I. INTRODUCTION

In all three of Defendants’ oppositions, one general theme predominates: all of them rely on the unspoken premise that the Second Amendment is a second-class right. The City of La Verne and its sheriff considers it “reasonable” to pay over $1,000 to exercise an enumerated constitutional right; the Los Angeles Sheriff’s Department (“LASD”) and its sheriff believe an 18-month wait and arbitrary denials are acceptable, and the State and its Attorney General argue that 88 percent of Americans have no right to carry in California. And all Defendants defend suitability determinations the Supreme Court expressly forbade.

American history teaches that, when state and local governments are forced to comply with Supreme Court rulings they disfavor, provincial defiance must be promptly quashed before it becomes the sort of ingrained custom, habit, or practice that grew out of Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537 (1896). It bears repeating that Cooper v. Aaron, 358 U.S. 1 (1958) dealt specifically with bureaucratic delay in implementing public school integration. See Brown v. Board of Education (I), 347 U.S. 483 (1954), and Brown v. Board of Education (II), 349 U.S. 294 (1955). At the time, Senator Byrd had issued the call for “Massive Resistance,” and a grotesque corpus of enactments designed to flout Brown’s call for integration emerged. This Court, like the Cooper Court, should sweep aside the excuse-making by state actors by simply make the finding that “[D]elay in any guise in order to deny [...] constitutional rights [...] [should] not be countenanced, and that only a prompt start, diligently and earnestly pursued [...] [can] constitute good faith compliance.” Id. at 7. To countenance this form of “resistance” when it comes to Second Amendment rights in a post-Bruen landscape invites the same constitutional anarchy that prevailed between Plessy and Brown.

Last year, when he announced a new bill restricting carry in response to Bruen, Governor Newsom (like his spiritual predecessor Governor Orval Faubus of Arkansas) angrily criticized the Supreme Court for the Bruen ruling, and ridiculed

1 the notion of a right to carry with sarcastic air quotes. See SB 2 Press Conference, 2 YouTube.com (Feb. 1, 2023), <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Kpxpj6yvFIo> (at 3 36:10) (last visited Feb. 22, 2024). Now local issuing authorities, hostile to the right 4 to carry described in Bruen, are aping the Governor’s defiance of the Supreme 5 Court and attempting to stifle the right by other means.

6 The subtext of the Defendants’ Oppositions is their suggestion that concealed 7 handgun permitting is at issue in this case. It is not. What is at issue are lengthy 8 wait times, exorbitant fees, discretionary criteria, and the complete denial of the 9 right to carry to nonresidents. To be sure, the Supreme Court did not broadly opine 10 as to the constitutionality of permitting schemes. But it did expressly foreclose 11 Defendants’ practices here. Remediating them here is the absolute bare minimum 12 that Bruen requires.¹

13 II. ARGUMENT

14 A. LASD’s and Luna’s Opposition.

15 1. The admittedly lengthy wait times of LASD’s permit scheme 16 are unconstitutional regardless of cause.

17 The staggering admissions made in Defendant LASD’s briefing reveal that 18 the situation is worse than Plaintiffs imagined. LASD boasts that it is processing 45
 19 first-time permit applications per week. See Defs. Los Angeles Cnty. Sheriff’s Dep’t 20 and Sheriff Robert Luna’s Opp. to Pls.’ Motion for Prelim. Inj. (“LASD Opp.”) at 21 4:3-8. At that pace, LASD would process only 2,340 applications per year, and the 22 Chavez declaration states that the LASD backlog currently stands at 9,400 first-23 time applications waiting to be processed. See Decl. of Regina R. Chavez in Supp.
 24 of Defs. Los Angeles Cnty. Sheriff’s Dep’t and Sheriff Robert Luna’s Opp. to Pls.’

25
 26 ¹ Two of the three sets of Defendants present historical laws for consideration 27 which they argue support their respective positions, and the State presents 28 declarations from three historians. Plaintiffs have submitted their own brief rebuttal declaration from their own historian, Clayton Cramer identifying the laws that Defendants and their experts do not present accurately to the Court. See Rebuttal Decl. of Clayton Cramer in Supp. of Pls.’ Mot. for Prelim. Inj., passim, and Ex. 4.

1 Mot. for Prelim. Inj., ¶ 10. Thus, even wrongly assuming LASD does not receive 2 any additional applications, it currently will take LASD four years to process the 3 existing backlog of first-time applications.

4 Astonishingly, LASD argues that this wait time does not even implicate the 5 Second Amendment. LASD Opp. at 9:11-15. To make that argument, LASD 6 construes Plaintiffs' proposed course of conduct as acquiring a CCW permit "on a 7 specific timeline where the agency issuing the permits is confronting unprecedented 8 backlogs following a sea change in the governing law." Id. In other words, 9 constitutional rights must yield to government inconvenience. But Bruen did not 10 describe the proposed course of conduct there as "carrying a handgun without a 11 good reason to do so sufficient to be issued a carry permit," but rather as "carrying 12 handguns publicly for self-defense." Bruen, 597 U.S. at 4; see also Koons v.
 13 Platkin, 2023 WL 3478604, at *18 (D.N.J. May 16, 2023) (plain text implicated by 14 the mere existence of permitting system). That is the exact same course of conduct 15 Plaintiffs here wish to engage in; carrying handguns in public for self-defense, 16 despite LASD's demurrer that it is very, very busy.

17 Even more astonishingly, LASD contends there is no right to a carry permit 18 within any timeframe at all, and that its years-long wait cannot be construed as 19 abusive. LASD Opp. at 9:11-15, 11:5-10. But any inherent time necessary to issue a 20 permit (officials in many states issue concealed carry permits on the spot, "while 21 you wait") is not a blank check to impose years' long delays. It is axiomatic that "a 22 right delayed is a right denied," a maxim that emerged from Gladstone's "justice
 23 delayed is justice denied" proposition. Snow Covered Cap., LLC v. Fonfa, 2023 WL
 24 205774, at *2 (D. Nev. Jan. 17, 2023). LASD may not jettison this hornbook 25 principle.

26 Since Bruen, various courts have tolerated some amount of permit processing 27 time (days or a couple months), but none comes even close to LASD's delay. When 28 the wait is more than a few months long, courts have taken issue. See Antonyuk v.

1 Chiumento, 89 F.4th 271, 315 n.24 (2d Cir. 2023) (30-day review period for firearm
 2 purchase is reasonable); Maryland Shall Issue, Inc. v. Moore, 86 F.4th 1038, 1054
 3 n.6 (4th Cir. 2023) (Keenan, J., dissenting) (finding handgun licensing with a 30-4 day waiting period is permissible, and noting that several states have time limits for 5 CCW permit issuance, but none higher than 90 days); Rogers v. Hacker, 2023 WL 6 5529812, at *8 (S.D. Ill. Aug. 28, 2023) (waiting period of five months to issue a 7 firearm owners ID card constituted a concrete injury); Order Granting Prelim. Inj.
 8 and to Show Cause, Kamenshchik v. Ryder (No. 612719/22) (Nassau Cty., NY Sup.
 9 Ct. Feb. 22, 2024) at p. 13 (accessible at: https://iapps.courts.state.ny.us/
 10 nyscef/ViewDocument?docIndex=YAzIxNWUH83WonX87mAkVg==) (last 11 visited Feb. 27, 2024) (ordering police explanation for 8-month delay in the CCW
 12 permit process); People v. Gunn, 2023 IL App. (1st) 221032, ¶ 28 (90-day wait time 13 for a CCW permit is reasonable); In re D.B., 2023 IL App. (1st) 231146-U, n.1 (51-14 day wait for a firearm owner's ID card is not unconstitutional). LASD's argument 15 that the current situation raises no constitutional issues, and is per se not abusive 16 because it is not intentional (LASD Opp. at 11:5-10), fails to clear the starting gate.

17 Surprisingly, LASD cites a case that ostensibly supports Plaintiffs on this 18 issue. In Thomas v. Chicago Park Dist., the Supreme Court upheld a local 19 regulation that required permits for public assemblies and gave officials 28 days to 20 review applications. 534 U.S. 316, 324 (2002). Ironically, most Californians no 21 doubt would consider California Penal Code section 26205's 120 days (more than 22 four times the 28 days in Thomas) a marked improvement.² And in the other case

23 ² LASD argues that Plaintiffs may not enforce the California Penal Code 24 though Section 1983 actions. LASD Opp. at 1:15-17 & n.2. Plaintiffs do not seek to 25 enforce state law; they seek to enforce the Second Amendment. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 26 1983, 1988. State statutes and state constitutions can inform the decisions of federal 27 courts, even if the state law merely sets a bare minimum standard for government conduct in the face of regulating or infringing on enumerated rights. See generally Torcaso v. Watkins, 367 U.S. 488 (1961) (state law mandating a religious oath in violation of First Amendment is proper subject for federal court adjudication.).

28 Moreover, California's statutory 120-day limit (whether enforceable by non-government parties) is still a standard that acts like a judicial admission by the

1 LASD cited, Southern Oregon Barter Fair v. Jackson County, never-ending wait 2 times were a mere “theoretical possibility,” not being suffered by plaintiffs there as 3 they are actually suffered by Plaintiffs here. 372 F.3d 1128, 1138 (9th Cir. 2004).

4 As to historical laws, LASD cites several laws to defend permitting in 5 general. LASD Opp. at 13:21-14:5. But LASD has marshaled zero evidence of any 6 historical laws that involved the years’ long wait its CCW applicants experience.
 7 And when comparing a modern law or practice to proposed historical analogues, 8 “whether modern and historical regulations impose a comparable burden on the 9 right of armed self-defense” is a central consideration. Bruen, 597 U.S. at 29. There 10 is simply nothing in LASD’s compilation of historical laws that justify its 11 extraordinary wait times.

12 The historical laws presented also fail for other reasons. For example, most 13 of the restrictions only applied to concealed carry, not open carry, which was 14 unrestricted. See, e.g., LASD’s Survey of Historical Laws, passim. In contrast, 15 California generally does not allow open carry, and certainly not without a CCW 16 permit, so CCW permits are the only option. The comparable burden thus differs 17 greatly. Further, most of LASD’s cited laws are from the late 19th century, and were 18 primarily local ordinances, not state laws. But Bruen demands an “enduring 19 American tradition of state regulation.” 597 U.S. at 29, and “the bare existence of 20 these localized restrictions cannot overcome the overwhelming evidence of an 21 otherwise enduring American tradition permitting public carry.” Id. at 67. LASD 22 also cites 20th-century history, which is utterly irrelevant to the analysis. The 23 Supreme Court noted that it would not even bother to address such history, as it was

24 _____
 25 sovereign here on a Procedural Due Process claim. That the Department of Justice 26 does not act to end the illegal wait times and other Penal Code violations described in this case shows its corresponding lack of respect for the Second Amendment.

27 Plaintiffs believe that the Second Amendment requires they be provided 28 permits with greater alacrity than a 120-day statutory period. Regardless of how LASD attempts to frame the relief sought, delays well beyond this length of time even mandated by state law violate the Second Amendment.

1 too far removed from the founding era to shed light on the Founding era 2 understanding of the right's scope. Id. at 66 n.28.

3 Tellingly, LASD presents no laws of any relevance from the Founding era, 4 the critical period.³ To be sure, LASD does marshal evidence of some laws from 5 that general era: explicitly racist laws that have no place here. LASD's Survey of 6 Historical Laws at 1-9. The fact that laws existed prohibiting slaves and Black 7 Americans from having arms does not, and really should not, be exhumed from the 8 nation's skeleton closet to carry water for unconstitutional enactments today. See 9 e.g., Bruen at 62-63 (discussing how despite the Southern States' historical 10 antebellum tradition of disarming blacks from carrying through racist laws, blacks 11 still carried firearms for protection, and further discussing how the commander of 12 the military district set up postbellum to administer the recently-defeated 13 Confederacy struck down such black codes so as to allow carry by blacks in South 14 Carolina). Indeed, the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments terminated the 15 validity of race-based gun control laws, and other courts have properly rejected 16 reliance on such laws in the Bruen context. See, e.g., Baird v. Bonta, 81 F.4th 1036, 17 1047 (9th Cir. 2023) (citing Range v. Att'y Gen. United States of Am., 69 F.4th 96, 18 105 (3d Cir. 2023)). This Court likewise should "give such discriminatory laws 19 little or no weight." Duncan v. Bonta, 2023 WL 6180472, at *22 (S.D. Cal. Sept.
20 22, 2023).

21 Certainly, Bruen triggered a surge in permit applications. But that was nearly 22 two years ago, and Plaintiffs have given LASD more than enough time to adjust to 23 the new status quo. See Decl. of Richard Minnich in Supp. of Pls.' Mot. for Prelim.
24 Inj., ¶ 5-6. But far from improving, LASD's excessive delays have only worsened.

25 ³ "[T]oday's decision should not be understood to endorse freewheeling 26 reliance on historical practice from the mid-to-late 19th century to establish the 27 original meaning of the Bill of Rights." Bruen, 597 U.S. at 83 (Barrett, J., 28 concurring); see also Espinoza v. Montana Dep't of Revenue, 591 U.S. ___, 140 S.
Ct. 2246, 2258 (2020) (practice that "arose in the second half of the 19th century . .
cannot by itself establish an early American tradition" informing our understanding of the First Amendment.).

1 Id. Whether the delay is a product of LASD’s decision to understaff its CCW 2 division, or something else, is not truly relevant. Bruen expressly forbade lengthy 3 wait times that deny ordinary citizens the right to carry; no scienter is required. 597 4 U.S. at 38 n.9. Thus, this Court must order LASD to end its abusive delays, and 5 guarantee that Second Amendment rights are not relegated to “second class” 6 status—or, in LASD’s case, constitutional steerage. The fact that LASD has not 7 already assigned as many personnel as are necessary to liquidate the backlog shows 8 its gross disrespect for the enumerated rights of Californians. A right delayed is a 9 right denied. Unless and until LASD gets its house in order, this Court should 10 allow Plaintiffs to carry without a permit pending a decision on their applications.
 11 See Shuttlesworth v. City of Birmingham, 394 U.S. 147, 151 (1969). More than half 12 the states in the union require no permit at all; thus, it is farcical to entertain the 13 notion that extensive and redundant vetting of law-abiding gun owners that results 14 in years’ long delays is anything but abusive.

15
 16 2. The subjective criteria employed by LASD are patent and unconstitutional.

17 Bruen made clear that permit issuance guidelines must be “narrow, objective, 18 and definite” and not allow for “appraisal of facts, the exercise of judgment, and the 19 formation of an opinion.” Bruen, 597 U.S. at 38 n.9. LASD has implemented the 20 latter sort of scheme, hiding behind California Penal Code sections which 21 themselves are subjective. These subjective determinations are why certain 22 Plaintiffs have been denied permits, in violation of Bruen.

23 a. Plaintiff Velasquez.

24 LASD claims that Plaintiff Velasquez was denied, in part, because of an 25 unintentional discharge in the home. LASD Opp. at 18:1-16. But LASD omits that 26 Velasquez immediately called the police. Chavez Decl., Ex. 2 (Downey Police 27 Department Case Report of April 20, 2021). He also notified the CCW unit. Id., Ex.
 28 1, (at question no. 9). And most critically: Velasquez was issued a CCW permit

1 in August 2021 after the unintentional discharge incident in April 2021. Having 2 thus met all the “objective” requirements for licensure, and in fact receiving a 3 license thereafter, LASD’s subsequent denial of Velasquez’s renewal application 4 could only be the result of the “formation of an opinion” about his suitability for a 5 permit. Id., Ex. 1 (CCW Applicant Cover Page).

6 And regarding the theft of firearms from his vehicle, LASD speculates that 7 he must have failed to lock his vehicle, because there was no damage. But there are 8 ways to break into vehicles without leaving visible damage, such as by wedging the 9 door slightly open and using a rod to hit the unlock button. See Robert Vallelunga, 10 How to Break Into a Car, WikiHow, Dec. 9, 2023, https://www.wikihow.com/
11 Break-Into-a-Car (last visited Feb. 23, 2024). Plaintiff Velasquez stored the firearms 12 consistent with California Penal Code section 25610(a), which allows for storage in 13 the locked vehicle’s trunk. See Decl. of Erick Velasquez in Supp. of Pls.’ Mot. for 14 Prelim. Inj., ¶ 6. Furthermore, Plaintiff Velasquez promptly reported the theft to 15 police, as the law requires. Chavez Decl., Ex. 1 (Vernon Police Department May 4, 16 2023 Report). And although California law makes it a crime to store firearms 17 improperly in a vehicle, Velasquez was not charged with any crime. See Cal. Penal 18 Code § 25140 (West 2024). LASD’s speculation about the how and why of 19 Velasquez’s victimization—absent some indicia of actual negligence or 20 criminality—is again the sort of subjective consideration forbidden under Bruen.
21 597 U.S. at 38 n.9. Thus, in both circumstances, the first resulting from error and the 22 second resulting from sheer victimization, Velasquez took immediate action to 23 promptly report the incidents to the police. The fact that discretion allows LASD to 24 deny Velasquez the permit in the first place is the issue, not how LASD’s discretion
25 was actually exercised in this circumstance. Even in Bruen, that some New Yorkers 26 received permits was not good enough for the Supreme Court to consider New 27 York’s discretionary requirements constitutional.

1 And while unintentional discharges and theft of firearms are admittedly 2 problematic situations, the reality is that there is nothing unusual about them.
 3 Hypocritically, LASD has a well-documented problem with both, having lost over 4 100 firearms as of a 2016 report. See Tony Saavedra, Police might not know where 5 their guns are, and the law says that's OK, Orange Cnty. Reg. (Cal.), (Sept. 28, 6 2016), https://www.ocregister.com/2016/09/28/police-might-not-know-where-their-
 7 guns-are-and-the-law-says-thats-ok/amp/ (last visited Feb. 23, 2024). And 8 following the introduction of a new model of service handgun, many LASD officers 9 had unintentional discharges. See Cindy Chang, Rise in accidental gunshots by L.A.
 10 County deputies follows new firearm, LA Times, (June 13, 2015)
 11 <https://www.latimes.com/local/california/la-me-sheriff-guns-20150614-story.html>
 12 (last visited Feb. 23, 2024).

13 Ostensibly, in order to hide what they know was a subjective denial, LASD 14 marked “other” on the letter they sent Plaintiff Velasquez on the reason for his 15 denial. See Chavez Decl., Ex. 1. Mr. Velasquez was only told about the reason for 16 the denial—the theft of his firearms—when he called LASD for an explanation. See 17 Velasquez Decl. ¶ 8. This Court should vindicate his right to carry and order LASD 18 to promptly issue him a renewal permit.

19 b. CRPA member Partowashraf.

20 Every unflattering allegation LASD makes of Plaintiff California Rifle & 21 Pistol Association, Incorporated (“CRPA”) member Partowashraf is mere 22 recapitulation of allegations his former girlfriend made in an affidavit filed in 23 support of her request for a restraining order against him. LASD Opp. at 6:10-7:2.
 24 Mr. Partowashraf vehemently denies the veracity of those allegations, especially 25 because she made them after she attempted to extort him. See Decl. of Sherwin 26 David Partowashraf in Supp. of Pls.’ Mot. for Prelim. Inj., ¶ 5. Nevertheless, when 27 the state court issued the temporary restraining order against him, he respected the 28 consequences, and surrendered his firearms to the West Valley Police Station. Id. at ¶ 6. What LASD fails to mention is that, upon a hearing, the temporary restraining order was dissolved, and Mr. Partowashraf retrieved his firearms from the police station. Id. at ¶¶ 5-6. He disclosed every detail of the ordeal of this stressful and harrowing saga during the CCW permit application process. Id. at ¶ 7. LASD should not be allowed to deny a constitutional right based on a temporary restraining order, issued upon declaration evidence, which was dissolved upon an actual hearing, and only lasted 24 days. Doing so creates a guilty-when-accused system that flouts fundamental due process standards. Because California Penal Code section 26202(a)(3) commands or allows this result, this Court should rule it unconstitutional.

Clearly, these reasons for denying these individuals carry permits cannot be reconciled with Bruen. The fact is that more than just “model citizens” have Second Amendment rights. See United States v. Daniels, 77 F.4th 337, 342 (5th Cir. 2023) (“[T]he legislature cannot have unchecked power to designate a group of persons as ‘dangerous’ and thereby disarm them,” which would “render the Second Amendment a dead letter.”) Id. at 353. And the Third Circuit, sitting en banc, concluded that they were “confident that the Supreme Court’s references ... do not mean that every American who gets a traffic ticket is no longer among ‘the people’ . . .” Range v. AG United States, 69 F.4th 96, 102 (3d Cir. 2023). Finally, as this brief was being finalized, a ruling from the Northern District of California endorsed Range and concluded that plaintiffs who were former felons but had those convictions “vacated, set aside, or dismissed, and their right to possess firearms restored” are part of “the People” the Second Amendment applies to. See Order Re Summary Judgment, Linton v. Becerra (No 18-cv-07653-JD) (N.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2018), ECF No. 76, at p. 1, 20. If California may not deny former felons with vacated convictions their Second Amendment rights, then certainly a dissolved temporary restraining order that was only in place for a month is not enough to do the same.

1 These Plaintiffs have not been convicted of any disqualifying crime, are not 2 prohibited persons, and cannot be disarmed simply because the government 3 believes them to be generally untrustworthy. And the statute, which permits the 4 discretion that allows this to occur, is unconstitutional.

5 B. Attorney General Bonta’s Opposition.

6 1. Not allowing nonresident carry is constitutionally 7 indefensible.

8 Flying in the face of virtually all the relevant precedents, the State boldly 9 argues that non-residents have no right to carry whatsoever when in California. The 10 State flatly refuses to honor permits issued in other states, and it does not provide a 11 process for nonresidents to even apply for a California CCW permit. The result is 12 that Plaintiff Hoover, as well as CRPA member David Broady, are completely 13 unable to exercise their right to carry when they visit California. Their proposed 14 course of conduct clearly meets the plain text of the Second Amendment, a desire to 15 carry firearms for self-defense when they visit California. Bruen, 597 U.S. at 4; see 16 also Linton, ECF No. 76, at p. 12 (confirming that denying Second Amendment 17 rights to nonresidents constitutes concrete injury, and California’s argument that 18 “only a resident physically present in California may bring a claim for that injury is 19 misdirected.”).

20 The State’s arguments in opposition range from weak to misleading. First, 21 the State imagines a race-to-the-bottom scenario wherein one state’s ultra-relaxed 22 permit issuance scheme effectively supplants the rest. See Def. Rob Bonta’s Opp. to 23 Pls.’ Mot. for Prelim. Inj. (“State’s Opp.”) at 6:6-15. But it does not point to any 24 real-world example, because none exist. Every state permit scheme requires a 25 background check (and usually a training course) as a prerequisite to issuing CCW 26 permits. There is no lawful way to maneuver around those requirements (other than 27 permitless carry).

28 For example, obtaining a Florida CCW required Plaintiff Hoover to 1 “demonstrate competency with a firearm,” which can be completed via various 2 approved training courses. See Acceptable Firearms Training Documentation,

3 Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, https://www.fdac.gov/Consumer-Resources/Concealed-Weapon-License/Applying-for-a-
4 Concealed-Weapon-License/Acceptable-Firearms-Training-Documentation (last 5 visited Feb. 24, 2024). He also had to pass a background check that disqualifies for 6 any felony conviction, violent misdemeanor, a record of drug or alcohol abuse, 7 dishonorable discharge, and much more. See Eligibility Requirements for a Florida
8 Concealed Weapon License, Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer
9 Services, https://www.fdac.gov/Consumer-Resources/Concealed-Weapon-
10 License/Applying-for-a-Concealed-Weapon-License/Eligibility-Requirements (last 11 visited Feb. 24, 2024). The State’s claim that it must discriminate against the 12 permits of other states because they do not sufficiently vet applicants is baseless.

13
14 Moreover, if the State’s theory were true—that other states issue CCW 15 permits without sufficient due diligence—then those states should expect high 16 crime rates among their permit holders. The State argues as much. See State’s Opp.
17 at 21:6-10 & n.19. Yet, it presents no data to support such an argument.

18 The State presents no such data to this Court because the State knows its 19 argument is false and the data does not exist. In separate litigation also involving 20 Attorney General Bonta and Plaintiff CRPA, CRPA presented data from five other 21 states to show that individuals issued CCW permits in those states had nearly 22 nonexistent rates of criminality. One of those five states was the above-referenced 23 Florida. Partly because of that data, the court granted a preliminary injunction. May 24 v. Bonta, 2023 WL 8946212, at *19 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2023). The State asked the 25 Ninth Circuit to stay that injunction, but it refused. See Order on Mot. to 26 Consolidate, May v. Bonta, No. 23-4356 (9th Cir. Dec. 22, 2023), ECF No. 20.1.
27 Although Plaintiffs set the record straight and educated the State on this data mere 28 weeks ago, the State, without presenting a scintilla of data to the contrary to support

1 their position, makes the same demonstrably false argument here. They have been 2 well aware of this argument but have been unable to muster any data in support 3 because, despite a continent’s worth of other sources of such data, none have data 4 supporting the State’s speculative and false claim.

5 Turning to the State’s historical analogues, the most glaring deficiency is the 6 almost total lack of Founding era history. In that era, residents of other states could 7 carry firearms and other weapons around the country, so long as they did not do so 8 “to the fear or terror” of the people, as the State notes. State’s Opp. at 7:14-19
9 (citing 1795 Massachusetts law). Carrying of weapons while traveling was not a 10 new or novel problem at the Founding. The lack of Founding era restrictions on 11 nonresident carry unequivocally dooms the State’s argument under Bruen. The 12 later 19th-century laws that the State presents fare no better. They were almost 13 exclusively concealed carry restrictions which did not affect open carry, thus 14 allowing nonresidents to carry arms openly without a permit. See, e.g., Decl. of 15 Professor Robert Spitzer in Supp. of Def. Rob Bonta’s Opp. to Pls.’ Mot. for 16 Prelim. Inj., ¶¶ 21-36 (citing 15 laws or ordinances from 1871 through 1896 that 17 required licenses to carry, but almost all explicitly applied only to “concealed” or 18 “hidden” weapons). And when it comes to carry restrictions on nonresidents, the 19 State’s expert cites only hunting-related laws (save for one 1899 law pertaining to 20 firearm acquisition), not laws pertaining to peaceable carry for self-defense. See 21 Spitzer Decl., at ¶¶ 73-74.

22 Another State’s expert, Brennan Rivas, claims that open carry was also 23 restricted, but cites only two examples of open carry prohibitions from Texas and 24 West Virginia, the very states the Supreme Court considered outliers in Bruen. See 25 597 U.S. at 65 (“In fact, [besides Texas] only one other State, West Virginia, 26 adopted a similar public-carry statute before 1900.”). Besides those two laws, Rivas 27 mostly tries to justify why more restrictions did not exist but, in the process, admits 28 open carry was permitted. See, e.g., Decl. of Professor Brennan Gardner Rivas in

1 Supp. of Def. Rob Bonta’s Opp. to Pls.’ Mot. for Prelim. Inj., ¶ 22 (acknowledging 2 a “nineteenth century tendency” of not outlawing open carry because of “honor 3 culture”). Elsewhere, Rivas misrepresents the laws she discusses. For example, she 4 states that an 1838 Virginia law punished “habitual” carrying of deadly weapons 5 (Id. at 25), but in the footnote below the text of the law clearly applies only to 6 concealed carry. *Id.*⁴

7 Other of the State’s experts also misrepresent the laws they cite. Plaintiffs’ 8 expert historian has examined the State’s experts faulty and inaccurate 9 characterizations of historical laws, has identified such misrepresentations, and 10 describes some of the more egregious examples of misrepresentations. See Cramer 11 Decl., ¶¶ 5-53, and Ex. 4. The State also attempts to discredit the many examples of 12 historical “travelers’ exceptions” laws that existed, arguing that they were limited 13 and did not apply once someone stopped in a town for more than a short while.
 14 State’s Opp. at 11:7-9 & n.13 (citing 1887 Terr. of N.M. Laws, § 9). Yet California 15 does not extend even that much leeway; if Plaintiff Hoover carried a firearm on his 16 person while he went on a hike or drove from one town to the next, he would be 17 committing a crime.

18 The State’s historical showing, at most, shows a post-Founding and post-19 Reconstruction tradition for licensing schemes in general. But the existence of 20 firearms licensing, whether constitutional or not, is not at issue here. Plaintiffs have 21 licenses and want California to honor them. The State presents almost no history 22 that would justify excluding nonresidents from the right to carry. The only laws it 23 cites to that effect were, save for one 1896 local ordinance, entirely from the 20th 24 century. The Supreme Court is clear that such late-in-time history is not relevant, as 25 the New York law it overturned in Bruen dated to 1911, and the Court explained

26
 27 ⁴ At least one point Rivas makes supports Plaintiffs as to another aspect of 28 their motion: an 1835 Florida law which charged those who wished to carry the inflation-adjusted equivalent of $320, which amount is much less than the over $1,000 La Verne charges. See Rivas Decl., at ¶ 42.

1 that it “will not address any of the 20th-century historical evidence. . . .” Bruen, 597
 2 U.S. at 66 n.28. What is decisive here is the fact that in the 18th and 19th centuries, 3 numerous state courts, and even the Supreme Court, acknowledged that American 4 citizens generally had the right to carry arms wherever they went, even if 5 restrictions on concealed carry were deemed acceptable so long as open carry was 6 allowed. See Cramer Decl., ¶¶ 31-44.

7 As to caselaw, the State presents only pre-Bruen cases for the idea that states 8 may deny nonresidents the right to carry. State’s Opp. at 13:13-14:12 (citing Bach 9 v. Pataki, 408 F.3d 75, 87 (2d Cir. 2005); Culp v. Raoul, 921 F.3d 646, 657 (7th 10 Cir. 2019); and Peruta v. Cnty. of San Diego, 758 F. Supp. 2d 1106, 1119–20 (S.D.
 11 Cal. 2010), aff’d, 824 F.3d 919 (9th Cir. 2016) (en banc)). The one court to grapple 12 with this question after Bruen reached a well-reasoned ruling that supports 13 Plaintiffs’ arguments; this is likely why the State buried an insufficient rebuttal to it 14 in a footnote rather than analyze it in the body of its opposition. State’s Opp. at 15 14:10-12 & n.16 (discussing Commonwealth v. Donnell, No. 2211CR2835 (Mass.
 16 Dist. Ct. Aug. 3, 2023)).

17 The State also contends that a citizen of one of the 27 constitutional carry 18 states would be able to carry in California if this Court grants Plaintiffs their 19 requested injunction. State’s Opp. at 6:8-12. But Plaintiffs have sought only 20 reciprocity for their out-of-state issued permits, not reciprocity with the permitless 21 carry some other states allow.

22 Finally, contrary to the State’s assertion, Plaintiffs have repeatedly sought 23 multiple forms of relief, including that nonresidents be permitted to apply for 24 California CCW permits. In fact, there currently is no procedure for a non-resident 25 like Plaintiff Hoover to apply for a permit. See Pls.’ Mot. for Prelim. Inj. (“Mot.”) 26 at 2:17-3:6 (“California law . . . does not allow permits to be issued to out-of-state 27 residents. . . .”) and 22:14-19 (“Nonresidents are barred in California from 28 obtaining a CCW permit. . . .”); and see Decl. of Stephen Hoover in Supp. of Pls.’

1 Mot. for Prelim. Inj., ¶ 4 (applied for and denied a CCW permit due to not being a 2 California resident); and Complaint at 40:24-41:6 (prayer for relief). Plaintiffs’ 3 proposed order likewise seeks multiple forms of relief, including an order that 4 California honor the permits of other states. While Plaintiffs are required under 5 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 7 to state the relief they seek, they are not required 6 to lay out every possible avenue of alternative or lesser relief the Court may craft.
 7 Nor would such a list of endless possibilities constitute a “concise statement of the 8 relief or Court action the movant seeks.” C.D. Cal. Civ. L.R. 7-4 (emphasis added).
 9 The sole case the State cites involves a situation where the relief requested in the 10 motion contradicted what was in the Notice of Motion. Starks v. Cnty. of Los 11 Angeles, 2022 WL 1344986, at *1 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 28, 2022). There is no such 12 contradiction here. And “if the court can comprehend the basis of the motion and 13 deal fairly with it, technicalities ought to be avoided.” McGarr v. Hayford, 52
 14 F.R.D. 219, 221 (S.D. Cal. 1971).⁵

15 But this Court need not bother with alternative forms of relief. It should grant 16 Plaintiffs the primary relief requested and order California to honor other states’ 17 permits. Merely ordering the State to accept nonresident applications would be very 18 limited relief. Regardless of whatever relief is provided, the State concedes—nay, it 19 is proud—that it treats out-of-state residents as inferiors by providing them no 20 method to exercise their constitutional right to carry in California. One way or 21 another, that situation must end.

22 2. Psychological examinations are inherently suitability
 23 determinations divorced from modern mental health
 24 prohibitions.⁶

25 In Bruen, the Supreme Court expressly rejected suitability determinations.

26 ⁵ The State cynically argues that it lacks adequate notice of a type of 27 injunctive relief that can be imposed on it for providing relief to nonresidents by devoting a significant amount of its opposition brief to discussing the very relief of which it purportedly lacks notice.

28 ⁶ Plaintiffs concede that, due to recent changes in California law that took effect on January 1, 2024, there is now an appeals process for CCW denials. They

1 597 U.S. at 15 & 38 n.9. A psychological examination requirement is the 2 quintessential suitability determination, as it inherently requires “appraisal of facts, 3 the exercise of judgment, and the formation of an opinion.” Id. (quoting Cantwell v.
 4 State of Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 305 (1940)). The State offers several arguments 5 in opposition.

6 First, it asserts that Plaintiffs do not facially challenge the psychological 7 examination. That is false. Plaintiffs’ motion states that Plaintiffs Rigali, Reeves, 8 and Gabaldon do not want to subject themselves to the indignity of such an exam as 9 a precondition of exercising their rights. Mot. at 18 (citing each respective 10 declaration). Plaintiffs’ proposed order likewise asks that La Verne be ordered to 11 stop requiring a psychological examination. And Plaintiffs’ complaint calls for 12 enjoining the Penal Code section that allows psychological examinations. See 13 Complaint at 40:1-3 (prayer for relief).

14 Next, the State argues that Bruen blessed psychological examinations 15 because some of the state shall-issue permitting schemes it approved of had “good 16 moral character” provisions. State’s Opp. at 16:2-24. Yet the State does not point to 17 any other state that requires (now or in the past) psychological examinations of 18 applicants. To Plaintiffs’ knowledge, none exist. The Supreme Court only 19 juxtaposed New York’s discretionary requirement with other states which “often 20 require applicants to undergo a background check or pass a firearms safety course.”
 21 Bruen, 597 U.S. at 38 n.9. Psychological examinations were not within the purview 22 of the Bruen opinion, and none of the 43 existing schemes the Court discussed 23 requires one.

24 Critically, and contrary to the State’s arguments, the Second Amendment’s 25 plain text is undoubtedly implicated here: Plaintiffs wish to carry without having to 26

27 _____
 28 waive the portion of their argument that relied on the lack of an appeal avenue, which presented an independent reason to strike the psychological examination.

1 subject themselves to an invasive psychological examination.⁷ Other courts have 2 ruled that the mere existence of a permit application process to purchase or carry 3 firearms at least implicates the plain text. Koons, 2023 WL 3478604, at *18; 4 Maryland Shall Issue, Inc., 86 F.4th at 1045, reh'g en banc granted, No. 21-2017
 5 (L), 2024 WL 124290 (4th Cir. Jan. 11, 2024) (firearm purchase permit law 6 implicates plain text of the Second Amendment).

7 The State also argues that psychological examinations comport with 8 historical tradition. But a New York court ruled recently that a urinalysis 9 requirement not only has no historical analogue, “but forcing an applicant to submit 10 to urinalysis, in essence, requires them to give up their 4th Amendment rights 11 against unlawful searches and seizures to exercise their 2nd Amendment rights.”
 12 Kamenshchik v. Ryder, supra, at p. 7. If a urinalysis requirement is too invasive, 13 then a psychological examination in which an applicant is questioned at length 14 certainly is too.

15 Nor do the specific historical analogues the State refers to justify the 16 psychological examination. As the State notes, “[p]rior regulation was likely 17 unnecessary because persons of ‘unsound mind’ were often physically isolated. . .
 18 .”⁸ State Opp. at 17:25-18:8. That the founding era dealt with the problem through a 19 different method weakens the State’s argument because, “if earlier generations 20 addressed the societal problem, but did so through materially different means, that 21 also could be evidence that a modern regulation is unconstitutional.” Bruen, 597 22 U.S. at 26-27.

23 None of the State’s analogues involved the preemptive disarmament of 24 ⁷ La Verne’s particular examination has further abuses as well that should 25 independently lead to its being enjoined, even if this Court were to uphold 26 psychological examinations generally. Those issues are discussed infra in Part II.C.2.

27 ⁸ An analogue to this exists today, but it is not the psychological 28 examination, it is involuntary commitment. And if an individual is involuntarily committed, they lose their right to possess firearms under federal law. 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(4).

1 people who are “ordinary, law-abiding, adult citizens.” Bruen, 597 U.S. at 31. All 2 of the laws the State lists governed people who had already demonstrated behavior 3 that led to their disarmament, such as “vagrants” and the intoxicated. State’s Opp.
 4 at 18:3-11. Nor were these permanent disarmaments, unlike failing a psychological 5 examination which renders the individual completely unable to carry a firearm. See 6 Mai v. United States, 974 F.3d 1082, 1090 (9th Cir. 2020) (Bumatay, J., dissenting 7 from denial of en banc) (quoting Henry Care, English Liberties, or the Free-born 8 Subject’s Inheritance 329 in noting that “judicial officials” were authorized to “lock 9 up” “lunatics” or “other individuals with dangerous mental impairments”, but they 10 were “locked up only so long as such lunacy or disorder shall continue, and no 11 longer.”).

12 Most critically, people of unsound mind accessing weaponry is not a new 13 problem, and “when a challenged regulation addresses a general societal problem 14 that has persisted since the 18th century, the lack of a distinctly similar historical 15 regulation addressing that problem is relevant evidence that the challenged 16 regulation is inconsistent with the Second Amendment.” Bruen, 597 U.S. at 26.

17 The State also argues that, despite what Bruen says, some sort of discretion is 18 permitted. State Opp. at 19:11-16. In support, it cites a Second Circuit case with a 19 currently pending certiorari petition to the Supreme Court. Yet even that ruling, 20 while allowing more discretion than the Supreme Court did, still confined it tightly.
 21 “In addressing the catch-all provision, the Antonyuk court used words like 22 ‘modicum’, ‘limited’, ‘minor’ and ‘modest’ in describing the degree of discretion 23 the Licensing Officer could exercise. . . .” Kamenshchik, supra, at p. 6 (discussing 24 Antonyuk v. Chiumento, 89 F.4th 271, 312 (2d Cir. 2023)). Far worse even than 25 Nassau County’s repudiated urinalysis, an invasive, three-hour long psychological 26 examination is far beyond an exercise of “modest” discretion, and it should be 27 enjoined. See Decl. of Jim Carlson in Supp. Of Pls.’ Mot. For Prelim. Inj., ¶ 9.

1 C. La Verne and Flores’s Opposition.⁹

2 1. Bruen expressly prohibits La Verne’s high fees.

3 The City of La Verne swings for the fences, arguing that Bruen’s express 4 warning that imposing an exorbitant fee schedule for a carry permit is 5 unconstitutional is irrelevant dicta, and thus its $1,081 threshold for obtaining a 6 carry permit is “reasonable” and constitutional. See Defs.’ La Verne Police Dep’t 7 and La Verne Chief of Police, Coleen Flores’ Not. of and Opp. to Pls.’ Mot. for 8 Prelim. Inj. (“LV Opp.”) at 5:12-16, 6:19-22; see also Decl. of Acting Chief Sam
 9 Gonzalez in Supp. of Defs.’ City of La Verne and La Verne Chief of Police Colleen 10 Flores’ to Pls.’ Mot. for Prelim. Inj., Ex. 1 (confirming La Verne’s fees total 11 $1,081). But La Verne strikes out. Exorbitant permit fees like La Verne’s are so 12 plainly unconstitutional precisely because, when the Supreme Court hypothesized 13 what sort of obstructions to issuance that hostile issuing authorities might impose 14 on applicants, high fees are one of only two examples it identified. Bruen, 597 U.S.
 15 at 38 n.9. Only in the opposition papers of local governments hostile to enumerated 16 rights can the Supreme Court’s explicit warning about high fees be characterized as 17 dicta.

18 Without a doubt, if any other constitutional right were at issue here, La Verne 19 would be too embarrassed to make the “others are doing it, so we can too!”
 20 argument in support of its exorbitant fee schedule. While it is true that other issuing 21 authorities in Los Angeles County are also engaged in “massive resistance” with 22 similarly exorbitant fee schedules, that they are not defendants in this action has no 23 bearing on whether La Verne’s fee structure survives historical review under Bruen.
 24 That Birmingham, Prince Edward County, and Jackson resisted complying with 25 ⁹ La Verne submitted lengthy objections to Plaintiffs’ declarations, making a 26 variety of complaints that they do not comply with the Federal Rules of Evidence.

 27 But it is elementary that “[d]ue to the urgency of obtaining a preliminary injunction 28 at a point when there has been limited factual development, the rules of evidence do not apply strictly to preliminary injunction proceedings.” Herb Reed Enterprises, LLC v. Fla. Ent. Mgmt., Inc., 736 F.3d 1239, 1250 (9th Cir. 2013).

1 school integration was no defense to Little Rock post-Brown. Similarly, it is no
 2 defense here that other issuing authorities in Los Angeles County are also flouting 3 Bruen's express warning with exorbitant and unconstitutional fee schedules.

4 Moreover, La Verne's "fee matrix" does not prove its point at all. See 5 Gonzalez Decl., Ex. 1. Several of the included cities' fee schedules, while still 6 clearly unconstitutional, are much less expensive than La Verne's, including 7 Alhambra PD ($719), Claremont PD ($618), Glendale PD ($618), Glendora PD
 8 ($493), Irwindale PD ($766), LAPD ($641), LASD ($523), Monrovia PD ($673), 9 Monterey Park PD ($651), Pasadena PD ($707.14), San Marino PD ($766.42), and 10 Whittier PD ($761).¹⁰ Id. The least La Verne could have done was impose a fee 11 schedule in line with most other cities in Los Angeles County. But instead, its fee 12 schedule is second only to Hawthorne PD ($1,133), and hundreds of dollars more 13 than the county average and median as the matrix it submitted shows. Id.

14 But in any event, the fee schedules that other Los Angeles County 15 municipalities are imposing are not the proper yardstick. This is not a relative 16 inquiry; it is an absolute one. And prior to Bruen, almost none of these cities issued 17 CCW permits to anyone. Even densely populated county authorities like LASD 18 rarely issued permits to civilians. So it is not surprising that these authorities are 19 now obstructing Bruen with high fees. Just as courts historically did not look to the 20 jurisdictions most hostile to civil rights to establish the model for integration policy, 21 the Court should not do so here.

22 In stark contrast to Bruen-resisting jurisdictions are the issuing authorities 23 that granted permits to all law-abiding applicants even before Bruen required it. For 24 example, the Riverside County Sheriff's Department charges $195, plus the cost of 25 the training course. This includes the cost of fingerprinting, and like most issuing 26 authorities, Riverside does not require a psychological exam. See Riverside County

27 ¹⁰ The Gonzalez declaration claims a few other cities are also costlier, which 28 La Verne repeats in its brief (LV Opp. at 8:25-9:4), but evidence of those other cities' fees are not included in the matrix La Verne submitted.

1 Sheriff's Department, Permitium, <https://riversideca.permitium.com/ccw/start> (last 2 visited Feb. 22, 2024). Assuming a $250 training course as La Verne's matrix did, 3 the total expense for a Riverside applicant is therefore $445. While $445 is still a 4 unconstitutional barrier to the exercise of a constitutional right, it is still less than 5 half of La Verne's $1,081. And La Verne's fees remain exorbitant, every two years, 6 for each renewal. Assuming a $250 training course, renewals in Riverside are $337, 7 id., while La Verne charges $675 for renewals. And in San Bernardino County, 8 training is done in-house, there is no psychological exam, initial applications cost 9 $396.40, and renewals cost only $192—an absolute comparative bargain compared 10 to La Verne. See San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department, Permitium, 11 <https://sbcasd.permitium.com/ccw/start> (last visited Feb. 22, 2024).

12 Furthermore, as discussed in the Motion, in comparison to CCW permit 13 issuance in other states, La Verne's fees are even more out of line. Plaintiffs 14 provided examples of the fees in Arizona ($60 plus fingerprinting), Texas ($40), 15 Utah ($53.25), and Washington ($36 plus fingerprinting). Mot. at 10:27-11:16. In 16 their complaint, Plaintiffs also listed off Florida ($55), Minnesota ($100), and 17 Nevada ($100.25). See Complaint at ¶ 95. These are the type of states that the 18 Supreme Court had in mind when it referenced 43 states that already have 19 presumptively constitutional shall-issue licensing regimes; not California, which 20 was one of the seven that did not. Bruen, 597 U.S. at 38 n.9. Those pre-Bruen
21 permit schemes do not create the obstructionist model that hostile Californian 22 municipalities seek to justify here. With more than half the country imposing no 23 permit requirement or fee schedule whatsoever between an eligible citizen and their 24 enumerated right to be armed outside of the home, La Verne's $1,081 fee schedule 25 is patently unacceptable.

26 La Verne demurs that “exorbitant” means “exceeding the customary or 27 appropriate limits in intensity, quality, amount, or size.” LV Opp. at 7:5-6 (citing 28 Merriam-Webster Dictionary). Yet that definition perfectly describes La Verne's

1 fee schedule, which even exceeds other egregious fee schedules in other LA County
 2 municipalities as well as those in virtually every other state. If the cost of voter 3 registration or a permit to protest in a public forum was many multiples more 4 expensive in one state than nearly all the others, such a law would be very short 5 lived. See, e.g., Sullivan v. City of Augusta, 511 F.3d 16, 37 (1st Cir. 2007) ($500 6 overcharge for parade permit fee from city’s actual expenses was unconstitutionally 7 excessive); and see Baldwin v. Redwood City, 540 F.2d 1360, 1371-72 (9th Cir.
 8 1976) (invalidating as an unconstitutional tax upon the exercise of First 9 Amendment rights a temporary political sign posting fee that bore no reasonable 10 relationship to the actual cost of sign removal). It should be no different with the 11 Second Amendment, which the Supreme Court assures is not a “second class right.”
 12 McDonald v. City of Chicago, Ill., 561 U.S. 742, 780 (2010).

13 Critically, La Verne invests scant effort in justifying why its fee schedule is 14 significantly higher than most other issuing authorities in California, and absolutely 15 no effort in explaining why its fees are many multiples higher than those of other 16 states. Its core argument is that its fee schedule reflects the supposed reasonable 17 cost it incurs to process applications. LV Opp. at 8:3-15. This is not only 18 unbelievable, given the aforementioned examples, but is also immaterial. The 19 Supreme Court said fees are exorbitant when they “deny ordinary citizens their 20 right to public carry.” Bruen, 597 U.S. at 38 n.9.¹¹ There is no question that many 21 ordinary people cannot afford a $1,081 expense (and another $675 every two years 22 after that), including some of the Plaintiffs. See Decl. of Clarence Rigali in Supp.
 23 Of Pls.’ Mot. For Prelim. Inj., ¶ 6; Decl. of Keith Reeves in Supp. Of Pls.’ Mot. For 24 Prelim. Inj., ¶ 5; Decl. of Cynthia Gabaldon in Supp. Of Pls.’ Mot. For Prelim. Inj., 25 ¶ 5.

26 Moreover, La Verne cites no caselaw in support of this argument. Instead, it

27 ¹¹ La Verne complains that the “[t]he Court in Bruen simply did not elucidate 28 what constitutes an ‘exorbitant’ fee” (LV Opp. at 6:25-26), but as this excerpt from the ruling demonstrates, that simply is not true.

1 criticizes Plaintiffs citation to an unreported case, Murphy v. Guerrero. But Murphy
 2 is useful for its persuasive and illustrative value, 2016 WL 5508998, at *24 (D. N.
 3 Mar. I. Sept. 28, 2016, having dispensed with a $1,000 excise tax because it 4 imposed “a tremendous burden on the rights of responsible law-abiding citizens in 5 the CNMI to obtain handguns.” Id. Given La Verne’s $1,081 fee schedule, it is no
 6 wonder that it pleads with the Court to ignore a ruling that found a similar expense 7 a “tremendous burden.”

8 La Verne also ignores another pre-Bruen case Plaintiffs cited, Kwong v.
 9 Bloomberg, which allowed CCW permit fees amounting to a little over $100 per 10 year because they reflected administrative costs. 723 F.3d 160 (2d Cir. 2013). La 11 Verne clearly has no interest in explaining why its fee schedule is so many times 12 that figure. Nor does it address Invisible Empire Knights of Ku Klux Klan v. City of 13 W. Haven, which held that, while permit fees may cover administrative costs, such 14 costs should be minor and not likely to inhibit anyone from exercising their rights.
 15 600 F. Supp. 1427, 1434 (D. Conn. 1985) (citing U. S. Lab. Party v. Codd, 527 16 F.2d 118, 119 (2d Cir. 1975)). La Verne also disregards Bullock v. Carter, a 17 Supreme Court decision holding that “[t]he city’s interest in recouping the costs of 18 its already existing duty of protecting its citizens in the exercise of their 19 constitutional rights cannot justify the massive burden [the expense] imposes upon 20 those rights.” 405 U.S. 134, 149 (1972). That is exactly what La Verne is doing 21 here, as it insists that unnecessary, laborious, and redundant vetting of citizens who 22 are already eligible to possess firearms is a dire necessity that purportedly justifies 23 its burdensome fee schedule. LV Opp. at 7:10-25. La Verne ignores these 24 authorities because there is no way to distinguish them in good faith. Nor may La 25 Verne fall back on a vague and abstract public safety argument. LV Opp. at 7:10-26 15. Such arguments are forbidden in the Second Amendment analysis and are 27 displaced by a much simpler question: does the challenged law have a well-28 subscribed ratification era precursor. Bruen, 597 U.S. at 26.

La Verne also argues that its police officers did a “studied analysis” and concluded that the fee schedule in place is the cheapest it can possibly be, but does not provide the Court any data or evidence to support this claim, including a copy of the alleged study. See LV Opp at 8:16-21; Gonzalez Decl., ¶¶ 5-8. Plaintiffs find it hard to believe that over $1,000 is anywhere close to the lowest La Verne could go if it truly implemented only the “narrow, objective, and definite” standards that Bruen allows (597 U.S. at 38 n.9), especially when the DOJ already conducts the required background check, and the training course is completed through an outside vendor. There is little left for La Verne to do besides confirming that an applicant is 21 years old, resides within the issuing authority’s jurisdiction, is the recorded owner of the firearms the applicant seeks to carry, and has completed a training course. See Cal. Pen. Code § 26155(a) (West 2024). These are simple, administrative tasks that other cities perform for much less cost. La Verne has not explained for the purpose of meeting its constitutional burden why it performs these simple, administrative tasks at a much higher cost.

Finally, and alternatively, La Verne should bear the costs of its decision to conduct any deeper investigation, or to require an unconstitutional psychological examination, not the applicants. Any interest the City has in recouping such costs does not outweigh the massive infringement on its citizens’ constitutional rights. Bullock, 405 U.S. at 149. Nor does La Verne’s claim that it nets only $40 for each application have any bearing here whatsoever. LV Opp. at 2:22-24. But see Cox v. New Hampshire, 312 U.S. 569, 576-77 (1941).¹² Again, what matters is the infringement to the applicant. Bruen, 597 U.S. at 38 n.9. The focus is not La Verne’s wallet. La Verne’s exorbitant fee schedule is unconstitutional, and it must be enjoined.

¹² Contrary to La Verne’s claim, in other contexts, a fee is constitutionally appropriate if it reimburses a city for its expenses, not nets a city only a modest profit of $40. See id.

1 2. La Verne does not attempt to defend even the more
 2 invidious aspects of its unique psychological exam
 3 requirement.

4 Plaintiffs already discussed the psychological examination's 5 unconstitutionality in Part II.B.2., supra. They will not go on at length about it here, 6 nor is it necessary to do so given that La Verne devoted only three paragraphs to 7 attempting to rebut Plaintiffs' argument. LV Opp. at 9:17-10:8.

8 Nevertheless, it is worth noting that, in addition to challenging the 9 constitutionality of a psychological examination for CCW permitting generally, 10 Plaintiffs also took issue with how La Verne's specific examination is administered.
 11 La Verne did not dispute any of what Plaintiffs argued regarding its examination: 12 that it is administered at a remote location in San Bernardino that takes an hour to 13 get to each way, that it takes several hours, and that it is only offered on weekdays 14 and is thereby inaccessible for people subject to an inflexible Monday through 15 Friday work schedule. Mot. at 17:14-16. La Verne also confirms that the 16 psychological examination is the same one that law enforcement applicants take, 17 but makes no effort to justify why that is necessary in this context. LV. Opp at 18 9:20-22. Plaintiffs do not seek to be police officers, for whom the possibility of 19 using lethal violence is a core aspect of the job; they are private citizens seeking to 20 be armed in the rare instance they face a gravely violent personal threat in public.

21 Thus, even if this Court were to uphold the psychological examination 22 requirement in a vacuum, La Verne's implementation has serious problems that it 23 does not bother to defend. La Verne halfheartedly argues about public safety, 24 stating that enjoining its psychological examination requirement will increase the 25 likelihood that dangerous people will get permits. Yet even though most California 26 issuing authorities do not require psychological examinations, La Verne has no 27 examples of a psychologically-troubled person being issued a permit and going on 28 to commit crimes. Quite the opposite, crime among people with CCW permits is 29 exceedingly rare. The Sheriff of Fresno County, a county which has issued permits

1 without regard to “good cause” for many years and does not require a psychological 2 examination, recently said that, out of its over 12,000 residents with CCW permits, 3 none had committed any crime, violent or otherwise, in at least two years. See Erika

8 D. The Remaining Preliminary Injunction Factors Favor Plaintiffs

9 Plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits, and in a constitutional case, that 10 makes the remaining preliminary injunction factors something close to a formality.
 11 “If a plaintiff bringing such a [constitutional] claim shows he is likely to prevail on 12 the merits, that showing will almost always demonstrate he is suffering irreparable 13 harm as well.” Baird, 81 F.4th at 1042; see also id. at 1044 (quoting Arizona 14 Dream Act Coal. v. Brewer, 757 F.3d 1053, 1069 (9th Cir. 2014)) (“a plaintiff who 15 can show that a statute likely violates the Constitution will also usually show ‘that 16 both the public interest and the balance of the equities favor a preliminary 17 injunction.’”). Controlling Ninth Circuit precedent thus commands Plaintiffs’ 18 success on the remaining Winter factors. Yet even if considered independently of 19 their likelihood of success on the merits, the Plaintiffs clearly prevail on the 20 remaining factors.

21 As to irreparable harm, LASD argues that because Plaintiffs have not faced a 22 deadly attack in public yet, that means no harm has resulted. LASD Opp. at 21:13-23 16. Setting aside that LASD would certainly not feel responsible if a Plaintiff stuck 24 in the backlog is injured or killed in a deadly attack because they were unable to 25 defend themselves, it is a basic principle that “the deprivation of constitutional 26 rights ‘unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury.’” Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 27 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012) (quoting Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976)).
 28 Similarly, the fact that La Verne does not believe that expenses totaling over $1,000

1 to get a CCW permit are a constitutional violation is immaterial. See LV Opp. at 2 10:10-18. If this Court agrees with Plaintiffs that such expense violates their 3 Second Amendment rights, then they have established irreparable harm.

4 For its part, the State argues that there is no irreparable harm because 5 nonresidents have long not been able to carry in California in modern history, and 6 the allowance for a psychological examination has also been in place for many 7 years. State's Opp. at 20. Therefore, according to the State, Plaintiffs unreasonably 8 delayed in bringing this motion, and there is no urgency. Id. What the State omits is 9 that Bruen made Plaintiffs' claims viable, and it is a recent landmark ruling.
10 Further, La Verne's implementation of the challenged psychological exam is only 11 months old. Besides, even if there was unreasonable delay, and there has not been, 12 "[d]elay by itself is not a determinative factor in whether the grant of interim relief 13 is just and proper." Cuviello v. City of Vallejo, 944 F.3d 816, 833 (9th Cir. 2019) 14 (quoting Aguayo for & on Behalf of N.L.R.B. v. Tomco Carburetor Co., 853 F.2d 15 744, 750 (9th Cir. 1988)).

16 Turning to the next factors, when the government is the defendant as in this 17 case, the last two factors of the balancing of the equities as well as the public 18 interest merge. Baird, 81 F.4th at 1040 (citing Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418 19 (2009)). When challenging government action that affects the exercise of 20 constitutional rights, "[t]he public interest . . . tip[s] sharply in favor of enjoining 21 the" law. Klein v. City of San Clemente, 584 F.3d 1196, 1208 (9th Cir. 2009).

22 LASD argues that the balance of the equities and the public interest favor it 23 because, essentially, it is trying its best. But as Plaintiffs have established, even if 24 LASD did not receive one more application, at its current pace it would take over 25 four years for it to clear the existing backlog of first-time applicants. Clearly, LASD 26 must devote several times more resources to CCW permit application processing, 27 so it does not continue to violate the Second Amendment rights of the Plaintiffs and 28

1 thousands of others.¹³ If voter registration took years because only a few public 2 servants were assigned to process registrations, no one would accept the argument 3 that the government was doing its best and could take as long as it needed to get 4 caught up. The constitutional harm would easily be seen as the far greater interest 5 than any difficulty for government. The same applies here because the Second 6 Amendment is not a “second class right.” McDonald, 561 U.S. at 780.

7 LASD also argues that no injunction should issue because the standard for 8 mandatory injunctions is higher. LASD Opp. at 7:15-8:5, 21:20-23:8. But that is 9 immaterial here because this is not a close case, “the facts and law clearly favor the 10 moving party.” Park Vill. Apartment Tenants Ass’n v. Mortimer Howard Trust, 636 11 F.3d 1150, 1160 (9th Cir.2011) (quoting Anderson v. United States, 612 F.2d 1112, 12 1114 (9th Cir.1979)). Besides, if LASD is unable or unwilling to process 13 applications faster, then Plaintiffs requested a form of non-mandatory relief: letting 14 applicants who have already waited for four months carry while there application is 15 pending. LASD argues that this would allow “criminals, mentally ill, drug addicts” 16 and other prohibited people to carry. LASD Opp. at 23:4-8. Plaintiffs suspect that 17 such individuals are not applying for CCW permits, and LASD presents no 18 evidence of the commonality of such applicants. Regardless, Plaintiffs proposed 19 order makes clear that this protection after 120 days would only apply to applicants 20 who have submitted a livescan to the Department of Justice and who are not 21 otherwise prohibited from owning firearms (like criminals, drug addicts, and those 22 who were involuntarily committed are under federal law).

23 The State cites to unnamed and unattached studies that purportedly conclude 24 that more carry of firearms leads to more crime. State’s Opp. at 21:3-10. But as

25 ¹³ LASD also argues that any relief should be limited to the Plaintiffs in this 26 action. LASD Opp. at 24:7-17. This is an unserious suggestion because four 27 different associations are Plaintiffs who have associational standing. See Oregon 28 Advoc. Ctr. v. Mink, 322 F.3d 1101, 1109 (9th Cir. 2003). Each of their members are entitled to relief. Presumably, LASD is not going to ask each applicant if they are a member of one of the Plaintiffs, and then process such individuals faster than others.

1 Plaintiffs have argued, numerous courts (including one in this district) have found 2 that those issued CCW permits have exceedingly low homicide rates, based on 3 government crime data from several different states. See May, 2023 WL 8946212, 4 at *19; Wolford v. Lopez, 2023 WL 5043805, at *32; and Koons, 2023 WL
 5 3478604, at *108. The State honoring permits issued by other states presents no 6 danger, and certainly not a large enough one to justify denying the right of law-
 7 abiding Americans to carry in this state. Similarly, La Verne's fear of mass 8 shootings, LV Opp. at 10:27-11:2, makes no sense in this context. Mass killers are 9 not seeking CCW permits before committing their atrocities. If anything, the 10 possibility of the harm of mass shooters is another reason why Plaintiffs want to be 11 able to exercise their right to carry in a constitutionally timely and affordable 12 manner so they can defend themselves should they find themselves, as others have, 13 in such a horrific scenario.

14 III. CONCLUSION

15 For these reasons as well as those presented in the opening brief and all 16 supporting documents, Plaintiffs pray this Court will vindicate the constitutional 17 right to bear arms.
