLC, 521 F.3d 1157, 1174 (9th 28 Cir. 2008)).

1       While § 230 immunity is broad, however, it is not absolute. See Barnes, 570
2 F.3d at 1100. There are several exceptions to § 230 immunity, two of which Plaintiff
3 advances here: the content provider exception and the Fight Online Sex Trafficking
4 Act (“FOSTA”) exception. (Opp’n at 53–57). Because the Court finds that Plaintiff
5 has sufficiently alleged the former exception—which would abrogate MindGeek’s § 6 230 immunity as to all of Plaintiff’s federal and state law claims, and not just 7 Plaintiff’s TVPRA claims—the Court does not address the FOSTA exception here.
8 See Doe #1 v. MG Freesites, LTD, 676 F. Supp. 3d 1136, 1159 (N.D. Ala. 2022)
9 (stating that the Court need not address or rule on parties’ FOSTA argument because 10 the court can separately find that defendants are not subject to Section 230 immunity 11 based upon on another exception).

12       It is undisputed that MindGeek is an ICS. Instead, Plaintiff argues that 13 Defendants are also acting as content providers, and, as such, cannot claim § 230 14 immunity. “[I]mmunity [under § 230] applies only if the [ICS] is not also an 15 ‘information content provider,’ which is defined as someone who is ‘responsible, in 16 whole or in part, for the creation or development of’ the offending content.” 17 Roommates.com, 521 F.3d at 1162 (citing 47 U.S.C. § 230(f)(3) (defining “information 18 content provider”)). In other words, content providers cannot use Section 230 19 immunity to escape liability for the unlawfulness of the content they create.

20       In Roommates, the Ninth Circuit held that an ICS steps into the role of an 21 information content provider “if it contributes materially to the alleged illegality of the 22 conduct.” Id. at 1168 (emphasis added). “A ‘material contribution,’ [however,] does 23 not refer to ‘merely . . . augmenting the content generally, but to materially 24 contributing to its alleged unlawfulness.’” Gonzalez v. Google, 2 F.4th 871, 892 (9th 25 Cir. 2021) (quoting Roommates, 521 F.3d at 1167–68) (emphasis in original). Thus, a 26 “website does not create or develop content when it merely provides a neutral means 27 by which third parties can post information of their own independent choosing 28 online.” Kimzey v. Yelp! Inc., 836 F.3d 1263, 1270 (9th Cir. 2016) (citation omitted).

1 Nor can providing “passive conduits” or “neutral tools for navigating websites” 2 constitute as content creation or development “absent substantial affirmative conduct 3 on the part of the website creator promoting the use of such tools for unlawful 4 purposes.” 521 F.3d at 1167 & 1174 n.37. Rather, “making a material contribution . .
5 . is ‘being responsible for what makes the displayed content allegedly unlawful.’” 6 Gonzalez, 2 F.4th at 892 (quoting Jones v. Dirty World Ent. Recordings LLC, 755 7 F.3d 398, 410 (6th Cir. 2014)).

8 Thus, in Roommates.com, the Ninth Circuit found a website provider, 9 Roommates.com, was both a service provider and a content creator when it required 10 users to elect discriminatory housing preferences. Specifically, the court there found 11 that “[b]y requiring subscribers to provide the information as a condition of accessing 12 its service, and by providing a limited set of pre-populated answers, Roommate 13 becomes much more than a passive transmitter, of information provided by others; it 14 becomes the developer, at least in part, of that information.” 521 F.3d. at 1166. By 15 contrast, in Doe v. Grindr Inc., the Ninth Circuit held that a dating app, Grindr, was 16 not a content provider because the features and functions that allowed a minor to be 17 matched with a predator based on geographic data it extracted from them, and 18 communicate with a predator, were neutral features that were meant to facilitate the 19 communication and content of all users, not just minors and predators. No. 24-475, 20 2025 WL 517817, at *3 (9th Cir. Feb. 18, 2025).

21 Applying the above standard, two cases against the same MindGeek Defendants 22 here with very similar factual allegations—one in this very district, Doe v. Mindgeek 23 USA Inc., 558 F. Supp. 3d 828 (C.D. Cal. 2021), adhered to on denial of 24 reconsideration, 574 F.Supp.3d 760 (C.D. Cal. 2021), and one in a sister district, Doe
25 #1 v. MG Freesites, LTD, 676 F. Supp. 3d 1136 (N.D. Ala. 2022)—found that 26 MindGeek was a content provider within the meaning of the § 230 exception. In Doe 27 v. MindGeek, Judge Carney there found that the MindGeek Defendants “materially 28 contributed to” the development of illegal CSAM because plaintiff’s sufficiently

1 alleged that defendants “do far more than employ neutral tools that treat videos 2 depicting child pornography the same as any other video on the platforms.” 574
3 F.Supp.3d at 770. Instead, plaintiff claimed that the same defendants at issue here 4 “solicit, review, approve and feature [illicit] videos on their platforms,” and target 5 unlawful content by “directing users to complete preference surveys, categorizing its 6 videos using coded language for child pornography to ensure that content is visible to 7 the ‘right fans,’ and instructing users how to title their videos to target individuals 8 interested in child pornography.” Id. (cleaned up). In addition, the defendants 9 purportedly took it upon themselves to “assist traffickers in anonymizing web traffic, 10 making it difficult for law enforcement to locate child pornography producers.” Id.
11 (cleaned up). In other words, the tools and functions that the defendants provided 12 “call[ed] directly for child pornography” by “specify[ing] and prompt[ing] the type of 13 content” at issue. Id. (cleaned up).

14 In Doe #1 v. MG Freesites, the Northern District of Alabama, finding Doe v.
15 MindGeek persuasive, also found that MindGeek defendants were content providers 16 based on allegations that defendants “encourage and materially contribute to the 17 development, optimization, and advertising of CSAM on Pornhub.” 676 F.Supp.3d at 18 1162. Specifically, the Alabama court found that allegations that defendants 19 “themselves generate[d] tags, categories, and keywords that users wishing to post 20 CSAM videos can use, and in fact are encouraged to use, to maximize views, such 21 as “teen,” “abused teen,” and “middle school girls”; created thumbnails of CSAM videos 22 and “timelines for viewers to jump around to certain labeled scenes in videos 23 depicting CSAM”; “employ[ed] coded language for CSAM content to ensure that 24 such content is visible to users who search for it;” and “control[ed] the content in each 25 video through extensive instructions to uploaders including the type of content 26 viewers wish to see and the sex acts to take place” amounted to “tools [that they] 27 themselves function in a way to direct users to CSAM in particular.” Id. 1162–63.

1       The Court finds the two cases persuasive. Here, Plaintiff claims that the 2 MindGeek Defendants, for the purpose of optimizing content for the SEO, themselves 3 generated and suggested preexisting categories and tags to uploaders that specifically 4 targeted viewers who are interested in CSAM. (SAC ¶¶ 113–114). In their “How to 5 Succeed” guideline, MindGeek explained how “Teen” was one of the most popular 6 categories that a user could select to attract viewers. Moreover, “for maximum 7 effect,” MindGeek employees added and edited the content themselves such as 8 highlighting terms that are known to promote the creation, use, and viewing of CSAM 9 such as “girls,” “boys,” “broken teens,” and “twink.” (Id. ¶¶ 115, 117, 120). Further, 10 Plaintiff alleges that MindGeek formatters “scrubbed” words in titles and tags that 11 unequivocally indicated criminality to shield illicit videos from law enforcement and 12 prevent their removal. (Id. ¶¶ 76–77). Taking Plaintiff’s allegations as true, the Court 13 found that Defendants’ tools and guidelines themselves prompted and encouraged 14 CSAM and other nonconsensual content, thereby contributing materially to the illegal 15 content. MG Freesites, 676 F.Supp.3d at 1163.

16       MindGeek Defendants point the Court to Doe v. WebGroup Czech Republic, 17 a.s., et al., No. 2:21-cv-02428-SPG-SK, ECF 205 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 21, 2025), a recent 18 case from this district, as persuasive authority to compel a different outcome. (MG 19 Suppl. Br. At 2-4). There, the court assessed whether § 230 barred plaintiff’s sex-20 trafficking claims against defendants whose business model included “promoting and 21 encouraging CSAM, hosting voluminous CSAM on their websites, failing to moderate 22 and cull out illegal content, profiting from CSAM, and revenue-sharing with 23 uploaders of CSAM.” WebGroup, ECF 205 at 6 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 21, 2025). In 24 support of her material contribution argument, the plaintiff offered as examples 25 several factual allegations including: “[d]efendants’ creation of advertisement based 26 on data indicating CSAM; sharing of profits with sex trafficking users; use of VPNs to 27 anonymize web traffic and evade law enforcement; [] creation of thumbnails, titles, 28 tags, keywords, search terms, and categories indicative of CSAM;” and the “create[ion

1 of] guidelines which permit, promote, and encourage sex trafficking.” Id. at 9; Doe v.
2 WebGroup Czech Republic, a.s., 2024 WL 3533426, at *7 (C.D. Cal. July 24, 2024).
3 Based on these facts, the court ultimately concluded that defendants’ online tools that 4 plaintiff challenged did not rise to the level of promotion and encouragement of 5 CSAM. Id.

6 Notwithstanding the fact that WebGroup is not controlling precedent, the Court 7 agrees that the facts in WebGroup present facts similar to those presented in this 8 instant action. As the court acknowledged in WebGroup, however, the “scope of 9 § 230(c)(1) immunity doctrine has ‘yielded mixed results’” as it presents ““a difficult 10 and complex issue that requires case-specific, and indeed claim-specific, analysis 11 . . . .”” Id. at 6 (quoting Calise v. Meta Platforms, Inc. 103 F.4th 732, 736, 739 (9th 12 Cir. 2024)). The Court finds that there are sufficiently distinguishable facts that limit 13 WebGroup’s persuasiveness in this matter. First, with respect to the alleged 14 guidelines that promoted and encouraged sex trafficking, the court in WebGroup 15 found that the plaintiff there failed to present allegations to show exactly “how any 16 such guideline specifically promotes illegal conduct.” WebGroup, 2024 WL 3533426, 17 at *8. Plaintiff here specifically states that MindGeek’s page explaining video 18 categories expressly informs uploaders that “Teen” is one of its most popular 19 categories, despite knowing that the term attracts and encourages CSAM. (SAC ¶ 20 114).

21 Second, the court in WebGroup, in finding that the “existence of titles, tags, key 22 words, search terms, and categories indicative of CSAM” still constituted “standard 23 publishing function or neutral tool made available to all third parties seeking to upload 24 material onto Defendants’ website,” noted that plaintiff did not deny that most tags 25 and keywords in use on defendants’ websites were user-generated. WebGroup, 2024
26 WL 3533426, at *8. In stark contrast, Plaintiff here alleges that MindGeek employees 27 themselves add and edit tags and categories to the videos that specifically target 28 viewers who are interested in CSAM. (SAC ¶¶ 113–115).

1       Finally, unlike WebGroup where the only allegation relating to tools to evade 2 law enforcement was defendants' use of VPNs to anonymize web traffic, which 3 seemingly applied to the general user population, 2024 WL 3533426, at *8, here, 4 Plaintiff has alleged that MindGeek formatters specifically targeted CSAM and 5 "scrubbed" words in titles and tags that were blatant red flags of criminality to shield 6 the illicit videos from law enforcement and prevent their removal. (SAC ¶¶ 75–76).
7 Such "affirmative conduct" and guidelines go beyond being a "passive transmitter of 8 information provided by others." Roommates, 521 F.3d at 1166, 1174 n.37. Even 9 accepting MindGeek Defendants' argument that all of MindGeek's platform features 10 and functions are mere "neutral search tools or algorithms" that may be "misused by 11 bad actors," Plaintiff here has sufficiently alleged that MindGeek Defendants are the 12 "bad actors" themselves, misusing their own tools to aid in the production and 13 proliferation of CSAM. MG Freesites, 676 F.Supp.3d at 1163. The Court thus finds 14 that this is a case different in kind than Webgroup.

15       At oral argument, MindGeek urged the Court to read the SAC in ways to make 16 it more like Webgroup. Specifically, MindGeek argued that, because Plaintiff's 17 videos were CSAM when they were created and uploaded, the things MindGeek is 18 alleged to have done post-upload cannot constitute "material contribution" to the 19 CSAM. MindGeek further argued that the Complaint insufficiently alleged that 20 viewing of Plaintiff's videos by a MindGeek employee would create knowledge on 21 the employee's part that Plaintiff was underaged, for example if the video only 22 included "Plaintiff's calf." MindGeek also argued that the SAC was not specific 23 enough as to what MindGeek actually did, using ambiguous terms such as "curate."
24 As to the first argument, the Court finds that the Complaint sufficiently alleges that 25 MindGeek itself, not its users, engaged in acts which was specifically designed to 26 drive traffic to Plaintiff's videos, thereby "materially contributing" to the value of the 27 CSAM. (See SAC ¶¶ 58–59, 67–68, 106–107, 114-125). As to the second argument, 28 the Court finds this argument to make a factual challenge inappropriate for this Court

1 to visit at the Motion to dismiss stage. As to the third argument, the Court finds the 2 descriptions in the SAC of MindGeek’s conduct are sufficient to satisfy notice 3 pleading standards.

4 MindGeek Defendants argue that even if the Court were to find that Plaintiff’s 5 general allegations are enough to overcome the § 230 immunity, § 230 still bars 6 Plaintiff’s claims as it specifically relates to her because she fails to show that 7 MindGeek “created or developed the particular [content] at issue.” (MG Mot. at 4 8 (citing Carafano v. Metrosplash.com, Inc., 339 F.3d 1119, 1125 (9th Cir. 2003); Fed.
9 Agency of News LLC v. Facebook, Inc., 432 F. Supp. 3d 1107, 1118 (N.D. Cal.
10 2020)). In other words, Plaintiff has not sufficiently alleged how MindGeek 11 materially contributed to the creation and development of the two videos of Plaintiff 12 that were uploaded by her ex-boyfriend and the unnamed older man. (Id.).

13 The Court disagrees. In the SAC, Plaintiff claims that MindGeek reviewed, 14 uploaded, categorized, tagged, optimized for user preference and disseminated the 15 videos of Plaintiff. (SAC ¶ 449). MindGeek also purportedly uploaded the 16 optimized, tagged, and categorized video to its other tubesites. (Id.). While the Court 17 agrees that Plaintiff’s pleadings as to MindGeek’s involvement in the videos as 18 specific to her leave more to be desired, the Court finds that these allegations paired 19 with the general allegations found in the rest of the SAC detailing MindGeek’s tools 20 that are not neutral in nature but rather encourage criminality are sufficient at this 21 stage of the litigation when all reasonable inferences are drawn in favor of Plaintiff.
22 Gompper, 298 F.3d at 896; see also Mendiondo v. Centinela Hosp. Med. Ctr., 521 23 F.3d 1097 (9th Cir. 2008) (noting that plaintiff need not plead with particularity but 24 need to only meet the standard of notice pleading); Gregory Vill. Partners, L.P. v.
25 Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 805 F. Supp. 2d 888, 895 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (explaining that 26 notice pleading only requires a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the 27 pleader is entitled to relief and need not provide specific facts as long as it provides 28 defendant fair notice of the claim and the grounds upon which it rests). The Court

1 thus finds that MindGeek Defendants are not entitled to immunity under § 230 of the 2 CDA given the allegations in the SAC.

3 2. Violation of TVPRA pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §§ 1591, 1595 (Count I)

4 Title 18, United States Code, Section 1595 provides a private right of action to 5 victims of violations of 18 U.S.C. § 1591. 18 U.S.C. § 1595(a). Section 1591 6 criminalizes two categories of actors involved in a sex trafficking venture: 7 perpetrators of trafficking (“direct liability”), or those who knowingly benefit 8 financially from trafficking (“beneficiary liability”). Plaintiff brings claims based on 9 both theories against MindGeek.

10 a. Direct Liability under § 1591(a)(1)

11 Section 1591(a)(1) (“direct liability”) imposes criminal liability on anyone who 12 “knowingly . . . recruits, entices, harbors, transports, provides, obtains, advertises, 13 maintains, patronizes, or solicits by any means a person . . . knowing . . . that the 14 person has not attained the age of 18 years and will be caused to engage in a 15 commercial sex act.” 18 U.S.C. § 1591(a)(1). A “commercial sex act” is “any sex 16 act, on account of which anything of value is given to or received by any person.” Id.
17 § 1591(e)(3).

18 MindGeek argues that this claim must be dismissed on the grounds that the 19 “SAC offers not a single fact suggesting that MindGeek” committed any such acts in 20 violation of Section 1591(a)(1) with respect to Plaintiff. (MG Mot. at 9, 16). Rather, 21 Plaintiff specifically attributes these actions to her ex-boyfriend and the unidentified 22 party who uploaded the CSAM video onto Pornhub. (Id.).

23 The Court agrees. There are no facts in the SAC that suggest MindGeek acted 24 as a primary violator with respect to Plaintiff, and Plaintiff’s repeat of the statutory 25 language without further support is the definition of conclusory that cannot pass 26 muster on a motion to dismiss. (See SAC ¶ 467). Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250
27 F.3d 668, 679 (9th Cir. 2001). Notably, Plaintiff fails to address Defendants’ 28 challenges to direct liability or even mention direct liability in her opposition. (See

1 generally Opp'n at 5–19). The only theory that can potentially be gleaned from 2 Plaintiff's SAC is that MindGeek “advertised” Plaintiff. (See SAC ¶ 522). Judge 3 Carney, however, already expressly rejected this theory in dicta on the grounds that 4 Plaintiff failed to allege that “her videos were posted in the form of an advertisement 5 to users that she might be available for future sex acts.” (FAC Visa Order at 18).
6 Because Plaintiff has failed to offer any new theories or allegations that would require 7 a departure from Judge Carney's conclusion, the Court GRANTS MindGeek
8 Defendants' motion to dismiss with respect to the claim arising from Section 9 1591(a)(1) with prejudice. See Nat'l Funding, Inc. v. Com. Credit Counseling Servs., Inc., 817 F. App'x 380, 385 (9th Cir. 2020) (affirming dismissal where the amended 11 complaint “failed to cure the deficiencies explicitly identified by the district court in 12 its prior order”); Bonin v. Calderon, 59 F.3d 815, 845 (9th Cir. 1995) (emphasizing 13 that futility of amendment can, by itself, justify denial of leave to amend).

14 b. Beneficiary Liability under § 1591(a)(2)

15 Section 1595(a) permits civil victims to bring a claim under the beneficiary 16 liability theory against anyone who “knowingly benefits . . . from participation in a 17 venture which that person knew or should have known” was engaged in sex 18 trafficking. 18 U.S.C. § 1595(a). In contrast to Plaintiff's Section 1591(a)(1) 19 argument, Judge Carney has previously concluded, in dicta, that Plaintiff had 20 “comfortably stated a claim under section 1591(a)(2) against MindGeek.” (FAC Visa 21 Order at 18). This Court agrees.

22 Here, Plaintiff claims that MindGeek knew that there were troves of CSAM and 23 nonconsensual content on their platforms but nevertheless, adopted and executed an 24 “unrestricted content” business model that embraced such illicit content for the 25 purpose of maximizing profit. (See, e.g., SAC ¶¶ 2, 56–58, 71, 148–152). Plaintiff 26 argues that despite having the technology to monitor and screen out illegal content, 27 MindGeek deployed their employees, tools and guidelines in such a way to prompt 28 and encourage the proliferation of CSAM and other nonconsensual content. (Id.

¶¶ 58–59, 67–68, 106–107). Specifically, MindGeek had a woefully understaffed moderating team who were incentivized by MindGeek to upload rather than screen out content, including illicit content. (Id. ¶¶ 74, 162). These moderators purportedly reviewed every video prior to upload and despite the videos and images clearly depicting and indicating CSAM, they posted them to their platforms. (Id. ¶¶ 67–80, 471). Moreover, MindGeek employees themselves optimized and edited the videos to garner more views, including by highlighting content and adding tags known to attract CSAM viewers and scrubbing blatant red flags of criminality to shield the videos from law enforcement. (Id. ¶¶ 40, 74–78, 115–118). MindGeek also allegedly stonewalled and delayed the removal of illicit content on their platform when presented with takedown request from victims. (Id. ¶¶ 88–94, 100, 156). Even worse, MindGeek would also reupload content that it had been forced to disable. (Id. ¶ 97; Opp'n at 14). All the while, MindGeek placed alongside every video, including CSAM and nonconsensual content, advertisements that brought in revenue with every page view, impression, conversion and engagement. (Id. ¶ 450).

With respect to Plaintiff specifically, Plaintiff alleges that her underage was apparent in the videos featuring Plaintiff not only from the image itself but also from the titles—“13-Year-Old Brunette Shows Off For The Camera” and “Teen F*cks Guy In Car”—and user tags. (SAC ¶¶ 448, 458). Yet, consistent with MindGeek’s overall business model and practice, a MindGeek employee reviewed the videos—as they purportedly do with every video prior to making it publicly available on their websites—and allowed the videos to be posted on Pornhub. (Id. ¶ 449). In addition, after making a seemingly apparent CSAM video on its websites publicly available, a MindGeek formatter also “categorized, tagged, optimized for user preferences, and disseminated the images, tags and video depicting” an underaged Plaintiff; “uploaded the optimized, tagged, and categorized video to its other tubesites;” and “incorporated it into its algorithmic playlists and suggested videos.” (Id. ¶¶ 449, 458). MindGeek Defendants then made revenue off her videos through the advertisements appearing

1 next to the videos. (Id. ¶¶ 450, 458). When Plaintiff eventually discovered the first 2 video of her when she was 13-years old and contacted MindGeek to inform them that 3 the video constituted CSAM, MindGeek took two weeks to respond and then another 4 two weeks to remove the video from the website. (Id. ¶ 451). During that period, the 5 video not only continued to gain views from which MindGeek continued to profit 6 through advertisements, but it was also downloaded and uploaded countless times.
7 (Id. ¶¶ 451–452). Each reupload was allegedly reviewed, accepted, optimized, 8 categorized, tagged, and uploaded to other tubesites by MindGeek. (Id. ¶ 452). And 9 each time Plaintiff requested a takedown of the video, MindGeek stalled the removal 10 of the video by requiring Plaintiff to provide photographic proof that she was the child 11 depicted in the video before removing it from its site. (Id. ¶ 453). Moreover, Plaintiff 12 alleges that MindGeek Defendants reuploaded her videos. These allegations are 13 sufficient to show that MindGeek Defendants “knowingly benefit[ed] . . . from 14 participation in a venture which that person knew or should have known” was 15 engaged in sex trafficking. 18 U.S.C. § 1595(a).

16 MindGeek Defendants advance several challenges, none of which the Court 17 finds compelling. First, MindGeek Defendants heavily rely on Does 1-6 v. Reddit, 18 Inc., 51 F.4th 1137 (9th Cir. 2022), to argue that Plaintiff has failed to meet the 19 required elements to allege a plausible beneficiary liability theory under the TVPRA.
20 (MG Mot. at 10–16; Reply at 1–4). As Defendants acknowledge, however, Reddit is a 21 case in the context of the FOSTA exception under Section 230 of the CDA, where the 22 Ninth Circuit found that the relevant standard for a plaintiff to meet to avail herself to 23 the FOSTA exception is the criminal standard of liability under Section 1591(a)(2)
24 and not the civil under Section 1595(a)(2). (Reply at 2). Reddit, 51 F.4th at 1141–43.
25 That is not applicable here. Given that Plaintiff need not rely on the FOSTA 26 exception to § 230 immunity, supra at 12, the relevant issue is whether Plaintiff has

1 met the required elements for a civil beneficiary liability claim, and the Court finds 2 that she has.

3 MindGeek Defendants nevertheless claim that the Reddit case “continues to be 4 instructive” and argue, based on the Ninth Circuit’s dicta that cited to Section 1595(a) 5 of the TVPRA and stated “[i]n a sex trafficking beneficiary suit against a defendant- 6 website, the most important component is the defendant-website’s own conduct—its 7 ‘participation in the venture,’” 51 F.4th at 1142 (emphasis in the original), that the 8 Ninth Circuit essentially imposed a requirement that, in both civil and criminal 9 beneficiary liability cases, a plaintiff must meet the criminal standard for the 10 “participation in a venture” element. (Reply at 2 (citing Reddit, 51 F.4th at 1142)). In 11 other words, a plaintiff bringing a private right of action under Section 1595 of the 12 TVPRA must show that the website’s “own conduct [itself] violate[d] 18 U.S.C.
13 § 1591”—i.e., the defendant must have actually “engaged in some aspect of the sex 14 trafficking” by “assisting, supporting, or facilitating” trafficking with actual knowledge.
15 Reddit, 51 F.4th at 1142, 1145. The Court finds that such a broad interpretation of 16 Reddit is unsupported and therefore rejects MindGeek Defendants’ argument.

17 FOSTA states “[n]othing in [§ 230] shall be construed to impair or limit [] any 18 claim in a civil action brought under section 1595 of Title 18, if the conduct 19 underlying the claim constitutes a violation of section 1591 of that title. . . .” 47 20 U.S.C. § 230(e)(5)(A) (emphasis added). The dicta to which MindGeek Defendants 21 point was regarding the Ninth Circuit’s analysis as to which element of Section 22 1595(a)(2) constituted “the conduct underlying the claim” element of FOSTA, which 23 in turn, must meet the criminal standard under section 1591 for the FOSTA exception 24 to apply. Reddit, 51 F.4th at 1142. Finding that the “participation in a venture” 25 element was the “gravamen” to a civil beneficiary claim under section 1595, and thus 26 constituted the “conduct underlying the claim” element of FOSTA, the Ninth Circuit 27 concluded that a plaintiff must show that a defendant’s own participation violated the 28 criminal standard of the TVPRA to successfully invoke the FOSTA exception. Id. at 1 1142–43. When read in context, the Court does not how see this dicta can be 2 construed as the Ninth Circuit imposing the criminal standard for the “participation in 3 a venture” element to both criminal and civil beneficiary liability cases. Rather, in its 4 opinion, the Ninth Circuit repeatedly narrowed its holding to the FOSTA’s immunity 5 exception. See, e.g., id. at 1141 (“We hold that for a plaintiff to invoke FOSTA’s

6 immunity exception, she must plausibly allege that the website’s own conduct violated 7 section 1591.”) (emphasis added); id. at 1143 (“As such, a website’s own conduct 8 must violate 18 U.S.C. § 1591 for the immunity exception to apply.”) (emphasis 9 added); id. at 1145 (“On this record, it is clear that FOSTA requires that a defendant-10 website violate the criminal statute by directly sex trafficking or, with actual 11 knowledge, ‘assisting, supporting, or facilitating’ trafficking, for the immunity 12 exception to apply.”) (emphasis added).

13 The Court therefore refuses to depart from the long line of cases that states that, 14 for a defendant to be held civilly liable under section 1595 of the TVPRA, plaintiff 15 need not “demonstrate an overt act that furthered the sex trafficking aspect of the 16 venture” in order to satisfy the participation requirement under Section 1595(a). Doe
17 v. Twitter, Inc., 555 F. Supp. 3d 889, 918 (N.D. Cal. 2021), abrogated on other 18 grounds by Does 1-6 v. Reddit, Inc., 51 F.4th 1137 (9th Cir. 2022); Acevedo, 714
19 F.Supp.3d at 775; see also M.A. v. Wyndham Hotels Resorts, Inc., 425 F. Supp. 3d 20 959, 969–70 (S.D. Ohio 2019); S.Y. v. Naples Hotel Co., 476 F. Supp. 3d 1251 (M.D.
21 Fla. 2020) (conducting thorough review of cases where courts have held “actual 22 participation in the sex trafficking act itself” is not required for a civil beneficiary 23 liability claim as it would “void the ‘known or should have known’ language of 24 § 1595”). This conclusion follows from the M.A. court’s statutory construction 25 analysis, which reasoned that applying the “participation in a venture” definition from 26 § 1591, the criminal provision under the TVPRA which requires “knowingly assisting, 27 supporting, or facilitating a [TVPRA] violation,” 18 U.S.C. § 1591(e)(4), “would void 28 the ‘should have known’ language in the civil remedy” and, thus, “violate[ ] the 1 ‘cardinal principle of statutory construction that a statute ought, upon the whole, to be 2 construed so that, if it can be prevented, no clause, sentence, or word should be 3 superfluous, void or insignificant.’ M.A., 425 F. Supp. 3d at 969. Rather, 4 participation in the civil context requires only a showing of a ‘desire to promote the 5 wrongful venture’s success.’ Salesforce.com, 76 F.4th at 559. Thus, for example, 6 courts have said that in the absence of direct association with traffickers, participation 7 may be inferred by a ‘showing of a continuous business relationship between the 8 trafficker and [Defendants] such that it would appear that the trafficker and 9 [Defendants] have established a pattern of conduct or could be said to have a tacit 10 agreement.’ MindGeek, 558 F.Supp.3d at 837 (quoting M.A., 425 F. Supp. 3d at 970).

11 MindGeek Defendants claim that Plaintiff could not meet even the civil 12 standard for ‘participation in a venture’ on the ground that she failed to allege 13 sufficient facts to show a ‘continuous business relationship’ between MindGeek 14 Defendants and her specific trafficker—i.e., her ex-boyfriend and the unidentified 15 older man. (MG Suppl. Br. at 7; Tr. Oral Arg. 2:13-2:16). Pointing to a Seventh 16 Circuit case, G.G. v. Salesforce.com, Inc., MindGeek Defendants contend that facts 17 akin to the Salesforce case must be shown to establish a ‘continuous business 18 relationship.’ 76 F.4th at 565 In Salesforce, the court there found that plaintiff there 19 established a ‘continuous business relationship’ between defendant Salesforce and 20 trafficker Backpage where Salesforce entered into several lucrative contracts with 21 Backpage, Salesforce provided Backpage with ‘targeted solutions addressed to the 22 needs of Backpage’s business,’ and provided ‘active, ongoing support’ that was 23 tailored to those needs. Id. at 560.

24 The Court, however, does not accept MindGeek Defendants’ framing that 25 Salesforce—an out of circuit case—somehow sets the standard of what constitutes a 26 ‘continuous business relationship.’ Moreover, nowhere in the Salesforce decision did 27 the Seventh Circuit proclaim that it was setting such a bar. Rather, the Court finds 28 that courts in this district and others have repeatedly held that facts much closer to the

1 ones presented in the instant case were sufficient to establish a “continuous business 2 relationship” for the purpose of the “participation in a venture” element under section 3 1595. For example, in M.A., the court found the plaintiff had adequately alleged 4 participation in a venture under “§ 1595 by alleging that Defendants rented rooms to 5 people [they] knew or should have known were [sic] engaged in sex trafficking.” 6 M.A., 425 F. Supp. 3d at 971. There, the plaintiff alleged that the “[d]efendants were 7 on notice about the prevalence of sex trafficking generally at their hotels and failed to 8 take adequate steps to train staff in order to prevent its occurrence[.]” Id. at 968.
9 Additionally, the plaintiff alleged a “number of signs . . . [that] should have alerted 10 staff to her situation.” Id. The court explained that “[t]hese [alleged] acts and 11 omissions by Defendants . . . facilitated the sex trafficking venture.” Id. Similarly, in 12 Doe v. Twitter, the court found that “general allegations that Twitter enables sex 13 trafficking on its platform”—Twitter makes it hard for users to report child sexual 14 abuse material; permits large amounts of human trafficking on its platform, despite 15 having the ability to monitor it and at least constructive knowledge of its posting on 16 the platform; provides hashtags to help users find child sexual abuse material; rarely 17 removes hashtags that are associated with such material; and has a search suggestion 18 feature that makes it easier for users to find the illicit content—combined with specific 19 allegations about how Twitter failed to remove child pornography videos depicting the 20 plaintiffs, made it plausible that Twitter and the sex traffickers had a “tacit 21 agreement.” Twitter, 2021 WL 3675207, at *25.

22 Here, Plaintiff claims that MindGeek Defendants adopted a business model that 23 essentially encouraged the posting of CSAM and other nonconsensual materials by 24 traffickers by accepting and allowing their videos to be uploaded, optimizing and 25 editing the videos in a way to make it easy for users to find CSAM and shielding the 26 videos from law enforcement and removal. With respect to the specific allegations 27 concerning videos of Plaintiff, the SAC states that a MindGeek employee reviewed, 28 approved and uploaded videos of Plaintiff despite clear indications that they contained

1 CSAM. (SAC ¶¶ 58-80). Moreover, despite Plaintiff specifically reporting the video as 2 CSAM, MindGeek Defendants allegedly delayed the takedown of the videos and even 3 reuploaded the videos anonymously after their removal. The Court thus finds that 4 Plaintiff's general allegations regarding MindGeek's overall business model along with 5 Plaintiff's specific allegations as they pertain to her indicate a "tacit agreement" 6 between MindGeek and traffickers—including Plaintiff's traffickers—and a desire to 7 promote the "wrongful venture's success." M.A., 425 F. Supp. 3d at 970.

8 MindGeek Defendants argue that even if the Court were to find that there are 9 sufficient allegations to support the participation in a venture element, Plaintiff's 10 beneficiary liability claim must still fail because Plaintiff fails to allege that MindGeek 11 "knowingly benefited" from participating in the trafficking venture. (Reply at 3).
12 While conceding that Section 1595 of the TVPRA requires Plaintiff to meet the 13 "constructive" knowledge standard, MindGeek Defendants assert that even the lower 14 mental state standard is not met here because there was not an "overwhelming 15 presence of trafficking." (Id. at 4). This argument seems to conflate two elements of 16 Section 1595(a)(2) and rather seems to be challenging the "knew or should have 17 known" element, not the "knowingly benefit" element of the claim. The Court, 18 nevertheless, will address both elements for the purpose of completeness.

19 The "knowingly benefit" element of a civil beneficiary liability claim under 20 Section 1595 "merely requires that Defendant knowingly receive a financial benefit."
21 B.M. v. Wyndham Hotels & Resorts, Inc., No. 20-CV-00656-BLF, 2020 WL 4368214, 22 at *4 (N.D. Cal. July 30, 2020); Salesforce.com, 76 F.4th at 564 ("as the statutory text 23 clearly dictates, where the defendant is simply aware that it is benefiting, that is 24 enough"); Acevedo, 713 F. Supp. 3d at 776 ("Knowingly benefit" only requires that 25 defendants knowingly received a financial benefit from the relationship, not that the 26 trafficker provided any benefit because defendants facilitated in the sexual 27 misconduct). The "benefit received" need not derive directly from the trafficking.
28 B.M., 2020 WL 4368214, at *4. As the court explained in B.M., such an interpretation

1 “improperly reads a requirement for actual knowledge of criminal sex trafficking into 2 the civil statute and reads out the should have known language.” Id.; see also 3 Salesforce.com, 76 F.4th at 565 n.20 (noting that quid pro quo requirement “has been 4 rejected by virtually every other court). Plaintiff alleges that MindGeek Defendants 5 monetized the postings of videos of CSAM and other nonconsensual content, 6 including videos of her, through advertisement revenue, fee-based subscription 7 services, and selling user data. (See e.g., SAC ¶¶ 44, 452, 458). The Court therefore 8 finds that Plaintiff plausibly alleged that MindGeek Defendants knowingly received 9 benefits from the trafficking venture.

10 The “known or should have known” language requires Plaintiff to demonstrate 11 Defendants’ constructive knowledge as to the venture’s general violation of Section 12 1591. MindGeek, 558 F.Supp.3d at 836; see also Reddit, 51 F.4th at 1141 13 (distinguishing sections 1595 and 1591 and explaining that unlike civil liability under 14 1595, to be held criminally liable as a beneficiary, a defendant must have actual 15 knowledge of the trafficking). Pointing to G.G. v. Salesforce.com, Inc., and Doe v.
16 Deutsche Bank, MindGeek Defendants argue that because there was a lack of a 17 venture that was “publicly and notoriously engaged in sex trafficking activity to a 18 significant degree,” the Court cannot impute constructive knowledge to MindGeek 19 “on the basis of a comparatively small amount of allegedly illegal user-generated 20 content.” (Reply at 3–4).<sup>3</sup> MindGeek Defendants’ attempt to again cherry pick high 21 profile cases and set it as the standard is unpersuasive and not rooted in the applicable 22 law. The mental state that MindGeek Defendants seek to impose here is much closer 23 to “willful blindness” or at least “reckless disregard.” See Glob.-Tech Appliances, Inc.

24
25 <sup>3</sup> G.G. v. Salesforce.com, Inc., was a case where the plaintiffs brought a beneficiary 26 liability claim against Salesforce for allegedly facilitating Backpage—a platform 27 which had been “publicly identified” as “the biggest and most notorious sex 28 trafficking and pimping website” as early as five years before it first contracted with Salesforce. 76 F.4th at 549, 554. Doe v. Deutsche Bank involved bank funding of

v. SEB S.A., 563 U.S. 754, 769–70 (2011) (explaining that a “willfully blind defendant is one who takes deliberate actions to avoid confirming a high probability of wrongdoing and who can almost be said to have actually known the critical facts” while a “reckless defendant is one who merely knows of a substantial and unjustified risk of such wrongdoing”). But that is not the standard. The “should have known” language invokes a negligence standard, not a willful blindness or a reckless disregard standard. Acevedo, 714 F.Supp.3d at 780; M.A., 425 F. Supp. 3d at 965; see also Glob.-Tech Appliances, 563 U.S. at 770 (2011).

Thus, courts across districts have consistently found that the constructive knowledge standard was met based on sex trafficking ventures that were much less notorious than the ones presented in either the Salesforce case or the Deutsche Bank case. See, e.g., M.A., 425 F. Supp. 3d at 965–69; Acevedo, 714 F.Supp.3d at 781; Doe (L.M.) v. 42 Hotel Raleigh, LLC, No. 5:23-CV-235-FL, 2024 WL 4204906, at *6 (E.D.N.C. Sept. 16, 2024); A.B. v. Marriott Int'l, Inc., 455 F. Supp. 3d 171, 192–94 (E.D. Pa. 2020); M.L. v. craigslist Inc., No. C19-6153 BHS-TLF, 2020 WL 5494903, at *6 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 11, 2020). For example, in M.A., plaintiff there was a victim of sex trafficking that occurred at hotels owned by the defendant, and she sued under Sections 1595(a) and 1591(a)(2) of the TVPRA based on the theory that the hotel chain benefited from the rental of the rooms where she was trafficked and knew or should have known that trafficking was occurring there based on various signs of sex trafficking that should have been obvious to hotel staff. 425 F.Supp.3d at 962. Specifically, plaintiff alleged that her traffickers frequently paid in cash, requested rooms near exit doors, refused housekeeping services, and left “an extraordinary number” of used condoms in the trash cans; the same staff worked at hotels where plaintiff was trafficked for multiple days or weeks in succession; plaintiff’s trafficker routinely escorted her in view of the front desk; staff ignored plaintiff’s pleas and screams for help; and defendant’s hotel locations were in areas “known for sex trafficking.” Id. at 967. The Court found that these allegations, while not sufficient to

1 demonstrate actual knowledge, were sufficient to demonstrate negligence where 2 “[d]efendants were on notice about the prevalence of sex trafficking generally at their 3 hotels and failed to take adequate steps to train staff in order to prevent its 4 occurrence.” Id.

5 Here, Plaintiff alleges that there is a proliferation of CSAM and nonconsensual 6 content on Defendants’ platform such that a simple search produced flood of results of 7 illicit videos and images. (See, e.g., SAC ¶¶ 123–124, 290, 307). MindGeek was 8 purportedly made aware of the issue by victims, employees, advocacy groups, law 9 enforcement, press reports and government agencies during the relevant time period.
10 (See, e.g., id. ¶¶ 99–101, 154–155, 197). Despite having “actual knowledge of the 11 pervasiveness of CSAM on their platforms,” MindGeek, 558 F.Supp.3d at 837–38, 12 MindGeek not only failed to implement basic protections against posting CSAM, such 13 as age verification technology, but instead continued to employ an “unrestricted 14 content” business model that proactively embraced and monetized CSAM and 15 nonconsensual content. (SAC ¶ 109). Against this background, Plaintiff asserts that 16 the video of Plaintiff uploaded by her ex-boyfriend clearly indicated that it contained 17 CSAM based on the image itself as well the title “13-Year Old Brunette Shows Off 18 For The Camera.” (Id. ¶ 448). A MindGeek employee purportedly reviewed the 19 video prior to posting it on Pornhub. (Id. ¶ 449). The videos of Plaintiff had hundreds 20 of comments noting that Plaintiff was clearly a minor. (Id. ¶ 452). Moreover, each 21 time Plaintiff discovered an uploaded or reuploaded video of her, Plaintiff contacted 22 MindGeek Defendants directly to notify them that the video was CSAM and should be 23 taken down. (Id. ¶¶ 450–51). Yet, MindGeek Defendants delayed the removal of the 24 video and required verification from Plaintiff that she was, in fact, the victim. (Id. ¶ 25 453). The Court finds that these allegations, which the Court must take true at this 26
28

1 junction of litigation, indicate not just negligence but actual knowledge that the video 2 constituted CSAM.

3 MindGeek Defendants also raised at oral argument that Plaintiff must show 4 constructive knowledge as to the trafficking of Plaintiff specifically. (See also MG 5 Suppl. Br. At 6). This interpretation is inconsistent with the statutory language of 6 Section 1595, which only demands constructive knowledge as to the venture, not the 7 specific victim. 18 U.S.C. §§ 1591(a)(2); 1595(a); see also Deutsche Bank, 671 8 F.Supp.3d at 407 (“By the express terms of the statute, then, liability is imposed for 9 knowingly benefiting from participation in a sex-trafficking venture, not for 10 knowingly benefiting from the sex-trafficking of a particular person.”) (emphasis in 11 the original). Such a requirement would also lead to a perverse outcome where a 12 beneficiary would be more likely to escape liability with larger sex-trafficking 13 ventures with more victims. See Salesforce, 76 F.4th at 557. In any event, as 14 discussed above, the Court does find that Plaintiff has alleged sufficient facts to 15 demonstrate that MindGeek had constructive knowledge as to Plaintiff specifically.

16 Based on the foregoing, the Court finds that Plaintiff has alleged a plausible 17 civil beneficiary liability claim and therefore DENIES MindGeek Defendants’ motion 18 to dismiss Plaintiff’s claim arising under section 1595(a)(2) of the TVPRA.

19       3. Conspiracy to violate the TVPRA pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §§ 1594(c), 20       1595 (Count IV)

21 Plaintiff has asserted a claim of civil conspiracy under the TVPRA pursuant to 22 section 1594(c) against all Defendants. (SAC ¶¶ 155–56). Given that (1) the Court 23 has already found that Plaintiff has stated a viable beneficiary liability claim under 24 section 1595(a)(2) against the MindGeek Defendants and (2) the Court has found that 25 Plaintiff’s conspiracy claims fail as to all other Defendants, leaving only the 26 MindGeek Defendants remaining, the Court concludes that there is no other party with 27 whom MindGeek could have conspired as a matter of law. Because a civil conspiracy 28 claim requires at least two participants, and Plaintiff does not allege a conspiracy among MindGeek entities alone, Plaintiff cannot plausibly state a conspiracy claim against MindGeek. The court GRANTS MindGeek Defendant's motion to dismiss as to Count IV without prejudice, with leave to amend.

4. Violation of Receipt, Transport, and Distribution of CSAM pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §§ 2252, 2252A, 2255 (Count V & VI)

Counts V & VI allege that MindGeek Defendants knowingly received, possessed, and distributed CSAM depicting Plaintiff, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 2252 and 2252A. Plaintiff further alleges that MindGeek Defendants duplicated and distributed new CSAM by creating and posting new “thumbnail” images from existing videos of Plaintiff.

Section 2252A(f) provides a civil remedy to persons aggrieved by the conduct prohibited in section 2252A(a) or (b). 18 U.S.C. § 2252A(f). Section 2252A recognizes that the elements of the offense can be met through actions “by any means, including by computer” and liability for knowing distribution applies to “any CSAM”—regardless of the material’s publication status or whether it was originally created by a third party. Id. § 2252(A)(a)(2). To be held liable under Section 2252 and 2252A, a plaintiff must prove defendant’s “knowledge that the video contained sexually explicit conduct with a minor.” United States v. Ruiz-Castelo, 835 F. App’x 187, 189 (9th Cir. 2020); see also United States v. X-Citement Video, Inc., 513 U.S. 64, 78 (1994) (concluding that “the term ‘knowingly’ in § 2252 extends both to the sexually explicit nature of the material and to the age of the performers”). Actual knowledge can be established based on willful blindness, which in turns requires a showing of “deliberate actions to avoid confirming a high probability of wrongdoing.” Glob.-Tech Appliances, 563 U.S. at 769.

Relying on a Ninth Circuit decision regarding trademark infringement that held that “willful blindness requires the defendant to be aware of specific instance of infringement or specific infringers,” Y.Y.G.M. SA v. Redbubble, Inc., 75 F.4th 995, 1002 (9th Cir. 2023) (emphasis added), MindGeek Defendants argue that Plaintiff has

1 not pled sufficient facts to meet the knowledge requirement under sections 2252 and 2 2252A because Plaintiff has failed to establish that “MindGeek had actual knowledge 3 of or was willfully blind to—i.e., took deliberate action to avoid confirming—the fact 4 that Plaintiff was underage in the videos.” (MG Mot. at 17–18).

5 The Court disagrees. As discussed above with respect to the knowledge 6 requirement under civil beneficiary liability under Section 1595 of the TVPRA, supra
7 at 24–27, the Court finds that Plaintiff has alleged sufficient facts to establish actual 8 knowledge that the video of Plaintiff contained CSAM. According to Plaintiff, not 9 only was Plaintiff’s minor status apparent from the videos themselves, but the title 10 expressly called out the fact that the video was of a 13-year old. (SAC ¶ 448). Again, 11 according to the SAC, a MindGeek employee allegedly reviewed the videos depicting 12 Plaintiff as a minor prior to posting on Pornhub, as Defendants claim to do for every 13 video uploaded to their sites. (Id. ¶ 449). Moreover, Plaintiff further alleges that 14 Plaintiff contacted MindGeek Defendants directly to notify them that the videos of 15 Plaintiff constituted CSAM and nonconsensual content, but nevertheless, MindGeek 16 Defendants declined to remove the videos for weeks, reuploaded them to its other 17 tubesites, and kept a copy in their libraries and servers. (Id. ¶¶ 451–454, 461, 98; 18 Opp’n at 47). Taking these allegations as true, Plaintiff has stated a claim for relief 19 pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §§ 2252 and 2252A. This is enough to plausibly allege that 20 Defendants knowingly received, possessed and distributed CSAM. See Mindgeek, 21 558 F.Supp.3d at 843–44 (reaching same conclusion in a case against the same 22 defendants); MG Freesites, LTD, 676 F. Supp. 3d at 1167–69 (same). Therefore, 23 MindGeek’s motion is DENIED as to Counts V and VI.

24 5. Public Disclosure of Private Facts (Count VII)

25 To prove a claim for public disclosure of private facts, a plaintiff must show: 26 ““(1) public disclosure (2) of a private fact (3) which would be offensive and 27 objectionable to the reasonable person and (4) which is not of legitimate public 28 concern.”” See Doe v. Gangland Productions., Inc., 730 F.3d 946, 958 (9th Cir. 2013)

1 quoting Shulman v. Grp. W Prods., Inc., 18 Cal.4th 200, 214 (1998)). The Court finds 2 that Plaintiff has made a prima facie showing of all four elements with respect to the 3 first video that her ex-boyfriend uploaded but not the videos that the unnamed older 4 man posted. See, e.g., Michaels v. Internet Entertainment Group, Inc., 5 F. Supp. 2d 5 823, 842 (C.D. Cal. 1998) (holding privately made adult sex tapes “constitute[] a set 6 of private facts whose disclosure would be objectionable to a reasonable person”).

7 As the MindGeek Defendants note, “[a] matter that is already public or that has 8 previously become part of the public domain is not private.” Moreno v. Hanford 9 Sentinel, Inc., 172 Cal. App. 4th 1125, 1130 (Apr. 30, 2009); *see also Dinkins v.
10 Schinzel*, 362 F.Supp.3d 916 (D. Nev. 2019) (“[Defendant] cannot be held liable for 11 public disclosure of private facts when the fact that he disclosed was already readily 12 available to the public on the internet—no matter how distasteful it was to do so.”).
13 With respect to the videos that the unidentified older man coerced Plaintiff to make, 14 Plaintiff claims that he first sold the videos on Craigslist and the Kik app. (SAC 15 ¶ 458). Because by the time the videos made their way onto Pornhub, the videos were 16 already public, MindGeek Defendants cannot be held liable for public disclosure of 17 private facts as to Plaintiff’s latter videos.

18 As to Plaintiff’s first video, the Court finds that Plaintiff does have a viable 19 claim. MindGeek Defendants seek to avoid liability on the grounds that MindGeek 20 was not the publisher of the videos depicting plaintiff. (MG Mot. at 19). The Court 21 finds this argument unavailing. Here, Plaintiff claims that prior to any video 22 becoming publicly available on MindGeek’s platform, a MindGeek employee 23 reviewed and approved the upload of the video, including the video of Plaintiff. (SAC 24 ¶¶ 67, 103, 449, 452, 471). Based on these allegations, the initial sharing of the video 25 depicting Plaintiff by Plaintiff’s trafficker was limited to MindGeek Defendants alone.
26 Cf. In re Facebook, Inc., Consumer Priv. User Profile Litig., 402 F. Supp. 3d 767, 796
27 (N.D. Cal. 2019) (finding that sensitive information does not lose the label “private” 28 simply because it is shared with others on a limited basis, such as with your friends).

1 In other words, “it was not third-party conduct that rendered Plaintiff’s videos 2 publicly available.” (Opp’n at 51). It was the MindGeek Defendants, after reviewing 3 the illicit content, that allowed the videos to be posted on their website, thereby 4 making it publicly available. See, e.g., Shulman, 18 Cal.4th at 214 (liability attaches 5 to the “one who gives publicity to a matter concerning the private life of another” 6 (quoting Rest.2d Torts, § 625D)).

7 MindGeek Defendants’ reliance on Caraccioli v. Facebook, Inc., 167 F. Supp.
8 3d 1056, 1064 (N.D. Cal. 2016), aff’d, 700 F. App’x 588 (9th Cir. 2017), is 9 unavailing. Unlike the case here, there were no allegations that Facebook reviewed 10 and accepted the content at issue prior to it being posted on Facebook’s platform.
11 Rather, Facebook’s Terms of Service expressly disclaimed any control or 12 responsibility over user’s actions of Facebook or the content or information users
13 transmit or share on Facebook. Id. at 1062. The Court therefore DENIES MindGeek 14 Defendants’ motion with respect to Public Disclosure of Private Facts.

15 6. Intrusion into Private Affairs (Count VIII)

16 To prevail on a claim for intrusion into private affairs, plaintiff must 17 demonstrate two elements: “(1) intrusion into a private place, conversation or matter, 18 (2) in a manner highly offensive to a reasonable person.” Taus v. Loftus, 40 Cal. 4th 19 683, 725 (2007) (quoting Shulman, 18 Cal. 4th at 231 (1998)). As to the first element, 20 “the plaintiff must show the defendant penetrated some zone of physical or sensory 21 privacy surrounding, or obtained unwanted access to data about, the plaintiff.” Id. at 22 232. “The tort is proven only if the plaintiff had an objectively reasonable expectation 23 of seclusion or solitude in the place, conversation or data source.” As to the second 24 element, “determining offensiveness requires consideration of all the circumstances of 25 the intrusion, including its degree and setting and the intruder’s motives and 26 objectives.” Id. at 236 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

27 While Plaintiff does not clearly spell out the factual theories underlying this 28 claim and how they meet the two required elements, the Court nevertheless finds that

1 Plaintiff has pled a viable claim of intrusion into private affairs. In People v. Bollaert, 2 the defendant at issue designed a website for the specific purpose of eliciting nude 3 photographs and private information of other persons and “freely accepted” all of the 4 victim’s personal information, intended to continue to possess it, and used it for his 5 own purpose. 48 Cal. App. 4th 699, 711 (2016). The Court found that a defendant 6 who has willfully received intimate photographs from others without the victim’s 7 consent has “obtained unwanted access to data about Plaintiff” within the meaning 8 of this tort. Id. at 712. Willful receipt, in turn, need not require solicitation on the part of 9 the defendant as long as the defendant freely accepted the information and used it for 10 his own purpose. Id. at 711 (citing In re Rolando S. 197 Cal.App.4th 936, 941 11 (2011)).

13 embraced and monetized CSAM and other nonconsensual content. (See, e.g., SAC 14 ¶ 109). Plaintiff also alleges that upon receiving and reviewing the videos of Plaintiff 15 uploaded by her ex-boyfriend and reuploaded by numerous other users, MindGeek 16 Defendants accepted the video and allowed them to be posted on MindGeek’s 17 platforms for the purpose of generating revenue off of the videos (id. ¶¶ 449, 452–454, 18 458). Moreover, MindGeek then optimized the videos and reposted them to its other 19 tubesites. (Id. ¶¶ 449, 451–454). These facts indicate that MindGeek willfully 20 received the illicit videos of Plaintiff and therefore may be held liable under an 21 intrusion into private affairs cause of action. The Court therefore DENIES 22 MindGeek’s motion as to Count VII.

23       7. Placing Plaintiffs in “False Light” (Count IX)

24 To state a cause of action for false light, Plaintiffs must each plead and prove 25 (1) that the defendant disclosed (2) to one or more persons (3) information about or 26 concerning Plaintiffs that was presented as factual but that is actually false or created a 27 false impression about Plaintiffs, and (4) that the information was understood by one 28 or more of the persons to whom it was disclosed as stating or implying something that

1 would have a tendency to injure Plaintiffs. Fellows v. National Enquirer, Inc., 42
2 Cal.3d 234, 238–39 (1986).

3 Plaintiff claims that she was placed before the public in false light because 4 “viewers and at least some users of the websites, including but not limited to Pornhub, 5 may have, and likely did, believe that Plaintiff voluntarily appeared in the videos and 6 images, willingly engaged in pornography, and made money as ‘actors’ off of the 7 posting of the videos and images.” (SAC ¶ 544). Tension exists between these 8 allegations and Plaintiff’s other factual claims that are central to her case. It is not for 9 this Court to resolve those tensions at this stage of the litigation. Because Plaintiff’s 10 allegations are plausible, MindGeek’s motion to dismiss Count IX is therefore 11 DENIED.

12       8. Misappropriation of Likeness Claims (Count X & Count XI)

13       “California recognizes, in its common law and its statutes, ‘the right of a person 14 whose identity has commercial value-most often a celebrity-to control the commercial 15 use of that identity.’” Hoffman v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc., 255 F.3d 1180, 1184 (9th 16 Cir.2001) (quoting Waits v. Frito-Lay, Inc., 978 F.2d 1093, 1098 (9th Cir.1992)).

17       The aim is “to prevent others from misappropriating the economic value generated . . .
18 through merchandising of the ‘name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness of the 19 [publicity holder].’” Youngevity Int’l v. Smith, 350 F. Supp. 3d 919 (S.D. Cal. 2018) 20 (quoting Timed Out, LLC v. Youabian, Inc., 229 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1006, 177 21 Cal.Rptr.3d 773 (2014)). To sustain a misappropriation of likeness under California’s 22 common law, plaintiff must prove “(1) the defendant’s use of the plaintiff’s identity; 23 (2) the appropriation of plaintiff’s name or likeness to defendant’s advantage, 24 commercially or otherwise; (3) lack of consent; and (4) resulting injury.” Laws v.
25 Sony Music Entm’t, Inc., 448 F.3d 1134, 1138 (9th Cir. 2006) (citing Eastwood v.
26 Superior Court, 149 Cal.App.3d 409, 198 Cal.Rptr. 342, 347 (1983), superseded by 27 statute on other grounds as stated in KNB Enters. v. Matthews, 78 Cal.App.4th 362, 28 92 Cal.Rptr.2d 713 (2000)). In addition to the common law cause of action,

1 California has provided a statutory remedy for commercial misappropriation under 2 California Civil Code § 3344. The remedies provided for under California Civil Code 3 § 3344 complement the common law cause of action; they do not replace or codify the 4 common law. See Newcombe v. Adolf Coors Co., 157 F.3d 686, 691–92 (9th 5 Cir.1998). Section 3344 provides in relevant part:

6 Any person who knowingly uses another's name, voice, 7 signature, photograph, or likeness, in any manner, on or in 8 products, merchandise, or goods, or for purposes of 9 advertising or selling, or soliciting purchases of, products, 10 merchandise, goods or services, without such person's prior 11 consent . . . shall be liable for any damages sustained by the 12 person or persons injured as a result thereof.

13 Cal. Civ. Code § 3344(a). Under Section 3344, a plaintiff must prove all the elements 14 of the common law cause of action. In addition, the plaintiff must allege a knowing 15 use by the defendant as well as a direct connection between the alleged use and the 16 commercial purpose. See Eastwood, 149 Cal.App.3d at 417.

17 ““However, the general rule is that incidental use of a plaintiff's name or 18 likeness does not give rise to liability’ under a common law claim of commercial 19 misappropriation or an action under Section 3344.” Yeager v. Cingular Wireless LLC, 20 673 F. Supp. 2d 1089, 1100 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (quoting Aligo v. Time-Life Books, Inc., 21 1994 WL 715605, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 19, 1994)). “The rationale underlying this 22 doctrine is that an incidental use has no commercial value, and allowing recovery to 23 anyone briefly depicted or referred to would unduly burden expressive activity.” Id.
24 “Whether the use of a plaintiff's name or likeness falls within the incidental use 25 exception to liability is determined by the role that the use of the plaintiff's name or 26 likeness plays in the main purpose and subject of the work at issue.” Id. (internal 27 quotations and citation omitted). Courts have taken into consideration four factors: 28 “(1) whether the use has a unique quality or value that would result in commercial

1 profit to the defendant, (2) whether the use contributes something of significance, 2 (3) relationship between the reference to the plaintiff and the purpose and subject of 3 the work, and (4) the duration, prominence or reputation of the likeness relative to the 4 rest of the publication.” Id. Thus, for example, “if the mention of a plaintiff’s name 5 or likeness is brief, [but] the use stands out prominently within the commercial speech 6 or enhances the marketability of the defendant’s product or service,” the doctrine of 7 incidental use is inapplicable. Id. “A claim is [] not actionable when a plaintiff’s 8 likeness is appropriated because ‘it is published for purposes other than taking 9 advantage of his reputation, prestige, or other value associated with him.’” Id.
10 (quoting Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652C).

11 Here, Plaintiff argues that MindGeek misappropriated Plaintiff’s likeness in two 12 distinct ways by: (i) profiting from the unauthorized dissemination of Plaintiff’s 13 videos to attract users and drive traffic; and (ii) profiting from the unauthorized use by 14 placing advertisements alongside the videos of Plaintiff. (Opp’n at 52). While these 15 allegations show that MindGeek used the videos of Plaintiff to generate revenue, there 16 are no facts to support that Plaintiff’s identity, name, or likeness was particularly 17 unique or that MindGeek took advantage of the economic value specifically 18 associated with Plaintiff’s identity, name or likeness. In other words, these allegations 19 do not demonstrate MindGeek seeking to take advantage of Plaintiff’s “reputation, 20 prestige, or other value associated with [her].” Yeager, 673 F. Supp. 2d at 1100.

21 Cross v. Facebook is instructive here. There, the Court found that Plaintiff’s 22 common law and statutory misappropriation of likeness claims failed because “placing 23 unrelated ads from Facebook advertisers adjacent to the content that allegedly used 24 [plaintiff’s] name and likeness—content, [plaintiff] concedes, created by third party 25 users”—was not evidence that “Facebook used his name or likeness in any way.” Id.
26 The Court therefore finds that Plaintiff has failed to state a claim as to her 27 misappropriation of likeness under both California common law and under Section 28

1 3344 of the California Civil Code and GRANTS MindGeek's motion to dismiss as to 2 this cause of action.

3 9. Distribution of Private Sexually Explicit Materials pursuant to Cal.
4 Civ. Code § 1708.85 (Count XII)

5 California Civil Code § 1708.85 provides a private cause of action against a 6 person who intentionally distributes by any means a 7 photograph, film, videotape, recording, or any other 8 reproduction of another, without the other's consent, if 9 (1) the person knew that the other person had a reasonable 10 expectation that the material would remain private, (2) the 11 distributed material exposes an intimate body part of the 12 other person, or shows the other person engaging in an act of 13 intercourse, oral copulation, sodomy, or other act of sexual 14 penetration, and (3) the other person suffers general or 15 special damages . . . .

16 Cal. Civ. Code. § 1708.85. Section 1708.85 exempts from liability, however, a "person 17 distributing material under subdivision (a)" where "[t]he distributed material was 18 previously distributed by another person." Cal. Civ. Code section 19 1708.85(c)(6). Based on the plain language of these provisions, the Court concludes 20 Plaintiff has failed to state a claim.

21 Plaintiff's SAC makes clear that MindGeek Defendants were not the first party 22 to intentionally distribute the videos—Plaintiff's traffickers were, including Plaintiff's 23 then-boyfriend and an unnamed older man. (SAC ¶¶ 448–462). The fact that the 24 videos of Plaintiff may have first appeared on MindGeek Defendants' platform does 25 not save Plaintiff's claim.<sup>4</sup> See Doe v. Twitter, Inc., 555 F. Supp. 3d 889, 931 (N.D.
26

27 <sup>4</sup> The Court notes that Judge Carney had ruled in a related class action against the 28 same MindGeek Defendants that Plaintiff had stated a viable claim under California Civil Code § 1708.85 on the grounds that Plaintiff had plausibly alleged that videos of

1 Cal. 2021), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds and remanded sub nom. Doe
2 #1 v. Twitter, Inc., No. 22-15103, 2023 WL 3220912 (9th Cir. May 3, 2023) (finding 3 that Defendant was not liable under California Civil Code § 1708.85(a) on the 4 grounds that the users of Twitter that allegedly posted the video were the first 5 distributors). Nor does the fact that MindGeek employee allegedly reviewed the video 6 prior to the posting on MindGeek's website. (Id. ¶¶ 448, 449). The language of the 7 statute under § 1708.85 embraces a broad interpretation of the word "distribution" by 8 stating that a person may be held liable under the statute if she "intentionally 9 distributes by any means. . . ." Cal. Civ. Code § 1708.85(a). This does not require a 10 mass distribution through the internet—i.e., Plaintiff's trafficker uploading the illicit 11 video of Plaintiff onto MindGeek's platform is sufficient to constitute the first act of 12 distribution. MindGeek's subsequent posting of the video onto its websites is a 13 separate second act. The Court therefore GRANTS MindGeek's motion to dismiss 14 Count XII.

15 10. Negligence (Count XIII)

16 The elements of a negligence tort cause of action are duty, breach, causation
17 and damages. Artiglio v. Corning Inc., 18 Cal.4th 604, 614 (1998). MindGeek 18 Defendants argue that Plaintiff's negligence claim fails because she has not alleged 19 that MindGeek owed her any legal duty. The Court disagrees. As Plaintiff points out, 20 California created a statutory baseline duty under California Civil Code § 1714 which

21 Plaintiff were first distributed on Defendants' platforms. Doe v. Mindgeek USA Inc., 22 558 F.Supp.3d 828, 844 (C.D. Cal., 2021). Such holding, however, is not the "law of 23 the case." City of Los Angeles, Harbor Division, 254 F.3d at 888 (9th Cir. 2001); see also United States v. Smith, 389 F.3d 944, 949 (9th Cir. 2004) ("The law of the case 24 doctrine is 'wholly inapposite' to circumstances where a district court seeks to 25 reconsider an order over which it has not been divested of jurisdiction"). Rather, this 26 discretionary doctrine is applied "where an issue has been decided by a higher court or 27 where the court has entered a final decree or judgment." Alfasigma USA, Inc. v. First 28 Databank, Inc., 525 F.Supp.3d 1088, 1095 (N.D. Cal. 2021) (citing Askins v. United States Dep't of Homeland Security, 899 F.3d 1035, 1042-43 (9th Cir. 2018)). Because neither of those situations is presented here, the Court may freely reconsider a prior order in a related case.

1 provides that “[e]veryone is responsible, not only for the result of his or her willful 2 acts, but also for an injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care or 3 skill in the management of his or her property or person, except so far as the latter has, 4 willfully or by want of ordinary care, brought the injury upon himself or herself.” Cal.
5 Civ. Code § 1714(a); see also Social Media Cases, JCCP No. 5255, 2023 WL
6 6847378, at *23–24 (Cal. Super. Ct. Oct. 13, 2023); see also Hughes v. Apple, Inc., 7 No. 22-cv-07668-VC, 723 F.Supp.3d 693, 699–707 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2024). “This 8 statute establishes the default rule that each person has a duty ‘to exercise, in his or 9 her activities, reasonable care for the safety of others.’” Brown v. USA Taekwondo 11 10 Cal.5th 204, 214 (2021). Courts, however, can carve out exceptions to the baseline 11 duty that applies to everyone using what the Supreme Court has established as the 12 Rowland factors. Kesner v. Superior Court, 1 Cal.5th 1132, 1143 (2016); Rowland v.
13 Christian, 69 Cal.2d 108, 112–13, (1968). These factors can be generally broken 14 down into “foreseeability” factors and “public policy” considerations. Hugh, 723 15 F.Supp.3d at 701. The foreseeability factors are “the foreseeability of harm to the 16 plaintiff, the degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury, [and] the closeness 17 of the connection between the defendant’s conduct and the injury suffered.” Social 18 Media Cases, 2023 WL 6847378, at *24. The policy factors are “the moral blame 19 attached to the defendant’s conduct, the policy of preventing future harm, the extent of 20 the burden to the defendant and consequences to the community of imposing a duty to 21 exercise care with resulting liability for breach, and the availability, cost, and 22 prevalence of insurance for the risk involved.” Id. Courts should create such an 23 exception only when it is “clearly supported by public policy” and when it is possible 24 to “promulgate relatively clear, categorical, bright-line rules of law applicable to 25 general classes of cases.” Id. at 1143–44.

26 Neither Plaintiff nor MindGeek Defendants discuss the Rowland factors. The 27 Court notes however that California courts have been reluctant to create broad, 28 categorical, exception to technology or social media platforms. For example, in

1 Social Media Cases, plaintiffs brought a case against various social media platforms—2 including Facebook, Instagram, Snapchat, TikTok, and Youtube—for designing and 3 operating their business in a way that induces more use by minors, thereby creating an 4 unreasonable risk of harm of addiction, compulsive use, sleep deprivation, anxiety, 5 depression, or other physical or mental injuries. 2023 WL 6847378, at *2–3, 21. The 6 court there ultimately found that the Rowland factors did not weigh in favor of 7 Defendants and therefore the baseline duty applied.

8 Here, Plaintiff alleges that MindGeek Defendants run one of the largest porn 9 websites where there is substantial risk that CSAM and nonconsensual content will be 10 posted on their platforms. Despite this, MindGeek employed a “unrestricted content” 11 business model that proactively embraced and monetized such illicit content. The 12 Court thus finds that the foreseeability factors weigh in favor of Plaintiff.

13 As to the public policy factors, the analysis is more complicated. As discussed 14 above, there is a broad immunity under section 230 of the CDA for ICSs such as 15 MindGeek. Carafano, 339 F.3d at 1123 (9th Cir. 2003). As MindGeek Defendants 16 also note, there is a general rule that ISC do not “have a legal duty to inspect every 17 single user-generated message before it is communicated to a single person or 18 displayed to the public.” Reddit, 2021 WL 586094, at *8; Dyroff v. Ultimate Software 19 Grp., Inc., 934 F.3d 1093, 1101 (9th Cir. 2019) (“No website could function if a duty 20 of care was created when a website facilitates communication, in a content-neutral 21 fashion, of its users’ content.”); see also Doe v. MySpace, 474 F. Supp. 2d 843, 846, 22 852 (W.D. Tex. 2007) (dismissing negligence claims because Myspace did not owe a 23 legal duty to parents of a teenager who was raped to protect their daughter from 24 criminal acts “nor to institute reasonable safety measures on its website”). The Court, 25 however, already found that MindGeek Defendants here cannot avail themselves of § 26 230 immunity under the content provider exception. Supra at 18. Moreover, unlike 27 Dyroff, this isn’t just a case of a platform employing content-neutral features used by 28 bad actors. Rather, here, Plaintiff claims that MindGeek Defendants intentionally

1 adopted a business model that exacerbated the proliferation of CSAM and other 2 nonconsensual content by, among other means, employing moderators who were 3 purportedly tasked with screening out CSAM and other nonconsensual content, but 4 instead reviewed, accepted, uploaded, optimized, and modified videos of Plaintiff 5 despite knowing or at least recklessly disregarding the fact that Plaintiff was a minor.
6 (SAC ¶¶ 449-54, 457-58, 460-62). The Court therefore finds that policy 7 considerations are insufficient to overcome the baseline duty imposed under 8 California law. Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff has stated a viable claim of 9 negligence against MindGeek Defendants and therefore DENIES MindGeek's motion 10 as to Count XIII.

11                   11. Unfair Competition pursuant to Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 12                   17500 (Count XIV)

13 Plaintiff alleges that MindGeek violated the Unfair Competition Law ("UCL")
14 and False Advertising Law ("FAL"). First and foremost, MindGeek Defendants claim 15 that Plaintiff's claim under the UCL and FAL must be dismissed on grounds that 16 Plaintiff lacks statutory standing. (MG Mot. at 22). In 2004, the voters of California 17 passed Proposition 64, which restricts standing for individuals alleging UCL and FAL 18 claims to persons who "ha[ve] suffered injury in fact and ha[ve] lost money or 19 property as a result of the unfair competition." Hinojos v. Kohl's Corp., 718 F.3d 20 1098, 1103 (9th Cir. 2013), as amended on denial of reh'g and reh'g en banc (July 8, 21 2013) (citing Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17204 (UCL), 17535 (materially identical 22 standard under the FAL)). The core inquiry is whether the plaintiff has suffered 23 "economic injury . . . caused by . . . the unfair . . . practice . . . that is the gravamen of 24 the claim." Kwisket v. Superior Court, 51 Cal.4th 310, 322 (2011). Accordingly, 25 standing under the UCL and FAL is far narrower than traditional federal standing 26 requirements. Ehret v. Uber Techs., Inc., 68 F. Supp. 3d 1121, 1132 (N.D. Cal. 2014); 27 see also Troyk v. Farmers Group, Inc., 171 Cal.App.4th 1305, 1348 n.31 (2009).

1 MindGeek Defendants argue that Plaintiff's conclusory allegations that she 2 "lost money" and suffered "financial harm in the form of costs for therapy," "time 3 away from her work," and "hiring a company to assist her with her efforts investigate 4 [sic] the continued dissemination of her videos on Pornhub" are insufficient to show 5 that she suffered any actionable injury caused by any unfair business practices alleged 6 in the SAC. (MG Mot. at 22). The Court disagrees. While the UCL's focus on "loss 7 of money or property" restricts the broad range of harms that could otherwise give 8 rising to standing, the California Supreme Court in Kwisket v. Superior Court, 9 explained that there "are innumerable ways in which economic injury from unfair 10 competition may be shown" such as:

11 A plaintiff may (1) surrender in a transaction more, or 12 acquire in a transaction less, than he or she otherwise would 13 have; (2) have a present or future property interest 14 diminished; (3) be deprived of money or property to which 15 he or she has a cognizable claim; or (4) be required to enter 16 into a transaction, costing money or property, that would 17 otherwise have been unnecessary.

18 51 Cal.4th at 323 (emphasis added). Further, the court there found that "[n]either the 19 text of Proposition 64 nor the ballot arguments in support of it purport to define or 20 limit the concept of 'lost money or property'" and that it did not "supply an exhaustive 21 list of the ways in which unfair competition may cause economic harm." Id.

22 Here, Plaintiff alleges that due to MindGeek Defendants' practice of optimizing 23 and promoting CSAM videos, including Plaintiff's videos, and the lack of 24 MindGeek's own moderating processes, she was "forced to retain an investigatory 25 firm to investigate whether any of her videos were still accessible on Pornhub or other 26 pornographic sites and to facilitate takedown requests." (SAC ¶ 461). Based on the 27 definition by the Supreme Court in Kwikset, the Court finds that Plaintiff has shown 28

1 an economic injury that was caused by MindGeek Defendant's alleged unlawful 2 business practice—specifically, Plaintiff was “required to enter into a transaction, 3 costing money or property, that would otherwise have been unnecessary.” Kwikset, 4 51 Cal.4th at 323.

5 California Med. Assn. v. Aetna Health of California Inc., 14 Cal. 5th 1075 6 (2023), here is instructive. There, the California Supreme Court addressed whether 7 resources that an organization has spent to counter an unfair or unlawful practice 8 constitute “money or property” that has been “lost . . . as a result of the unfair 9 competition.” Id. at 1082. The Court ultimately concluded that the UCL’s standing 10 requirements when “an organization, in furtherance of a bona fide, preexisting 11 mission, incurs costs to respond to perceived unfair competition that threatens that 12 mission, so long as those expenditures are independent of costs incurred in UCL 13 litigation or preparation for such litigation.” Id. While Plaintiff here is not an 14 organization with a preexisting mission, Plaintiff here expended resources—money—15 to hire an investigatory firm to continually address the “hopeless whack-a-mole 16 situation” MindGeek created through their unrestricted content business model of 17 allowing Plaintiff’s videos to be downloaded and reuploaded, and at times, uploading 18 Plaintiff’s videos themselves. (FAC Visa Order at 5). The Court therefore finds that 19 Plaintiff has standing to bring a claim under the UCL and FAL.

20 The UCL prohibits unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business acts or practices.
21 Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. An “unlawful business activity” includes anything 22 that can properly be called a business practice and that at the same time is forbidden 23 by law. Walker v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 98 Cal.App.4th 1158, 1169 (2002).
24 “Under the UCL’s unlawful prong, violations of other laws are borrowed and made 25 independently actionable under the UCL.” Herron v. Best Buy Co. Inc., 924 F. Supp.
26 2d 1161, 1177 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (internal quotations omitted); Cel-Tech Commc’ns, 27 Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone Co., 20 Cal.4th 163, 180 (1999). As discussed
28 above, Plaintiff has stated a viable claim under beneficiary liability under the TVPRA

1 section 1595(a)(2); receipt, transport and distribution of CSAM pursuant to 18 U.S.C.
2 §§ 2252, 2252A, 2255; public disclosure of private facts; and intrusion into private 3 affairs. The Court therefore finds that Plaintiff has sufficiently alleged a UCL claim 4 under the unlawful prong.

5 As to Plaintiff's FAL claim, however, the Court finds that Plaintiff has failed to 6 plead a viable FAL claim. FAL makes unlawful "untrue or misleading" advertising.
7 Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500. Plaintiff has not advanced any coherent theory of 8 liability as to how MindGeek engaged in "untrue or misleading" advertising.

9 The Court therefore DENIES MindGeek's motion as to Plaintiff's UCL claim 10 but GRANTS MindGeek's motion with prejudice as to her FAL claim.

11       12. Violation of California's Trafficking Victims Protection Act
12                    pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code § 52.5 (Count XV)

13       California's Trafficking Victims Protection Act ("CTVPA") provides "[a] 14 victim of human trafficking, as defined in Section 236.1 of the Penal Code, may bring 15 a civil action" for damages or injunctive relief. Cal. Civ. Code § 52.5. In 16 turn, Section 236.1 of the California Penal Code provides three definitions of a human 17 trafficker: (1) "[a] person who deprives or violates the personal liberty of another with 18 the intent to obtain forced labor or services," Cal. Penal Code § 236.1(a); (2) "[a] 19 person who deprives or violates the personal liberty of another with the intent to effect 20 or maintain a violation of" one of the enumerated statutes, including California Penal 21 Code sections 311.1 and 311.5, id. §236.1(b), §§ 311.1, 311.5 (criminalizing the 22 distribution, possession, and promotion of obscene material including matters 23 depicting sexual conduct by a person under 18); and (3) "[a] person who causes, 24 induces, or persuades, or attempts to cause, induce, or persuade, a person who is a 25 minor at the time of commission of the offense to engage in a commercial sex act with 26 the intent to effect or maintain a violation of" one of the enumerated statutes, 27 including California Penal Code sections 311.1 and 311.5. Id. § 236.1(c)

1 Plaintiff alleges that the MindGeek Defendants have violated CTVPA by 2 “knowingly solicit[ing], maintain[ing], and profit[ing] from CSAM, trafficked, rape, 3 and sex abuse material on its websites” and “intend[ing] to, and [] distribut[ing] CSA 4 and other trafficked, rape, and sex abuse materials through their websites.” (SAC at 5 167–68). These allegations, however, are insufficient to meet the required elements
6 of the CTVPA. First, Plaintiff has failed to allege that the MindGeek Defendants 7 “deprive[d] or violate[d] the personal liberty” of Plaintiff within the meaning 8 California Penal Code § 236.1 (h)(3), which defines “[d]eprivation or violation of the 9 personal liberty of another” as the following:

10 “Deprivation or violation of the personal liberty of another” 11 includes substantial and sustained restriction of another’s 12 liberty accomplished through force, fear, fraud, deceit, 13 coercion, violence, duress, menace, or threat of unlawful 14 injury to the victim or to another person, under 15 circumstances where the person receiving or apprehending 16 the threat reasonably believes that it is likely that the person 17 making the threat would carry it out.

18 Cal. Penal Code § 236.1 (h)(3). Nor has Plaintiff adequately pled that the MindGeek 19 Defendants “intend[ed] to obtain forced labor or services.” Id. § 236.1(a); see S. S. v.
20 Ali, No. 3:23-CV-05074-JSC, 2024 WL 150728, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2024)
21 (“Plaintiff’s CTVPA claim differs slightly from her TVPRA claim—while not a 22 requirement under the TVPRA, Plaintiff must allege Defendants ‘intend[ed] to obtain 23 forced labor or services’ to plead a CTVPA violation.”); Lofthus v. Long Beach 24 Veterans Hosp., 214 F. Supp. 3d 908, 916 (C.D. Cal. 2016) (dismissing Plaintiff’s 25 CTVPA claim for failing to allege any intent to obtain forced labor or services); Talib 26 v. Guerrero, 2016 WL 1470082, at *11 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 14, 2016) (recommending 27 dismissal for failure to allege facts indicating defendants acted with intent to obtain 28

1 forced labor or services within meaning of § 36.1), R & R adopted, 2016 WL 1452315
2 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 12, 2016); cf. Maslic v. ISM Vuzem d.o.o., No. 21-CV-02556-BLF, 3 2024 WL 3408217, (N.D. Cal. July 11, 2024) (finding that Defendant is entitled to 4 summary judgment because CTVPA does not impose liability on a beneficiary of a 5 trafficking scheme, but only the perpetrator). Finally, Plaintiff has made no 6 allegations that MindGeek Defendants at any time “cause[d], induce[d], persuade[d], 7 or attempt[ed] to cause, induce, or persuade [Plaintiff] at the time of the commission of 8 the offense to engage in a commercial sex act. Cal. Penal Code § 236.1(c) (emphasis 9 added). The Court therefore finds that Plaintiff has failed to state a viable claim under 10 the CTVPA against the MindGeek Defendants and therefore GRANTS MindGeek’s 11 motion as to this claim.<sup>5</sup>

12 13. Civil Conspiracy (Count XVI)

13 Under California law, civil “[c]onspiracy is not a cause of action, but a legal 14 doctrine that imposes liability on persons who, although not actually committing a tort 15 themselves, share with the immediate tortfeasors a common plan or design in its 16 perpetration.” Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd., 7 Cal. 4th 503, 510– 17 11, (1994). “In such an action the major significance of the conspiracy lies in the fact 18 that it renders each participant in the wrongful act responsible as a joint tortfeasor for 19 all damages ensuing from the wrong, irrespective of whether or not he was a direct 20 actor and regardless of the degree of his activity.” Id. at 511 (citations omitted).

21 Under a conspiracy theory of recovery, liability depends on the actual 22 commission of a tort. Id. Here, Plaintiff does not identify any predicate tort 23 violations by parties other than MindGeek Defendants on which MindGeek 24 Defendant’s common law conspiracy violation can be predicated. Rather, the tort

26 _____
27 <sup>5</sup> The Court again notes that this ruling deviates from Judge Carney’s finding that 28 Plaintiff has a viable claim under the CTVPA in a related class action lawsuit. Doe v.
Mindgeek USA Inc., 558 F.Supp.3d at 844. As noted in footnote 2, however, this Court is not bound by this related opinion.

1 violations that Plaintiff specifically alleges as underlying Plaintiff's civil conspiracy 2 claims are MindGeek's own tort violations. (SAC ¶ 591). And Plaintiff has failed to 3 attribute a specific tort violation by specific a MindGeek entity on which the other 4 MindGeek entities can be held liable on a conspiracy theory.<sup>6</sup> The Court therefore 5 finds that Plaintiff has failed to state a claim as to civil conspiracy with respect to 6 MindGeek Defendants and GRANTS MindGeek Defendants' motion to dismiss this 7 cause of action.

8 C. Personal Jurisdiction

9 On July 29, 2022, Judge Carney ordered the parties to engage in jurisdictional 10 discovery to understand MindGeek's corporate structure and assess as to (1) which 11 entity owns Pornhub and other MindGeek websites that hosts Plaintiff's video; and (2) 12 whether Plaintiff may be able to impute contacts of the non-objecting MindGeek 13 Entity Defendants to MindGeek S.a.r.l. and MG Premium LTD through the alter ego 14 doctrine. (FAC MindGeek Order at 3–4). Judge Carney noted the concern of 15 prematurely dismissing any of the MindGeek entities and how the "possibility that 16 judgment will be entered against remaining insolvent or undercapitalized entities" 17 may lead to possible unfairness. (Id. at 4). Accordingly, Judge Carney denied 18 MindGeek Defendants' motion to dismiss Plaintiff's FAC "in light of the near 19 certainty that Plaintiff will file a Second Amended Complaint at the close of 20 jurisdictional discovery." (Id. at 8).

21 MindGeek Defendants, in their motion to dismiss Plaintiff's SAC, challenge the 22 Court's personal jurisdiction over MindGeek S.a.r.l. (See MG Mot. 23–40). Notably, 23 it seems that the MindGeek Defendants decided to drop the personal jurisdiction 24 challenges related to MG Premium LTD.

25 Under Rule 12(b)(2), "[w]hen a defendant moves to dismiss for lack of personal 26 jurisdiction, the plaintiff bears the burden of demonstrating that the court has

27
28 <sup>6</sup> Instead, Plaintiff consistently and repeatedly refers to all of the MindGeek entities as a "single business enterprise" that are all "alter ego of each other." (SAC ¶¶ 16, 20).

1 jurisdiction.” In re W. States Wholesale Nat. Gas Antitrust Litig. (Western States), 2 715 F.3d 716, 741 (9th Cir. 2013). To overcome a motion to dismiss for lack of 3 personal jurisdiction based on written materials rather than an evidentiary hearing, the 4 plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing of jurisdictional facts. AMA 5 Multimedia, LLC v. Wanat, 970 F.3d 1201, 1207 (9th Cir. 2020); *see Bauman v.
6 Daimler Chrysler Corp.*, 644 F.3d 909, 913-14 n.7 (9th Cir. 2011) (applying prima 7 facie standard for personal-jurisdiction allegations even after jurisdictional discovery).
8 This standard, however, “is not toothless,” and a plaintiff “cannot simply rest on the 9 bare allegations of its complaint.” In re Boon Global Ltd., 923 F.3d 643, 650 (9th Cir.
10 2019). Although “uncontested allegations in the complaint must be taken as true” 11 and “[c]onflicts between parties over statements contained in affidavits must be 12 resolved in [Plaintiff’s] favor,” Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d 13 797, 800 (9th Cir. 2004), disputed allegations in the complaint that are not supported 14 with evidence or affidavits cannot establish jurisdiction, see In re Boon Glob. Ltd., 15 923 F.3d at 650; see also Chem Lab Products, Inc. v. Stepanek, 554 F.2d 371, 372 16 (9th Cir. 1977) (“Mere allegations of a complaint, when contradicted by affidavits, 17 are not enough to confer personal jurisdiction over a non-resident defendant.”).

18 “Federal courts ordinarily follow state law in determining the bounds of their 19 jurisdiction over persons.” Daimler AG v. Bauman, 571 U.S. 117, 125 (2014).
20 “Because ‘California’s long-arm statute allows the exercise of personal jurisdiction to 21 the full extent permissible under the U.S. Constitution,’ our inquiry centers on 22 whether exercising jurisdiction comports with [constitutional] due process.” *Picot v.
23 Weston*, 780 F.3d 1206, 1211 (9th Cir. 2015); see Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10 (“A 24 court of this state may exercise jurisdiction on any basis not inconsistent with the 25 Constitution of this state or of the United States.”).

26 “Federal due process permits a court to exercise personal jurisdiction over a 27 nonresident defendant if that defendant has at least ‘minimum contacts’ with the 28 relevant forum such that the exercise of jurisdiction ‘does not offend traditional

1       notions of fair play and substantial justice.”” Glob. Commodities Trading Grp., Inc. v.
2       Beneficio de Arroz Choloma, S.A., 972 F.3d 1101, 1106 (9th Cir. 2020) (quoting 3       Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d at 801) (quotation marks omitted). The Supreme Court has 4       recognized two types of personal jurisdiction: ““general” (sometimes called ‘all-5       purpose’) jurisdiction and ‘specific’ (sometimes called ‘case-linked’) jurisdiction.” 6       Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. v. Super. Ct., 582 U.S. 255, 262 (2017). To be subject to 7       general personal jurisdiction, the defendant’s contacts with the forum must be so 8       continuous and systematic as to render it “essentially at home” in the forum state and 9       amenable to any suit there. Glob. Commodities Trading Grp., 972 F.3d at 1106. The 10      “paradigmatic locations” where a corporation is at home is in the state where it is 11      incorporated and where it has its principal place of business. Ranza v. Nike, Inc., 793
12      F.3d 1059, 1069 (9th Cir. 2015). Given that Plaintiff acknowledges that “MindGeek 13      S.a.r.l. is a foreign entity organized and existing under the laws of Luxembourg” and 14      “operates out of Montreal, Canada” (SAC ¶ 11), the question before this Court is 15      whether there is specific jurisdiction over MindGeek S.a.r.l.

16       A court may exercise specific jurisdiction over “issues deriving from, or 17      connected with, the very controversy that establishes jurisdiction.” Goodyear Dunlop 18      Tires Operations, S.A. v. Brown, 564 U.S. 915, 919 (2011). The Ninth Circuit has 19      established a three-part test for determining specific jurisdiction: (1) the defendant 20      must purposefully avail himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum 21      and invoking the benefits and protections of its laws; (2) the claim must arise out of or 22      result from the defendant’s forum-related activities; and (3) exercise of jurisdiction
23      must be reasonable. Rano v. Sipa Press, Inc., 987 F.2d 580, 588 (9th Cir. 1993); see also Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 475–76 (1985). The party 25      asserting jurisdiction bears the burden of satisfying the first two prongs of this test.
26      Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d at 802. If it does so, then the burden shifts to the party 27      contesting jurisdiction to “present a compelling case” that the third prong of 28      reasonableness has not been satisfied. Id.

1       According to Plaintiff, MindGeek S.a.r.l is a Luxembourg company that 2 operates out of Montreal, Canada. (SAC ¶ 11). While mentioning that MindGeek 3 S.a.r.l. has satellite offices in Los Angeles, San Diego, and San Francisco, California, 4 Plaintiff does not allege that this establishes necessary minimum contacts with 5 California to give rise to a valid exercise of personal jurisdiction.<sup>7</sup> Rather, the bulk of 6 Plaintiff's argument centers around the contention that MindGeek S.a.r.l.'s direct and 7 indirect subsidiaries have specific contacts with California, and those contacts can be 8 properly imputed to MindGeek S.a.r.l on an alter ego theory for jurisdictional 9 purposes. (See, e.g., SAC ¶¶ 16, 20, 21, 313–462).

10       “The existence of a parent-subsidiary relationship is insufficient, on its own, to 11 justify imputing one entity's contacts with a forum state to another for the purpose of 12 establishing personal jurisdiction.” Ranza v. Nike, Inc., 793 F.3d 1059, 1070 (9th Cir.
13 2015) (citing Doe v. Unocal Corp., 248 F.3d 915, 925–26 (9th Cir. 2001)). Thus, as a 14 general principle, “corporate separateness insulates a parent corporation from liability 15 created by its subsidiary, notwithstanding the parent's ownership of the subsidiary.” 16 Id. (citing United States v. Bestfoods, 524 U.S. 51, 61, 118 S. Ct. 1876, 141 L.Ed.2d 17 43 (1998)). In “rare” circumstances, however, the Court may pierce the corporate veil 18 to impute liability from one entity to another. Dole Food Co. v. Patrickson, 538 U.S.
19 468, 475 (2003); Ranza, 793 F.3d at 1071. Such “[d]isregarding [of] the corporate 20 entity is recognized as an extreme remedy.” Langley v. Guiding Hands Sch., Inc., No.

23       <sup>7</sup> Plaintiff's conclusory assertion that MindGeek S.a.r.l. “directly and indirectly owns 24 and operates” Pornhub does not meet her burden of demonstrating specific jurisdiction 25 over MindGeek S.a.r.l. Notably, Plaintiff reiterated the exact same allegations in her 26 FAC, which Judge Carney already found as insufficient to establish personal jurisdiction on the ground that the “distinction between direct and indirect ownership 27 of the offending websites is crucially important to the Court's jurisdictional analysis.”
(FAC MindGeek Order at 3). Given that Plaintiff fails to provide any additional 28 clarity on this point, the Court finds that Plaintiff has failed to show that MindGeek S.a.r.l. has sufficient contacts with this forum on its own to support a finding of specific jurisdiction.

1      Calvert v. Huckins, 875 F. Supp. 674, 678 (E.D. Cal. 1995)). One such circumstance 2      is when a parent and subsidiary are “not really separate entities,” or are “alter egos” of 3      one another. Unocal, 248 F.3d at 926; Ranza, 793 F.3d at 1071; see also ADO Fin., 4      AG v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 931 F. Supp. 711 (C.D. Cal. 1996). The “alter ego 5      . . . relationship is typified by parental control of the subsidiary’s internal affairs or 6      daily operations.” Unocal, 248 F.3d at 926.

7      To make a prima facie showing of an alter ego relationship, a plaintiff must 8      plausibly allege “(1) that there is such unity of interest and ownership that the separate 9      personalities of [the entities] no longer exist and (2) that failure to disregard [their 10     separate identities] would result in fraud or injustice.” Unocal, 248 F.3d at 926 11     (alterations in original) (quoting AT & T Co. v. Compagnie Bruxelles Lambert, 94 12     F.3d 586, 591 (9th Cir.1996)). Both elements must be met for a plaintiff to avail
13     herself to this doctrine. See In re Boon Glob. Ltd., 923 F.3d 643, 653 (9th Cir. 2019)
14     (“California recognizes alter ego liability where two conditions are met”) (citations 15     omitted); id. at 654 (finding that the lower court’s alter ego analysis was flawed for 16     failing to “determine[e] that both prongs of alter ego jurisdiction were met); see also 17     Gerritsen v. Warner Bros. Ent. Inc., 116 F. Supp. 3d 1104, 1136 (C.D. Cal. 2015) 18     (“Before the doctrine can be invoked, two elements must be alleged”); Mesler v.
19     Bragg Mgmt. Co., 39 Cal.3d 290, 300 (1985) (“There is no litmus test to determine 20     when the corporate veil will be pierced; rather the result will depend on the 21     circumstances of each particular case. There are, nevertheless, two general 22     requirements”). The “unity of interest and ownership” prong of this test requires “a 23     showing that the parent controls the subsidiary to such a degree as to render the latter
24     the mere instrumentality of the former.” See In re Boon Glob. Ltd., 923 F.3d at 653 &
25     n.4 (quoting Ranza, 793 F.3d at 1073) (internal quotation marks omitted). This test 26     envisioned pervasive control over the subsidiary, such as when a parent corporation 27     “dictates every facet of the subsidiary’s business—from broad policy decisions to 28     routine matters of day-to-day operation.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted).

1 Total ownership and shared management personnel are alone insufficient to establish 2 the requisite level of control. See Harris Rutsky & Co. Ins. Servs. v. Bell & Clements
3 Ltd., 328 F.3d 1122, 1135 (9th Cir.2003). As to the second prong, Plaintiff must 4 show that a parent used the corporate form “unjustly and in derogation of the 5 plaintiff’s interest.” Butler v. Adoption Media, LLC, 486 F. Supp. 2d 1022 (N.D. Cal.
6 2007) (quoting Mesler, 39 Cal.3d at 300). Plaintiff spends a significant amount of 7 focus on attempting to establish the first prong, but fatally does not sufficiently show 8 how she meets the second prong.

9 “In almost every instance where a plaintiff has attempted to invoke the [alter 10 ego] doctrine [s]he is an unsatisfied creditor.” Perfect 10, Inc. v. Giganews, Inc., No.
11 2:11-CV-07098 (AB) (JPR), 2015 WL 12710753, at *3 (C.D. Cal. June 3, 2015), 12 aff’d, 847 F.3d 357 (9th Cir. 2017) (citations omitted). “[M]ere ‘[d]ifficulty in 13 enforcing a judgment or collecting a debt, [however], does not satisfy’ the injustice 14 standard for alter ego liability.” Perfect 10, Inc. v. Giganews, Inc., 847 F.3d 657, 677 15 (9th Cir. 2017). For “insolvency or inadequate capitalization [to] satisfy this 16 standard,” a plaintiff must show that the corporation is “so undercapitalized that it is 17 unable to meet debts that may reasonably be expected to arise in the normal course of 18 business.” Id. Plaintiff here, however, does not allege that the MindGeek Defendants 19 that do not contest personal jurisdictions (“Non-contesting Defendants”) are 20 undercapitalized such that she cannot seek redress from these Defendants. See Boeing
21 Co. v. KB Yuzhnoye, No. 2:13-CV-00730 (AB) (AJW), 2016 WL 2851297, at *25 22 (C.D. Cal. May 13, 2016) (“Undercapitalization and insolvency are the most relevant 23 factors in determining whether the corporation was established to defraud its creditors 24 or [some] other improper purpose such as avoiding the risks known to be attendant to 25 a type of business.” (citation omitted)).

26 Rather, the SAC’s allegations support the opposite inference: that the Non-27 contesting Defendants were (and are) well-capitalized. (See, e.g., SAC ¶¶ 1 n.1, 406, 28 352 (alleging an investor paid $300 million for an equity interest in the company in

1 2013 and that the company was sold in 2023 to a third party for $402 million); Id. ¶¶ 2 495, 270 (alleging that the company had fully secured financing for over a decade); Id.
3 ¶¶ 2, 6, 34 (alleging MindGeek is “the dominant, monopolistic” company in an almost 4 $100 billion market)). In her Opposition, Plaintiff attempts to address this issue by 5 claiming, without any cite to affidavit or evidence, that the $400 million purchase is 6 nothing but a “pretextual ‘sale’ to avoid personal responsibility while siphoning off 7 the economics still in the business for themselves,” and Defendants failed to produce 8 any evidence of their solvency. (Opp’n at 83–84). These statements, however, 9 amount to nothing more than conclusory allegations that are directly contradicted by 10 evidence and affidavits Defendants produced as part of jurisdictional discovery. For 11 example, Defendants submitted a share purchase agreement memorializing the terms 12 of the sale of MindGeek. (See White Decl. Ex. E, Docket No. 435-5). Both 13 Defendants Antoon and Tassillo testified that they had received the initial $10.5 14 million payment for their MindGeek shares. (White Reply Decl. Ex. Q at 286, 395, 15 505, Docket No. 507-2; White Reply Decl. Ex. R at 21; Docket No. 507-3).
16 According to the schedule of payments set forth in the agreements, more than $50
17 million has been paid to date. (White Decl. Ex. E at 16-17, Docket No. 435-5; Ex. F 18 at 16-17, Docket No. 435-5). Antoon’s testimony confirmed that these funds are 19 being paid to the Individual Defendants by the third-party buyer, Ethical Capital 20 Partners, not MindGeek. (White Reply Decl. Ex. Q at 506). While Plaintiff need only 21 establish a prima facie case for personal jurisdiction at this point in the litigation, she 22 “cannot simply rest on the bare allegations of its complaint,” especially if contradicted 23 by affidavits. In re Boon Global Ltd., 923 F.3d at 650; see also Chem Lab Products, 24 Inc., 554 F.2d at 372 (9th Cir. 1977) (“Mere allegations of a complaint, when 25 contradicted by affidavits, are not enough to confer personal jurisdiction over a non-26 resident defendant.”); Scott v. Breeland, 792 F.2d 925 (9th Cir. 1986) (“When a 27 defendant moves to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff is ‘obligated 28 to come forward with facts, by affidavit or otherwise, supporting personal

1 jurisdiction.””) (quoting Amber Marketing Systems, Inc. v. Jobar International, Inc., 2 551 F.2d 784, 787 (9th Cir. 1977)). Moreover, even accepting Plaintiff’s contention 3 that the 2023 sale was “pretextual” and “[i]n fact, no one paid anything for the 4 business” as true, Plaintiff does not provide any argument, let alone evidence, to 5 undermine Andreou’s declaration that the remaining MindGeek entities are and have 6 always been adequately capitalized during the relevant period and that the total assets 7 for both 9219-1568 Quebec Inc. and MG Freesites Ltd. exceed total liabilities by tens 8 of millions of dollars. (Andreou Decl. ¶¶ 20, 35–51; Docket No. 448-2). In other 9 words, even without the 2023 sale, the Non-contesting Defendants are capable of 10 satisfying potential judgment.

11 Plaintiff’s other arguments to support her injustice and fraud prong are equally 12 unavailing. In her SAC, Plaintiff asserts, without much elaboration, that the 13 “corporate structure was created and is not maintained for any legitimate business 14 purpose or need of the organizations and has no economic substance but instead to . . .
15 circumvent tax, money transfer, and pornography laws in the United States and other 16 countries in which MindGeek actually does business.” (SAC ¶ 21). As the Ninth 17 Circuit made clear, however, such “[c]onclusory allegations that [a defendant] 18 structures companies to escape liability are insufficient to confer personal 19 jurisdiction.” In re Boon Global, 923 F.3d at 654. “Indeed, almost every business 20 enterprise in the United States ultimately forms some sort of corporate entity for the 21 purpose of avoiding personal liability.” NuCal Foods, Inc. v. Quality Egg LLC, 887 22 F. Supp. 2d 977, 994 n.9 (E.D. Cal. 2012). Moreover, “[t]he underlying cause of 23 action cannot supply the necessary fraud or injustice prong. To hold otherwise would 24 render the fraud or injustice element meaningless . . . .” NetJets Aviation, Inc. v. LHC 25 Commc’ns, LLC, 537 F.3d 168, 183 (2d Cir. 2008) (quoting Mobil Oil Corp. v. Linear 26 Films, Inc., 718 F. Supp. 260, 268 (D. Del. 1989); *see also TradeWinds Airlines, Inc.
27 v. Soros*, No. 1:08-CV-05901 (JFK), 2012 WL 983575, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 28 2012) (“This ‘injustice’ must consist of more than merely the tort or breach of contract

1 that is the basis of the plaintiff's lawsuit."). Rather, "[s]omething more is needed." In 2 re Boon Global, 923 F.3d at 654 (citing In re Schwarzkopf, 626 F.3d 1032, 1039–40 3 (9th Cir. 2010) (alter ego theory recognized where individual used corporation to 4 acquire asset at time when he was insolvent); Riddle v. Leuschner, 51 Cal. 2d 574, 5 581–82 (1959) (finding injustice would result where jurisdictional facts showed that 6 insolvent company's assets were transferred to another company as a means of 7 avoiding creditors)). And while tax evasion may provide a basis to satisfy the "fraud 8 or injustice" prong, see, e.g., Prompt Staffing, Inc. v. United States, 321 F. Supp. 3d
9 1157, 1177 (C.D. Cal. 2018), that has only been the case when the United States or a 10 creditor from whom a defendant is hiding assets is the party seeking to pierce the 11 corporate veil. See, e.g., Towe Antique Ford Found. v. I.R.S., 999 F.2d 1387 (9th Cir.
12 1993); Politte v. United States, No. 07CV1950 AJB WVG, 2012 WL 965996 (S.D.
13 Cal. Mar. 21, 2012), aff'd, 587 F. App'x 406 (9th Cir. 2014). This makes sense given 14 that—as Plaintiff conceded at oral argument—there must be some causal connection 15 between the alleged misconduct and Plaintiff's injury. See Mesler, 39 Cal.3d at 300 16 ("The alter ego doctrine arises when a plaintiff comes into court claiming that an 17 opposing party is using the corporate form unjustly and in derogation of the plaintiff's 18 interests.") (citing 6 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law (8th ed. 1974) Corporations, § 5, 19 p. 4318); Gerritsen v. Warner Bros. Ent. Inc., 116 F. Supp. 3d 1104, 1136 (C.D. Cal.
20 2015) (same); see also Hambleton Bros. Lumber Co. v. Balkin Enterprises, Inc., 397 21 F.3d 1217, 1228 (9th Cir. 2005) ("Even if improper conduct of a shareholder is 22 shown, a 'causal connection' must be shown: The plaintiff must 'demonstrate a 23 relationship between the misconduct and the plaintiff's injury.'") (quoting Amfac
24 Foods, Inc. v. Int'l Systems & Controls Corp., 294 Or. 94, 654 P.2d 1092, 1103 25 (1982)).

26 Acknowledging at oral argument that Plaintiff cannot meet the second prong of 27 the alter ego theory, Plaintiff sought to clarify her legal theory by stating that she may 28 pierce the corporate veil under a "merger/single enterprise" theory or "attribution

1 theory,” which Plaintiff claims are versions of alter ego liability recognized under 2 California law that is distinct from the traditional doctrine involving direct 3 shareholder-company privity. Under the “merger/single enterprise” theory, Plaintiff 4 would need to only show that there is “such domination of finances, policies and 5 practices that the controlled corporation has, so to speak, no separate mind, will or 6 existence of its own and is but a business conduit for its principal” Toho-Towa Co. v.
7 Morgan Creek Prods., Inc., 217 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1107 (2013). Under the 8 attribution test, Plaintiff need to demonstrate that an “absent parent instigated the 9 subsidiary’s local activity.” Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios Inc. v. Grokster, Ltd., 243 10 F. Supp. 2d 1073, 1099 (C.D. Cal. 2003) (quoting In re Electronics Pacing Sys., Inc., 11 953 F. Supp. 909, 918) (S.D. Ohio 1997). In other words, Plaintiff need not meet the 12 second “injustice or fraud” prong. In support, Plaintiff pointed the Court to several 13 cases including two California state law cases—Las Palmas Assocs. v. Las Palmas 14 Ctr. Assocs., 235 Cal. App. 3d 1220 (Ct. App. 1991) and Toho-Towa Co., 217 Cal.
15 App. 4th 1096—three cases in this district—Kayne v. Ho, No.
16 LACV0906816JAKCWX, 2012 WL 12878753 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 6, 2012), Mossimo
17 Holdings LLC v. Haralambus, No. CV 14-05912 DDP JEMX, 2015 WL 476298 18 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2015), and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios Inc., 243 F. Supp. 2d at 19 1099—as well as several out-of-circuit case law. The Court, however, finds 20 Plaintiff’s argument unpersuasive and the case law inapposite.

21 As MindGeek Defendants correctly point out, courts within this circuit 22 routinely reject the use of “single enterprise” theory as a basis to establish personal 23 jurisdiction. Krantz v. Bloomberg L.P., 2022 WL 2102111, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 19, 24 2022); see also Iconlab Inc. v. Valeant Pharms. Int’l, Inc., No. 816CV01321JLSKES, 25 2017 WL 7240856 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2017), aff’d sub nom. Iconlab, Inc. v. Bausch
26 Health Companies, Inc., 828 F. App’x 363 (9th Cir. 2020) (“Plaintiffs’ other, exotic 27 theories of imputing contacts—“single enterprise,” “aiding and abetting,” and 28 “ratification”—are not valid theories of establishing personal jurisdiction in the Ninth

1 Circuit to the extent that they stray from the well-established alter ego and agency 2 theories") (internal citations omitted); Campanelli v. Image First Unif. Rental Serv.,
3 Inc., No. 15-CV-04456-PJH, 2016 WL 4729173, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 12, 2016) 4 (observing that “single enterprise” and ‘joint employer’ theories are bases for 5 liability, not tests for personal jurisdiction.”)).

6 Notably, the two California state law cases and one of the cases within this 7 district on which Plaintiff relies do not once mention “personal jurisdiction.” See Las 8 Palmas Assocs., 235 Cal. App. 3d 1220; Toho-Towa Co., 217 Cal. App. 4th 1096; 9 Mossimo Holdings, 2015 WL 476298. Instead, those cases apply the “single 10 enterprise” doctrine as a basis of imposing liability, not personal jurisdiction. As for 11 the two Central District of California cases that do mention personal jurisdiction, 12 neither are persuasive. In Kayne, for example, the court there discusses “single 13 enterprise” theory in the context of a personal jurisdiction analysis, not as a theory 14 apart from the traditional alter ego theory, but rather as a theory to support the first of 15 the two prongs of the traditional alter ego theory. 2012 WL 12878753, at *8. Thus, 16 on the very same page that the court mentions the “single enterprise theory,” the court 17 in Kayne also conducts an analysis on the second “fraud or injustice” prong. And 18 while the court in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios Inc. does seem to suggest that a 19 merger or attribution theory can provide be a separate and independent doctrine to 20 support personal jurisdiction apart from the traditional alter ego theory, in doing so, 21 the court applies out-of-circuit case law. See 243 F. Supp. 2d at 1099–100 (citing to a 22 cases from the Sixth Circuit and S.D. Ohio as well as a Ninth Circuit case applying 23 Nevada law) (citing Third National Bank v. WEDGE Group, 882 F.2d 1087, 1092, 24 1094 (6th Cir.1989) (Keith, J., concurring); In re Electronics Pacing Systems, Inc., 25 953 F.Supp. at 919; Wells Fargo & Co. v. Wells Fargo Exp. Co., 556 F.2d 406, 419
26 (9th Cir. 1977)). The remaining out-of-circuit cases that Plaintiff cites have no 27 application here and contradict the law that governs here.
28

1       Even if Plaintiff were correct that the “single enterprise” theory somehow 2 relaxes the traditional alter ego test, which as discussed above she is not, the theory 3 would not apply here because it concerns liability between sister corporations, not 4 liability imposed on individual shareholders. (Supp. Brief at 7–8). The court in Las 5 Palmas explicitly contrasted the “usual[]” alter ego case—where liability is sought to 6 be imposed on an individual shareholder—with the “single enterprise” variation, 7 which applies only to “sister companies.” See Las Palmas Assocs., 235 Cal. App. 3d 8 at 1249. Toho-Towa is distinguishable on similar grounds because its discussion of 9 the “single-business-enterprise” theory concerned related corporations that “integrate 10 their resources and operations,” not individual investors. (Supp. Brief at 8). Thus, 11 even assuming Plaintiff could rely on this variant of alter ego, it would have no 12 bearing on the Individual Defendants.

13       Both the Ninth Circuit and California courts have made clear that for a plaintiff 14 to avail herself to the alter ego doctrine for jurisdiction purposes, she must meet both 15 prongs of the test. See In re Boon Glob. Ltd., 923 F.3d at 653 (“California recognizes 16 alter ego liability where two conditions are met”) (citations omitted); id. at 654 17 (finding that the lower court’s alter ego analysis was flawed for failing to 18 “determine[e] that both prongs of alter ego jurisdiction were met); see also Gerritsen 19 v. Warner Bros. Ent. Inc., 116 F. Supp. 3d 1104, 1136 (C.D. Cal. 2015) (“Before the 20 doctrine can be invoked, two elements must be alleged”); Mesler v. Bragg Mgmt. Co., 21 39 Cal.3d 290, 300 (1985) (“There is no litmus test to determine when the corporate 22 veil will be pierced; rather the result will depend on the circumstances of each 23 particular case. There are, nevertheless, two general requirements”). Given that 24 Plaintiff conceded at oral argument that she cannot meet the second prong and the 25 admission is dispositive as to this issue, the Court not reach the first prong. The Court 26 therefore holds that it does not have personal jurisdiction over MindGeek S.a.r.l and 27 GRANTS MindGeek Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss as to MindGeek S.a.r.l. As 28

1 Plaintiff has already had jurisdictional discovery on precisely this issue and the 2 opportunity to amend, this dismissal is with prejudice.

3 III. CONCLUSION

4 For the foregoing reasons, MindGeek Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's 5 Second Amended Complaint is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part as follows:
6 (Count I) Violation of Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act 7 ("TVPRA") based on a theory of direct liability under 18 U.S.C. § 1591(a)(1) is 8 dismissed with prejudice; (Count I) Violation of the TVPRA based on beneficiary 9 liability under 18 U.S.C. § 1591(a)(2), 1595 is not dismissed; (Count IV) Conspiracy 10 to Violate the TVPRA pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §§ 1594(c), 1595 is dismissed without 11 prejudice; (Count V) Receipt, Distribution, or Transport of Materials Involving the 12 Sexual Exploitation of Minors in Violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 2252, 2255 is not 13 dismissed; (Count VI) Receipt, Distribution, or Transport of CSAM in Violation of 18 14 U.S.C. §§ 2252A, 2255 is not dismissed; (Count VII) Public Disclosure of Private 15 Facts is not dismissed; (Count VIII) Intrusion into Private Affairs is not dismissed; 16 (Count IX) Placing Plaintiff in False Light is not dismissed; (Count X) Common Law
17 Misappropriation of Name and Likeness is dismissed without prejudice; (Count XI) 18 Misappropriation of Name and Likeness in Violation of Cal. Civ. Code § 3344 is 19 dismissed without prejudice; (Count XII) Distribution of Private Sexually Explicit 20 Materials in Violation of Cal. Civ. Code § 1708.85 is dismissed without prejudice; 21 (Count XIII) Negligence is not dismissed; (Count XIV) Violation of the UCL under 22 Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 is not dismissed; (Count XIV) Violation of the FAL
23 under Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 is dismissed with prejudice; (Count XV)
24 Violation of California's Trafficking Victims Protection Act under Cal. Civ. Code § 25 52.5 is dismissed without prejudice; and (Count XVI) Violation of Civil Conspiracy is 26 dismissed without prejudice. Defendant MindGeek S.a.r.l. is dismissed with 27 prejudice.
