1 INTRODUCTION

2 History may not repeat itself, but it frequently rhymes. In 1798, John 3 Adams’s Federalist administration passed the Sedition Act to prohibit false speech 4 about the government. See N.Y. Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254, 273–74 (1964).
5 That partisan tool to censor speech that the government did not like was thankfully 6 repudiated in the “court of history.” Id. Now, more than two centuries later, 7 California seeks to prohibit “materially deceptive” speech about candidates, elected 8 officials, and elections with the same misguided zeal as the Federalists. At the 9 preliminary injunction stage, this Court saw the dangerous parallels of allowing 10 “the government to be an arbiter of truth.” Order Granting Pls.’ Mot. Prelim. Inj.
11 (“Order”) 13, Doc. 14. That same analysis applies at the summary judgment stage, 12 warranting a permanent injunction against AB 2839.

13 Plaintiffs Christopher Kohls, The Babylon Bee (“The Bee”), and Kelly Rickert 14 want to speak about politicians and politics. They regularly create and post articles, 15 videos, and memes on their online accounts about figures like Donald Trump and 16 Gavin Newsom. Much of their content parodies candidates and elected officials to 17 criticize, ridicule, or poke fun. This type of satire has “played a prominent role in 18 public and political debate.” Hustler Mag., Inc. v. Falwell, 485 U.S. 46, 54 (1988).
19 But AB 2839 regulates or prohibits these posts before and after elections because 20 they qualify as “materially deceptive” and are “likely to harm the ... electoral 21 prospects of a candidate.” Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(1).

22 “[W]hatever the challenges of applying the Constitution to ever-advancing 23 technology” like digitally altered content, “the basic principles of the First 24 Amendment do not vary.” Order 21 (cleaned up). And AB 2839 suffers from a host of 25 constitutional infirmities. It restricts and compels core political speech based on 26 content, viewpoint, and speaker identity. It ignores less-restrictive alternatives that 27 don’t stifle free expression. It’s overbroad, prohibiting much protected speech like 28

1 hyperbole and parody campaign ads. It’s also vague, policing what’s true or false 2 based on subjective terms, like “materially deceptive” and “reasonably likely to 3 harm ... electoral prospects” that give enforcement officials unbridled discretion to 4 suppress speech that’s critical of the government.

5 “[S]ettled principles about freedom of expression ... have served the Nation 6 well over many years, even as one communications method has given way to 7 another.” Moody v. NetChoice, LLC, 603 U.S. 707, 733–34 (2024). But California 8 seeks awesome powers to regulate “disinformation or misinformation” and shows no 9 signs of relenting. X Corp. v. Bonta, 116 F.4th 888, 896, 904 (9th Cir. 2024) 10 (ordering injunction against enforcement of California law mandating disclosures by 11 social media companies); McDonald v. Lawson, 94 F.4th 864, 868 (9th Cir. 2024) 12 (mooting challenge against California law censoring speech about COVID-19). This 13 Court already preliminary enjoined California’s misguided efforts to censor political 14 speech here. It should grant Plaintiffs summary judgment, declare AB 2839 facially 15 invalid, and permanently enjoin Defendants from enforcing it against Plaintiffs or 16 against anyone else.

17 STATEMENT OF FACTS

18 I. Plaintiffs speak and post about politics.

19 Kohls, The Bee, and Rickert speak and post content about political 20 candidates, elected officials, and elections. Statement of Undisputed Facts Supp.
21 Pls.’ Mots. Summ. J. (“PSUF”) ¶¶ 16, 24, 53, 75. Under the handle “MrReagan,” 22 Kohls is a content-creator who posts parody videos on YouTube, Rumble, and X, 23 commenting on and satirizing political figures and policies. Id. ¶¶ 54–60. The Bee 24 operates a news site, babylonbee.com, with the tagline “Fake news you can trust.” 25 Id. ¶¶ 15–16. The Bee writes satirical articles about faith, politics, and culture on 26 its website, and publishes its articles on X, Facebook, and Instagram, in addition to 27
28

1 posting videos on Rumble and YouTube. Id. ¶¶ 16–18. Rickert is an attorney 2 residing in California who writes a blog commenting on politics, elections, and 3 culture. Id. ¶¶ 66, 69–75. She also posts and reposts content like memes, videos, 4 and other satirical (and not satirical) content about candidates and elected officials 5 on X, Facebook, and Instagram to thousands of subscribers and followers. Id. ¶¶ 77– 6 81. Plaintiffs all utilize satire and parody to expose absurdity, mock foolishness, and 7 highlight hypocrisy in politics and culture.

8 II. Plaintiff Kohls’s first Harris Parody Video catalyzes AB 2839’s 9 passage.

10 On July 26, 2024, Kohls posted a fictitious ad parodying Kamala Harris’s 11 campaign (“Harris Parody Video”) on X, Rumble, and YouTube. Id. ¶ 56. Kohls 12 created the video using Artificial Intelligence (“AI”) to mimic then-Vice President 13 Harris’s voice and by using real clips of Harris speaking at campaign rallies, news 14 conferences, and other events. Id. ¶ 57. In the video, “Harris” makes exaggerated 15 and hyperbolic statements, like thanking President Biden for exposing “his senility 16 at the debate” and claiming she doesn’t “know the first thing about running the 17 country.” Id.

18 That same day, Elon Musk, the owner of X, reposted Kohls’s video, causing it 19 to go viral. Id. ¶¶ 56, 150. Two days later, Governor Newsom posted a screenshot of 20 a news story discussing Musk’s repost of the Harris Parody Video, asserting that 21 the video “should be illegal” and promising to sign “a bill in a matter of weeks to 22 make sure it is.” Id. ¶ 151.

23 III. AB 2839 targets political speech.

24 Taking its cue from Governor Newsom, the California legislature quickly 25 passed AB 2839. Id. ¶¶ 152–53. On September 17, Newsom signed AB 2839 into 26 law, and it immediately went into effect. Id. ¶ 154. On that same day, Newsom 27 made another X post reposting his comment from July and declaring that he had 28

1 “just signed a bill to make [the Harris Parody Video] illegal in the state of 2 California.” Id. ¶ 155. AB 2839 prohibits certain speech about politics and 3 politicians and threatens those who post prohibited content with significant 4 penalties.

5 A. AB 2839 prohibits speech related to elections.

6 AB 2839 prohibits “materially deceptive content,” meaning “audio or visual 7 media that is intentionally digitally created or modified, ... such that the content 8 would falsely appear to a reasonable person to be an authentic record of the content 9 depicted in the media.” Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(f)(8)(A). AB 2839 bans any person or 10 entity from “knowingly” distributing with “malice” “an advertisement or other 11 election communication containing materially deceptive content of”:

12 (A) “A candidate for ... office in California portrayed as doing or saying 13 something that the candidate did not do or say if the content is reasonably 14 likely to harm the reputation or electoral prospects of a candidate”; 15 (B) “An elections official portrayed as doing or saying something in connection 16 with an election in California that the elections official did not do or say if 17 the content is reasonably likely to falsely undermine confidence in the 18 outcome of one or more election contests”;

19 (C) “An elected official portrayed as doing or saying something in connection 20 with an election in California that the elected official did not do or say if 21 the content is reasonably likely to harm the reputation or electoral 22 prospects of a candidate or is reasonably likely to falsely undermine 23 confidence in the outcome of one or more election contests”; or 24 (D) “A voting machine, ballot, voting site, or other property or equipment 25 related to an election in California portrayed in a materially false way if 26 the content is reasonably likely to falsely undermine confidence in the 27

28

1 outcome of one or more election contests.” Id. § 20012(b)(1).

2 “Advertisement” and “election communication” include “any general or public 3 communication ... that is broadcast by or through television, radio, telephone, or 4 text, distributed through the internet, or disseminated by print media, including 5 billboards, video billboards or screens, and other similar types of communications” 6 that concern candidates, ballot measures, or voting. Id. § 20012(f)(1), (5).

7 B. AB 2839 prohibits satire or parody without a disclaimer.

8 An early version of AB 2839 exempted “satire or parody.” PSUF ¶ 163. But 9 after Gov. Newsom’s X post condemning the Harris Parody Video, the Senate struck 10 the exemption. Id. ¶¶ 162–63.

11 For satirical or parodic content to comply with the law, “the communication” 12 must “include[] a disclosure stating “This ____ has been manipulated for purposes of 13 satire or parody.” Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(3). The disclaimer must “appear in a 14 size that is easily readable by the average viewer and no smaller than the largest 15 font size of other text appearing in the visual media.” Id. § 20012(b)(2)(B)(i). It must 16 “appear for the duration of the video.” Id. And for audio-only content, “the disclosure 17 shall be read in a clearly spoken manner and in a pitch that can be easily heard by 18 the average listener, at the beginning of the audio, at the end of the audio, and, if 19 the audio is greater than two minutes in length, interspersed within the audio at 20 intervals of not greater than two minutes each.” Id. § 20012(b)(2)(B)(ii).

21 C. AB 2839 threatens speakers with lawsuits, damages, equitable 22 relief, and attorney’s fees.

23 AB 2839 threatens violators with several forms of punishment. It allows any 24 “recipient of materially deceptive content ... , candidate or committee participating 25 in the election, or elections official” to sue someone who posts or reposts prohibited 26 content. Id. § 20012(d). The definition of “recipient” extends to a “person who views, 27 hears, or otherwise perceives an image or audio or video file” prohibited by AB 2839.

1 Id. § 20012(f)(9). A plaintiff may seek equitable relief and request “general or 2 special damages.” Id. § 20012(d)(1), (2). Further, the court “shall ... award a 3 prevailing plaintiff reasonable attorney’s fees and costs.” Id.

4 D. AB 2839 applies differently to different speakers.

5 AB 2839 applies differently depending on who is speaking. Id. § 20012(a)(4).
6 First, candidates can portray “themselves as doing or saying something that the 7 candidate did not do or say if the content includes a disclosure stating “This ____ has 8 been manipulated.” Id. § 20012(b)(2). The disclaimer must meet the same size and 9 duration requirements described above for satire and parody. Id. § 20012(b)(2)(B).

10 Second, AB 2839 places relaxed requirements on broadcasting stations 11 covering news events. AB 2839 “does not apply to a broadcasting station” covering a 12 news activity if it “clearly acknowledges ... in a manner that can be easily heard or 13 read by the average listener or viewer, that the materially deceptive content does 14 not accurately represent any actual event, occurrence, appearance, speech, or 15 expressive conduct.” Id. § 20012(e)(1). AB 2839 also doesn’t apply to broadcasters 16 “paid to broadcast materially deceptive content” so long as the broadcaster has 17 “prohibition and disclaimer requirements” consistent with AB 2839 and provides 18 those disclaimer requirements to its advertisers. Id. § 20012(e)(2). Broadcasters are 19 also exempt if federal law requires them to air the prohibited content. Id. Finally, 20 broadcasters and “internet websites” are exempt from “general or special damages” 21 if they publish prohibited content that they “did not create.” Id. § 20012(d)(2).

22 Third, AB 2839 exempts print or online periodicals “if the publication clearly 23 states that the materially deceptive content does not accurately represent any 24 actual event, occurrence, appearance, speech, or expressive conduct.” Id.
25 § 20012(e)(3).

26 Fourth, the law does not apply to “an interactive computer service, as defined 27
28

1 in Section 230(f)(2) of Title 47 of the United States Code.” Id. § 20012(e)(4).

2 IV. AB 2839 regulates Plaintiffs’ speech.

3 The Bee, Kohls, and Rickert have all posted content covered by AB 2839 and 4 intend to do so during future elections. PSUF ¶¶ 24–27, 29, 56, 58–60, 64, 98–102.
5 Before, during, and after the 2024 election, The Bee posted satirical articles about 6 Presidential candidates Donald Trump and Kamala Harris, Vice Presidential 7 candidates J.D. Vance and Tim Walz, President Biden, and voting in California, 8 among other topics. Id. ¶¶ 25–26. Those articles include digitally altered images of 9 the candidates or other elected officials discussing the candidates. Id. ¶¶ 21, 27.

10 Many have mistaken The Bee’s satirical articles for news articles. Id. ¶ 31.
11 For example, Donald Trump once presumed an article titled “Twitter Shuts Down 12 Entire Network to Slow Spread Of Negative Biden News” was a real news article 13 and retweeted it. Id. ¶ 32. The Bee’s articles have also spurred outlets like Snopes 14 and USA Today to check them for factual accuracy. Id. ¶¶ 33–36. Snopes and USA 15 Today have fact-checked dozens of satirical articles posted by The Bee, including 16 articles titled “Ocasio-Cortez Appears on ‘Price Is Right,’ Guesses Everything is 17 Free”; “CNN Purchases Industrial-Sized Washing Machine To Spin News Before 18 Publication”; and “Ninth Circuit Court Overturns Death of Ruth Bader Ginsburg.” 19 Id. USA Today consulted fifteen different sources before concluding that the Justice 20 Ginsburg article was, in fact, satire. Id. ¶ 37.

21 During the 2024 election, Kohls posted six Kamala Harris parody campaign 22 ads featuring the AI-generated “voice” of Kamala Harris. Id. ¶ 58. Kohls also posted 23 other political videos, many (but not all) containing AI-generated content, like a 24 parody of a Kamala Harris/Tim Walz phone call, a satirical speech by Elizabeth 25 Warren endorsing Kamala Harris, another parody campaign ad featuring Joe Biden 26 gaffes, and a satirical video of Governor Newsom defending California’s attempts to 27
28

1 censor satire and parody. Id. ¶¶ 59–60. Except for the fictitious Biden ad, Kohls 2 labeled all of these videos as “parody,” while none of them have (or reasonably can 3 have) AB 2839’s required disclaimer. Id. ¶¶ 56, 58–59.

4 Before Gov. Newsom signed AB 2839, Rickert posted or reposted digitally 5 altered memes and other content about Kamala Harris, Tim Walz, politics, society, 6 and cultural and moral issues. Id. ¶ 81. She discovered Kohls’s video from Gov.
7 Newsom’s September 17 X post. Id. ¶ 86. She wanted to repost this and other Kohls 8 videos about Kamala Harris. Id. ¶¶ 83–85. But she refrained because of AB 2839.
9 Id. ¶¶ 82, 87. After the election, and after this Court preliminarily enjoined 10 enforcement of AB 2839, Rickert reposted a digitally altered video depicting a 11 fictitious conversation between President Trump and former President Obama at 12 former President Carter’s funeral. Id. ¶ 103a. She also reposted The Bee’s article 13 Gavin Newsom Demands Answers from Whoever’s in Charge of California, which 14 features a digitally altered image of Governor Newsom. Id. ¶ 103b.

15 The Bee, Kohls, and Rickert intend to post content similar to the content 16 described above during future elections—including content about elected officials 17 and candidates appearing on the ballot in California. Id. ¶¶ 29, 64, 99–102. Should 18 former Vice President Harris run for California governor in 2026, see id. ¶ 104, 19 Kohls’s parody campaign ads, The Bee’s satirical articles and memes about Harris, 20 and Rickert’s social media posts about Harris, all of which remain publicly available 21 online, will again violate AB 2839.

22 Neither The Bee, Kohls, nor Rickert want to, nor intend to, include AB 2839’s 23 required disclaimer in their future posts. Id. ¶¶ 191–95. Nor do The Bee or Kohls 24 intend to refrain from posting satirical or other content that violates AB 2839. Id.
25 ¶¶ 196–97.

1 V. The California legislature acknowledges that AB 2939 restricts core 2 political speech.

3 Through the legislative process, California’s legislature acknowledged AB 4 2839’s regulation of speech. E.g., Id. ¶ 156. For example, the Assembly Committee 5 on the Judiciary published an analysis of the bill, acknowledging that AB 2839 6 “implicates both the right to speak about elections, as well as the right to receive 7 information regarding them,” attempted to regulate “political speech,” and would be 8 subject to “strict scrutiny.” Id. ¶ 157. The bill still advanced with supermajorities in 9 both houses. Id. ¶ 165.

10 VI. This Court preliminarily enjoined AB 2839 because it attempts to 11 “bulldoze” the First Amendment.

12 Kohls, The Bee, and Rickert all filed suit and moved for a preliminary 13 injunction against AB 2839. See generally V. Compls., Docs. 1, 21. This Court 14 granted Kohls’s motion to facially enjoin enforcement of AB 2839 (Order 21) and 15 later expressly extended this preliminary injunction to protect The Bee and Rickert.
16 See Order on Inj., Doc. 22 at 3.

17 In its initial Order, this Court held that AB 2839 facially restricts speech by 18 “specifically target[ing] speech within political or electoral content pertaining to 19 candidates, electoral officials, and other election communication.” Order 10. This 20 was a “content-based regulation that seeks to limit public discourse.” Id. Further, 21 California’s interest in “free and fair elections ... does not give legislators unbridled 22 license to bulldoze over the longstanding tradition of critique, parody, and satire 23 protected by the First Amendment.” Id. at 11–12. The Court also ruled that 24 California has less-restrictive means to achieve its interest, like counter-speech, 25 showing that AB 2839 fails to satisfy strict scrutiny. Id. at 10–14.

26 The Court also preliminarily enjoined the satire-or-parody disclaimer 27 requirement. Id. at 15. That “requirement forces parodists and satirists to speak a 28

1 particular message that they would not otherwise speak, which constitutes 2 compelled speech that dilutes their message.” Id. at 15 (cleaned up). The disclaimer 3 rule also fails narrow tailoring because its “size requirements for the” disclaimer 4 “would take up an entire screen,” drowning out the speaker’s message. Id.

5 After entry of the preliminary injunction, the parties agreed to proceed to 6 summary judgment. See Order Re: Stipulation for Summ. J. Briefing Schedule, Doc.
7 26; Order to Modify Summ. J. Briefing Schedule, Doc. 43.

8 STANDARD OF REVIEW

9 The Court “shall grant summary judgment” if the Plaintiffs show “there is no 10 genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a 11 matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

12 ARGUMENT

13 AB 2839 is unconstitutional. (I) It regulates core political speech protected 14 under the First Amendment and Article 1, Section 2 of the California Constitution 15 and fails strict scrutiny. (II) It’s overbroad and vague on its face and as applied. (III) 16 Plaintiffs can also show they’re entitled to permanent relief. For these reasons, the 17 Court should enter summary judgment in favor of Plaintiffs, permanently enjoin 18 Defendants’ enforcement of AB 2839, and declare AB 2839 unconstitutional facially 19 and as applied to Plaintiffs.

20 I. AB 2839 unconstitutionally regulates protected speech.¹

21 AB 2839 restricts certain speech about politics and politicians, discriminating 22

23 ¹ AB 2839 violates Article I, Section 2, of the California Constitution for all of the 24 same reasons that it violates the First Amendment of the United States 25 Constitution. See, e.g., Order 16 (“Under current case law, the California state right 26 to freedom of speech is at least as protective as its federal counterpart.”); City of 27 Montebello v. Vasquez, 1 Cal. 5th 409, 421 n.11 (2016) (“[T]he California liberty of speech clause is broader and more protective than the free speech clause of the First Amendment.”); Delano Farms Co. v. Cal. Table Grape Comm’n, 4 Cal. 5th 1204,

1 based on content, viewpoint, and speaker. It compels speech too. All of which calls 2 for the strictest of scrutinies. E.g., Green v. Miss U.S. of Am., LLC, 52 F.4th 773, 3 791 (9th Cir. 2022) (explaining content-based speech compulsion warrants strict 4 scrutiny); Boyer v. City of Simi Valley, 978 F.3d 618, 621–23 (9th Cir. 2020) 5 (explaining ordinance that “prefers speakers likely to spread [government-favored] 6 messages” triggers strict scrutiny). Here, the law is “presumptively invalid,” and 7 California “bears the burden of proving the constitutionality of its actions.” United 8 States v. Playboy Ent. Grp., Inc., 529 U.S. 803, 816–17 (2000) (cleaned up). Because 9 it cannot meet this high bar, this Court should enjoin the statute on this basis 10 alone.

11 A. AB 2839 restricts core political speech.

12 “Political speech ... is at the core of what the First Amendment is designed to 13 protect.” Morse v. Frederick, 551 U.S. 393, 403 (2007) (cleaned up). It “is a 14 precondition to enlightened self-government and a necessary means to protect it.” 15 Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm’n, 339 (2010). So the First Amendment 16 broadly protects speech about political candidates, ballot measures, and 17 controversial political topics “to assure the unfettered interchange of ideas for the 18 bringing about of political and social changes desired by the people.” McIntyre v.
19 Ohio Elections Comm’n, 514 U.S. 334, 346 (1995) (cleaned up). Laws that single out 20 political speech for disfavored treatment “strike[] at the heart of the First 21 Amendment.” Victory Processing, LLC v. Fox, 937 F.3d 1218, 1223 (9th Cir. 2019).

22 AB 2839 facially restricts political speech. It prohibits “materially deceptive” 23 audio or visual communications that portray a candidate or elected official doing or 24 saying things he or she didn’t do or say and that is likely to harm a candidate’s 25

26 _____
27 1221 (2018) (“[O]ur case law interpreting California’s free speech clause has given 28 respectful consideration to First Amendment case law for its persuasive value.”).

1 reputation or electoral prospects. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(1)(A), (C). It also 2 prohibits similarly deceptive content of certain public officials, ballots, or voting 3 mechanisms that is “reasonably likely to falsely undermine confidence in the 4 outcome” of an election. Id. § 200012(b)(1)(B), (C), (D).

5 This prohibition covers satire and parody by explicitly requiring such speech 6 to include a disclaimer. Id. § 20012(b)(3). For example, Kohls and The Bee created 7 fictitious ads parodying Kamala Harris, Gavin Newsom, and Elizabeth Warren 8 during the 2024 election. PSUF ¶¶ 21, 56, 59. Because these ads used generative-AI 9 to reproduce the candidate or official’s voice, they “falsely appear[ed] ... authentic.” 10 Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(f)(8); see, e.g. PSUF ¶ 62. And because the videos portrayed 11 these politicians saying things they did not say without the prescribed disclaimer, 12 they violated the law. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b).

13 Defendants agree. According to the State, a “voter who encountered [the 14 Harris Parody Video] ... could have concluded ... that it was real.” Opp’n Pl.s’ Mot.
15 Prelim. Inj. (“Opp’n to MPI”) 21, Doc. 9 (emphasis added). Thus, a “parody or satire 16 that falls within the scope of AB 2839” must include “express notice” by including a 17 disclaimer that the “content has been manipulated.” Id.

18 Worse still, AB 2839 deems parody and satire “materially deceptive” even 19 when most people understand it’s a joke. After all, a “reasonable person” 20 understands that a satire or parody cannot “reasonably [be] interpreted as stating 21 actual facts.” Hustler, 485 U.S. at 50. But the law does not care whether the parody 22 actually fools someone. Instead, content need only “falsely appear ... authentic” in 23 some respect to violate the law. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(f)(8). Since parody “imitates 24 the characteristic style of an author or a work for comic effect or ridicule,” much 25 digitally created parody will run afoul of the law. Campbell v. Acuff-Rose Music, 26 Inc., 510 U.S. 569, 580 (1994).

27 Restricting political satire and parody campaign ads regulates speech that 28

1 lies at the heart of the First Amendment. “Nothing is more thoroughly democratic 2 than to have the high-and-mighty lampooned and spoofed.” Falwell v. Flynt, 805 3 F.2d 484, 487 (4th Cir. 1986) (Wilkinson, J., dissenting from denial of rehearing). At 4 its core, speech ridiculing politicians and elected officials is one form of criticizing 5 the government. And “civil penalties for criticisms on the government like those 6 sanctioned by AB 2839 have no place in our system of governance.” Order 10.

7 Defendants seem to believe that false speech isn’t generally protected. But 8 that’s incorrect. As this Court already recognized, there is no categorical First 9 Amendment exception for false speech. Order 9–10 (citing United States v. Alvarez, 10 567 U.S. 709, 719–22 (2012) (plurality)). Parody and satire are the most obvious 11 examples of protected speech that isn’t literally true. Hustler, 485 U.S. at 50. Same 12 goes for hyperbole and even “innocent mistake[s] of fact.” Old Dominion Branch No.
13 496, Nat. Ass’n of Letter Carriers, AFL-CIO v. Austin, 418 U.S. 264, 277 (1974).
14 “[S]ome false statements are inevitable if there is to be an open and vigorous 15 expression of views....” Alvarez, 567 U.S. at 718 (plurality).

16 Indeed, false speech can be regulated only if it falls within historical 17 exceptions to the First Amendment for things like defamation or fraud. Id. at 717 18 (plurality). These “traditional categories [of expression] long familiar to the bar” are 19 “well-defined and narrowly limited.” United States v. Stevens, 559 U.S. 460, 468–69 20 (2010). And they “typically require proof of specific or tangible harm” or “a material 21 benefit to the speaker.” Animal Legal Def. Fund v. Wasden, 878 F.3d 1184, 1194–95 22 (9th Cir. 2018); Alvarez, 567 U.S. at 719 (Breyer, J., concurring) (same). But 23 California justifies its political deepfake ban by pointing to decidedly intangible 24 types of harm: unquantifiable harm to a depicted candidates’ electoral prospects 25 and the vague harm to “free and fair” elections. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(a). Alvarez 26 would not have come out the way it did if vague “harms to society” (Opp’n to MPI 27 12) were sufficient.

1 And AB 2839 goes far beyond any historical exceptions. Take defamation.
2 California’s law “extends beyond the legal standard for defamation” in several ways.
3 Order 8. It doesn’t just protect a candidate’s reputation—the “essence of libel.” 4 Monitor Patriot Co. v. Roy, 401 U.S. 265, 275 (1971). Instead, it seeks to protect the 5 “reputation or electoral prospects of a candidate,” as well as the public’s “confidence” 6 in an election. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(1) (emphasis added). The law covers 7 content like satire that isn’t even “reasonably capable of sustaining a defamatory 8 meaning.” Knieval v. ESPN, 393 F.3d 1068, 1073 (9th Cir. 2005) (cleaned up). It 9 doesn’t require proof of an “actual injury” either. Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 10 U.S. 323, 349 (1974). It’s enough if content is “‘reasonably likely’ to ‘harm’ the 11 amorphous ‘electoral prospects’ of a candidate or elected official.” Order 8.

12 That is a far-reaching and unbounded standard. Unlike defamation law, AB 13 2839 doesn’t limit potential plaintiffs to persons actually harmed by false 14 statements. Instead, it deputizes the government or any “recipient of materially 15 deceptive content” to sue. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(d)(1). Giving the government this 16 type of “broad censorial power” is “unprecedented in [the Supreme] Court’s cases or 17 in our constitutional tradition.” Alvarez, 567 U.S. at 723 (plurality). Plus, allowing 18 “any person with knowledge of the [false statement] to file a complaint” creates the 19 “real risk” of malicious lawsuits that chill protected speech. Susan B. Anthony List 20 v. Driehaus, 573 U.S. 149, 164 (2014) (cleaned up).

21 Analogizing to fraud doesn’t work either. Idaho attempted a similar 22 rhetorical move when it sought to outlaw misrepresentations made to gain entry to 23 agricultural production facilities. Wasden, 878 F.3d at 1194. But the Ninth Circuit 24 recognized that “some lies” to gain entry to a building “quite simply do not inflict 25 any material or legal harm on the deceived party.” Id. at 1196. So too here. Fraud 26 typically requires proof of materiality plus reliance plus an actual injury. Alvarez, 27 567 U.S. at 734 (Breyer, J., concurring) (citing Restatement (Second) of Torts § 525 28

1 (1976)). But unlike fraud to “secure moneys,” “obtain records or gain employment,” 2 AB 2839 prohibits lies that don’t have any material effect let alone cause any 3 material harm to the portrayed subject. Wasden, 878 F.3d at 1194–95.

4 For example, it’s implausible that Kohls’s fictitious campaign ads or The 5 Bee’s satirical news articles materially affected Kamala Harris’s electoral prospects 6 by duping voters into believing something false about her. To be sure, someone 7 somewhere may have missed the joke. See Farah v. Esquire Mag., 736 F.3d 528, 536
8 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (“[I]t is the nature of satire that not everyone ‘gets it’ 9 immediately.”). But that’s not the test. Id. What matters is that a reasonable person 10 understands that the videos aren’t meant to be taken literally. Id. at 538 (protecting 11 satire because reader “could not reasonably have taken the story literally”); Hustler, 12 485 U.S. at 50 (protecting parody that “could not reasonably have been interpreted 13 as stating actual facts”).

14 Given that these analogies don’t work, California is really arguing for 15 “government authority to compile a list of subjects about which false statements are 16 punishable.” Alvarez, 567 U.S. at 723 (plurality). Accepting that argument would 17 lead to the slipperiest of slopes. It would allow the state to prohibit misinformation 18 about the COVID-19 pandemic that might harm the public health. See Wash.
19 League for Increased Transparency & Ethics v. Fox News, 19 Wash. App. 2d 1006 20 (2021) (rejecting argument that false news about pandemic is “analogous” to 21 defamation and other unprotected speech). It could perhaps sanction false 22 statements about public figures that cause emotional distress. Hustler, 485 U.S.
23 at 50 (rejecting this type of claim). And it might even permit the State to enact 24 modern-day blasphemy laws prohibiting “misinformation” about religion or gender 25 ideology, “not to force conscience by punishment, but to preserve the peace of the 26 country.” Updegraph v. Commonwealth, 11 Serg. & Rawle 394, 1824 WL 2393, at 27 *12 (Pa. 1824) (describing blasphemy as “licentiousness, endangering the public 28

1 peace”).² California seeks power that “has no clear limiting principle”—something 2 the Constitution does not tolerate. Alvarez, 567 U.S. at 723 (plurality).

3 At base, California is arguing, as have a precious few states before it cracking 4 down on “election misinformation,” that “the election context gives the government 5 broader authority to restrict speech.” Commonwealth v. Lucas, 34 N.E.3d 1242, 6 1253–54 (Mass. 2015) (calling this argument “remarkable”). In fact, “[t]he opposite 7 is true.” Id.; accord 281 Care Comm. v. Arneson, 766 F.3d 774, 782–83 (8th Cir.
8 2014) (applying a higher standard of scrutiny to election misinformation regulation 9 than to regulation of other falsehoods). “[T]he First Amendment has its fullest and 10 most urgent application to speech uttered during a campaign for political office.” 11 Ariz. Free Enter. Club’s Freedom Club PAC v. Bennett, 564 U.S. 721, 734 (2011) 12 (cleaned up). “It is essential to a healthy democracy that ‘debate on public issues be 13 uninhibited, robust, and wide-open.’” Order 11–12 (quoting Sullivan, 376 U.S. at 14 270). “Regulations of political speech therefore trench upon an area in which the 15 importance of First Amendment protections is at its zenith.” Wash. Post v.
16 McManus, 944 F.3d 506, 513–14 (4th Cir. 2019) (cleaned up). In fact, “it might be 17 maintained that political speech simply cannot be banned or restricted as a 18 categorical matter.” Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 340. Yet California wants to police 19 the public discourse using powers that can be “manipulated easily into a tool for 20 subverting its own justification ... through the chilling of core political speech.” 21

22 ² Or, consider the case of Rodrigo Iván Cortés of Mexico, who was convicted of 23 “gender-based political violence” for misgendering someone. See 24 https://adfinternational.org/news/mexican-civil-society-leader-found-guilty-of-
25 gender-based-political-violence-for-tweets. Or, consider that in Germany, citizens 26 can be arrested for online “hate speech.” See Strafgesetzbuch [StGB] [Code of 27 Criminal Procedure], § 130, https://www.gesetze-im-

1 Lucas, 34 N.E.3d at 1255. Like the laws in 281 Care Committee and Lucas, AB 2839
2 restricts political speech about candidates, campaigns, and issues and so “tamper[s] 3 with the right of citizens to choose who shall govern them.” FEC v. Cruz, 596 U.S.
4 289, 305–06 (2022) (cleaned up).

5 B. AB 2839 regulates speech based on content, viewpoint, and 6 speaker.

7 AB 2839’s selective application to certain types of speech spells certain doom.
8 Even if AB 2839 regulated only unprotected false speech, it still unconstitutionally 9 “singles out certain speech within that category for special opprobrium based on” 10 content, “the speaker’s viewpoint,” and the speaker’s identity. Chaker v. Crogan, 11 428 F.3d 1215, 1227 (9th Cir. 2005). Viewpoint discrimination is “uniquely harmful 12 to a free and democratic society.” Nat’l Rifle Ass’n of Am. v. Vullo, 602 U.S. 175, 187 13 (2024). Thus, if a law is “viewpoint-based, it is unconstitutional.” Iancu v. Brunetti, 14 588 U.S. 388, 393 (2019); accord Minn. Voters All. v. Mansky, 585 U.S. 1, 11 (2018)
15 (“prohibited”); Matal v. Tam, 582 U.S. 218, 243 (2017) (plurality) (“forbidden”); see 16 Junior Sports Mags. Inc. v. Bonta, 80 F.4th 1109, 1124 (9th Cir. 2023) (VanDyke, J., 17 concurring) (collecting cases suggesting viewpoint discrimination is “per se 18 invalid”). But, at the very least, it triggers strict scrutiny. Boyer, 978 F.3d at 621.

19 First, the law facially regulates based on content because the “law applies to 20 particular speech because of the topic”—a political candidate, elected official, 21 elections official, ballot, or voting mechanism. Reed v. Town of Gilbert, 576 U.S. 155, 22 163 (2015). Targeting “political or electoral content” like this makes the law a 23 “content-based regulation that seeks to limit public discourse.” Order 10.

24 Second, AB 2839 regulates based on viewpoint, an “egregious form of content 25 discrimination.” Rosenberger v. Rector & Visitors of Univ. of Va., 515 U.S. 819, 829– 26 830 (1995). Political content that is “positive about a person” and bolsters their 27 reputation—like memes of Trump praying or playing professional football—are 28

1 allowed, but “derogatory” political content that harms a candidate’s prospects for 2 election—like memes of Harris in a red communist uniform—are not. Iancu, 588
3 U.S. at 393 (cleaned up); see PSUF ¶¶ 88, 227. Similarly, AB 2839 countenances AI-4 generated videos that promote confidence in elections but prohibits those that 5 “undermine confidence” in those elections. These distinctions are the “essence of 6 viewpoint discrimination.” Id. (citation omitted); Grimmett v. Freeman, 59 F.4th 7 689, 694–96 (4th Cir. 2023) (invalidating law prohibiting “derogatory reports” about 8 political candidate).

9 Third, AB 2839 draws distinctions based on the speaker. Candidates 10 themselves can post fake content portraying themselves by attaching a short 11 disclaimer. See Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(2). Broadcasters can share fake content 12 with a disclaimer in their own words rather than California’s. Id. § 20012(e)(1). And 13 “broadcast[] station[s]” and “internet website[s]” that distribute but do not create 14 prohibited content are exempt from “general or special damages.” Id.
15 § 20012(d)(2)(B). Plaintiffs, on the other hand, can create or post similar content 16 only if it qualifies as parody or satire and only if they also include the prescribed 17 disclaimer that matches the State’s word, font, and duration requirements, id.
18 § 20012(b)(2)–(3).

19 The “Court’s precedents are deeply skeptical of laws that distinguish among 20 different speakers.” Nat’l Inst. of Fam. & Life Advoc. v. Becerra (NIFLA), 585 U.S.
21 755, 777–78 (2018) (cleaned up). They “are all too often simply a means to control 22 content.” Reed, 576 U.S. at 170 (quoting Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 340).
23 California suggested as much when it lamented the declining role of “traditional 24 media outlets serving as gatekeepers of information.” PSUF ¶ 157. By giving special 25 treatment to candidates who are presumably speaking highly about themselves, 26 California favors “happy-talk.” Matal, 582 U.S. at 246 (plurality). Plus, “quite apart 27 from the purpose or effect of regulating content” it’s also “wrong” to prefer certain 28

1 speakers over others. Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 340. “By taking the right to speak 2 from some and giving it to others,” the government upsets the marketplace of ideas 3 and “deprive[s] the public of the right and privilege to determine for itself what 4 speech and speakers are worthy of consideration.” Id. at 340–41.

5 C. AB 2839 compels speech.

6 AB 2839 doesn’t just restrict speech—it also compels it. The state compels 7 speech when it requires someone to say something that affects the speaker’s 8 message. 303 Creative LLC v. Elenis, 600 U.S. 570, 586 (2023); Hurley v. Irish-Am.
9 Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Grp. of Boston, 515 U.S. 557, 572–73 (1995). And a 10 speaker’s right to choose her own message applies “equally to statements of fact the 11 speaker would rather avoid.” Hurley, 515 U.S. at 573.

12 Forced disclaimers—even purely factual ones—are a form of compelled 13 speech. Requiring pregnancy clinics to post “government-scripted” notices about the 14 services they provide compels speech. NIFLA, 585 U.S. at 777. So does forcing 15 professional fundraisers to disclose what percentage of donations go to charitable 16 causes. Riley v. Nat’l Fed’n of the Blind of N.C., Inc., 487 U.S. 781, 797–98 (1988) 17 (“[W]e would not immunize a law ... requiring a speaker favoring an incumbent 18 candidate to state during every solicitation that candidate’s recent travel budget.”).

19 AB 2839’s forced disclaimer similarly compels speech. Every “materially 20 deceptive” satirical piece about political candidates or elected officials must include 21 a disclaimer that the image “has been manipulated for purposes of satire or 22 parody.” Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(3). The disclaimer must be “no smaller than the 23 largest font size of other text,” “shall appear for the duration of [a] video,” and must 24 be “read in a clearly spoken manner and ... pitch ... at the beginning of the audio, at 25 the end of the audio, and ... interspersed within the audio” every two minutes. Id.
26 § 20012(b)(2). This compelled disclaimer regulates based on content. “When a state 27
28

1 compels individuals to speak a particular message, the state alters the content of 2 their speech, and engages in content-based regulation.” X Corp., 116 F.4th at 900 3 (holding law requiring social media companies to disclose content-moderation 4 policies was content-based) (cleaned up).

5 AB 2839 thus forces Plaintiffs to say things they don’t want to say. Order 15.
6 Take The Bee’s fake campaign ad of Governor Newsom endorsing Kamala Harris.
7 PSUF ¶ 21. It depicts alternating images of smiling citizens and trash-littered 8 streets, overlaid with Newsom’s over-the-top reassurances that the ad contains his 9 “authentically recorded” “100% real message” “without the assistance of any AI 10 whatsoever.” Id. AB 2839 requires The Bee to include California’s government-11 scripted disclaimer, which would ruin the “perception of incongruity” that gives the 12 video its comedic effect. Gilbert Highet, The Anatomy of Satire 67 (1962). It’s “the 13 pretense of reality” juxtaposed with the patently absurd that allows parody to 14 “convey an underlying critical message” in a humorous way. Farah, 736 F.3d at 537 15 (citation omitted); see San Francisco Bay Guardian, Inc. v. Super. Ct., 21 Cal. Rptr.
16 2d 464, 466 (Ct. App. 1993) (“[T]he very nature of parody . . . is to catch the reader 17 off guard at first glance, after which the ‘victim’ recognizes that the joke is on him to 18 the extent that it caught him unaware.”).

19 Parody doesn’t need a disclaimer to receive First Amendment protection. It 20 has the same “socially significant value as” other protected speech. Dr. Seuss 21 Enters., L.P. v. Penguin Books USA, Inc., 109 F.3d 1394, 1400 (9th Cir. 1997).
22 Courts regularly distinguish between protected parody and unprotected speech in 23 many contexts, like libel, defamation, and copyright infringement, without 24 requiring a disclaimer. E.g., Farah, 736 F.3d at 539 (rejecting defamation claim 25 against parody); Mattel, Inc. v. Walking Mountain Prods., 353 F.3d 792, 811 (9th 26 Cir. 2003) (rejecting copyright infringement claim against satire).

27 Defendants may argue that AB 2839 is “directed only at disclosure of political 28

1 speech ... subject to exacting scrutiny.” Smith v. Helzer, 95 F.4th 1207, 1214 (9th 2 Cir. 2024) (cleaned up). But that’s wrong. Invoking a general interest in 3 transparency isn’t a magic wand to avoid strict scrutiny. McIntyre, 514 U.S. at 348.
 4 For example, states can’t prohibit anonymous pamphleteering advocating against 5 ballot measures. Id. (applying strict scrutiny). And states can’t require social media 6 companies to disclose their content-moderation policies on controversial issues. X 7 Corp., 116 F.4th at 902 (also applying strict scrutiny). Even if AB 2839 “concern[s] 8 only transparency, the relevant question here is: transparency into what?” Id.

9 Worse, the size requirements of the disclaimer “effectively rule[] out the 10 possibility of [plaintiffs’ videos] in the first place.” NIFLA, 585 U.S. at 778 (internal 11 quotation omitted); accord Am. Beverage Ass’n v. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 916 12 F.3d 749, 757 (9th Cir. 2019) (en banc) (cleaned up) (determining that labeling 13 requirement that would occupy 20% of advertisement was “unjustified or unduly 14 burdensome”). AB 2839’s disclaimer would invade far more of plaintiffs’ videos than 15 that. E.g., PSUF ¶ 192 (see below). As this Court has already found with respect to 23 Kohls, the disclaimer would fully “drown[] out” their message. Order 15.

24 “[T]he predictable result” of forced disclaimers like these is that speakers will 25 “refrain” from saying anything at all. Riley, 487 U.S. at 800. But “[t]he preferred

1 First Amendment remedy” for disfavored speech is “more speech, not enforced 2 silence.” Brown v. Hartlage, 456 U.S. 45, 61 (1982) (cleaned up).

3 AB 2839 compels the speech of everyday Americans who just want to talk 4 about politics. As already explained, “[n]o form of speech is entitled to greater 5 constitutional protection....” McIntyre, 514 U.S. at 347.

6 D. AB 2839 fails strict scrutiny.

7 As already explained, AB 2839’s viewpoint discrimination is all this Court 8 needs to facially enjoin enforcement of the law. See Iancu, 588 U.S. at 398–99 9 (rejecting government’s argument that a viewpoint discriminatory law can be saved 10 by “permissible applications”). But at the very least, AB 2839’s selective application 11 to certain content, viewpoints, and speakers makes it “presumptively invalid.” 12 R.A.V v. City of St. Paul, 505 U.S. 377, 394 (1992). And that presumption is 13 heightened here because California explicitly seeks to police political discourse.
14 Citizens United, 558 U.S. at 340 (suggesting “political speech simply cannot be 15 banned or restricted as a categorical matter”). At minimum, AB 2839 must advance 16 a compelling state interest through the least-restrictive means possible. Reed, 576 17 U.S. at 173. California “bears the burden of proving the [law] meets this standard.
18 Pierce v. Jacobsen, 44 F.4th 853, 862 (9th Cir. 2022). It fails.

19 1. California has less restrictive alternatives to protect its 20 legitimate interests.

21 “Because restricting speech should be the government’s tool of last resort, the 22 availability of obvious less-restrictive alternatives renders a speech restriction 23 overinclusive” and unconstitutional. IMDb.com Inc. v. Becerra, 962 F.3d 1111, 1125 24 (9th Cir. 2020). “The First Amendment does not “permit speech-restrictive 25 measures when the state may remedy the problem by implementing or enforcing 26 laws that do not infringe on speech.” Order 11 (citing IMDB.com, 962 F.3d at 1125).
27 But California has many alternative ways to protect the integrity of California

1 elections, and California has not shown that it considered these alternatives and 2 found them ineffective. McCullen v. Coakley, 573 U.S. 464, 494 (2014).

3 First, “the ordinary course in a free society” is to remedy false speech with 4 “speech that is true.” Alvarez, 567 U.S. at 727 (plurality). “Especially as to political 5 speech, counterspeech is the tried and true buffer and elixir.” Order 3; 281 Care
6 Comm., 766 F.3d at 793. California could counter deceptive speech with factual 7 speech of its own in a number of ways. It could create a “Government-created 8 database” that tracks deepfakes and “verif[ies] and expos[es] false claims.” Alvarez, 9 567 U.S. at 729 (plurality). It could launch “educational campaigns” on how to spot 10 deceptive deepfakes. 44 Liquormart, Inc. v. Rhode Island, 517 U.S. 484, 507 (1996) 11 (citing “educational campaigns” as alternative to First Amendment restriction); 12 NIFLA, 585 U.S. at 775 (same). It could start its own committee dedicated to 13 flagging deceptive content on networks like X, and now Facebook, Threads, and 14 Instagram, writing Community Notes to help expose false and misleading content.
15 PSUF ¶¶ 116, 121, 123. In fact, Governor Newsom already fact-checks statements 19 Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg’s death has no basis in fact.” Id. ¶ 37.

20 Multiple outlets issued “fact checks” about Kohls’s Harris video. Id. ¶ 63. If media 21 outlets have time to fact-check articles like these, there’s little reason to doubt that <https://bit.ly/4eKNSg5>.

1 California can publicly debunk false claims that pose a real threat.

2 Second, California could limit AB 2839’s reach to false speech that causes 3 legally cognizable harms. See Wasden, 878 F.3d at 1198 (citing law targeting 4 “statements that cause a particular harm” as less restrictive alternative). Like false 5 speech that actually dupes citizens into voting for the “wrong” candidate. California 6 knows how to pass laws that advance its interest in this arena. See United States v.
7 Tan Duc Nguyen, 673 F.3d 1259, 1264–66 (9th Cir. 2012) (discussing three sections 8 of the Election Code dealing with voting interference, coercion, and intimidation 9 and refusing to apply strict scrutiny because the speech covered represents an 10 unprotected true threat). Other states do too. E.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 16-1006 11 (2025) (prohibiting person from “knowingly by ... any corrupt means ... defraud[ing] 12 an elector by deceiving and causing him to vote for a different person for an office or 13 for a different measure than he intended or desired to vote for”); N.J. Stat. Ann.
14 § 19:34-29 (2024) (prohibiting any “fraudulent device” to “induce ... any voter ... to 15 vote or refrain from voting for any particular person or persons at any election”); 16 N.Y. Elec. Law § 17-150(2) (2024) (same); W. Va. Code Ann. § 3-8-11(a) (2025) 17 (same). These types of measures would be limited in scope “by requiring proof of 18 specific harm to identifiable victims.” See Alvarez, 567 U.S. at 734 (Breyer, J., 19 concurring).

20 Third, California could limit the statute’s reach to factual statements that are 21 provably false, like “false information about the time, date, place, or means of 22 voting.” Haw. Rev. Stat. § 19-3(12) (2021); Va. Code Ann. § 24.2-1005.1 (2021) 23 (same); see generally Eugene Volokh, When are Lies Constitutionally Protected?, 4 J.
24 Free Speech L. 685, 704–09 (2024) (contrasting lies about “election procedures”— 25 an area where a “narrower restriction[] might pose fewer problems” with lies about 26 election campaigns and government officials—areas that should be “categorically 27 immune from liability.”). Adopting this language wouldn’t necessarily mean the 28

1 statute is constitutional, but “these alternatives simply ... demonstrate the 2 deficiency of the statute as currently written.” Daily Herald Co. v. Munro, 838 F.2d 3 380, 385 (9th Cir. 1988). For example, the State could likely prohibit “an artificial 4 robocall in the Governor’s voice telling millions of Californians their voting site has 5 changed” if it could show actual reliance. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(a)(2). At the very 6 least, limiting the statute to this type of false speech would eliminate subjective 7 enforcement terms like “reasonably likely to harm ... electoral prospects,” that can 8 be exploited by malicious activists or partisan government officials. Id.
9 § 20012(b)(1).

10 Fourth, California could limit potential plaintiffs to political candidates 11 actually harmed by unprotected false speech. This would mirror defamation law, 12 which permits claims only by the person harmed—not anyone who hears the 13 defamation. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 564A (1977). This would also 14 decrease the risk of selective enforcement and frivolous lawsuits that would chill 15 protected speech. E.g., Driehaus, 573 U.S. at 164; Alvarez, 567 U.S. at 723 16 (plurality).

17 California must show that alternative methods “would fail to achieve the 18 government’s interests, not simply that the chosen route is easier.” McCullen, 573 19 U.S. at 495. That’s in addition to “[o]ther statutory causes of action” that already 20 exist, like “privacy torts, copyright infringement, or defamation.” Order 12.
21 California hasn’t shown that it has considered, much less tested, these other 22 options. And because the First Amendment is “[p]remised on mistrust of 23 governmental power,” California gets no deference here. Citizens United, 558 U.S.
24 at 340. For these reasons, AB 2839 fails narrow tailoring and should be enjoined.

25 2. AB 2839 fails to further a compelling State interest and is 26 over- and underinclusive.

27 While the less-restrictive alternatives described above are low-hanging fruit, 28

1 California must also “show that the statute furthers a compelling governmental 2 interest.” IMDb.com, 962 F.3d at 1125 (cleaned up). Even assuming California has a 3 “compelling interest in protecting free and fair elections,” Cal. Elec. Code 4 § 20012(a)(4), “selective limitations upon speech” don’t further that interest, R.A.V., 5 505 U.S. at 392. Plus, AB 2839 is underinclusive and overinclusive as well, 6 providing even more reasons to find the statute invalid.

7 “It is rare that a regulation restricting speech because of its content will ever 8 be permissible.” Playboy, 529 U.S. at 818. R.A.V. is instructive. There, the Court 9 invalidated a law against certain race-based hate crimes. Id. at 380. The state’s 10 interest in protecting “basic human rights” was undoubtedly compelling. Id. at 395.
11 But the law’s content-based distinctions were not necessary to prohibit 12 “reprehensible” acts like cross burnings. Id. at 395–96. Instead, “the only interest 13 distinctively served by the content limitation” was displaying the city’s “special 14 hostility towards the particular biases thus singled out.” Id. at 396.

15 Other courts have applied R.A.V.’s logic to invalidate political speech 16 regulations, like California’s, that apply to selective topics, viewpoints, and 17 speakers. For example, in Grimmett v. Freeman, the Fourth Circuit held 18 unconstitutional a North Carolina law that prohibited false “derogatory reports” 19 about political candidates that were “calculated or intended to affect the chances of 20 such candidate for nomination or election.” 59 F.4th at 691. In Susan B. Anthony 21 List v. Driehaus, the Sixth Circuit invalidated a law prohibiting false speech 22 “designed to promote the election, nomination, or defeat of the candidate.” 814 F.3d 23 466, 470 (6th Cir. 2016). And in Rickert v. State, an en banc Washington Supreme 24 Court invalidated a law that prohibited false statements about candidates but 25 exempted statements “made by a candidate (or his supporters) about himself.” 168 26 P.3d 826, 831 (Wash. 2007) (en banc). All of these laws ran “headlong into R.A.V.” 27 because they only covered content-, viewpoint-, or speaker-based subsets of false 28

1 speech. Grimmett, 59 F.4th at 694.

2 California repeats the same mistake. Start with its prohibition on false 3 content “likely to harm the ... electoral prospects of a candidate.” Cal Elec. Code 4 § 20012(b). That does not prohibit all false content, only false content that includes 5 “statements about a certain subject”—candidates for office. Grimmett, 59 F.4th at 6 694. And AB 2839 applies only to statements “of a particular nature”—content 7 likely to harm a candidate’s election chances. Id. So “speakers may lie with 8 impunity about businesspeople, celebrities, purely private citizens, or even 9 government officials” who are not candidates for office or speaking about the 10 election. Id.

11 The prohibition on false content likely to harm a candidate’s reputation is 12 similarly selective because it prohibits quasi-defamatory statements only against 13 political candidates. While “the government may proscribe libel,” “it may not make 14 the further content discrimination of proscribing only libel critical of” political 15 figures. R.A.V., 505 U.S. at 384; Grimmett, 59 F.4th at 694 (same); see also Chaker, 16 428 F.3d at 1226–27 (invalidating law prohibiting false statements “limited to 17 criticism of government officials”). These content and viewpoint-based limitations 18 don’t further the State’s interest in preserving free and fair elections “because [a 19 law] not limited to speech about current political candidates would have precisely 20 the same beneficial effect.” Grimmett, 59 F.4th at 696. (cleaned up).

21 “While generic content-based regulations strain our commitment to free 22 speech, content-based regulations that target political speech are especially 23 suspect.” McManus, 944 F.3d at 513 (cleaned up). And the fact that California has 24 less-restrictive “content-neutral alternatives ... undercuts significantly any defense 25 of such a statute.” R.A.V., 505 U.S. at 395 (cleaned up).

26 Next, AB 2839 is underinclusive, revealing that it “does not actually advance 27 a compelling interest.” Williams-Yulee v. Fla. Bar, 575 U.S. 433, 449 (2015). And AB 28

1 2839’s regulatory patchwork leaves inexplicable gaps in enforcement that also 2 raises serious “doubts about whether the government is in fact pursuing the 3 interest it invokes, rather than disfavoring a particular speaker or viewpoint.” Id. at 4 448 (cleaned up).

5 Again, start with AB 2839’s focus on 6 deceptive content portraying only political 7 candidates, elected officials, election officials, 8 ballots, or voting mechanisms. In the last 9 election, countless election-related deepfakes 10 like ones portraying “Swifties for Trump” were 11 allowed so long as they did not depict a 12 candidate or official.⁵ So are many other false 13 posts that “undermine the perception of electoral 14 integrity”—like allegations about Russian 15 disinformation—so long as they do not specifically reference a candidate, ballot 16 measure, or other proscribed topic. Grimmett, 59 F.4th at 696 n.9. If the State’s goal 17 is to protect election integrity, prohibiting satirical memes about a candidate while 18 failing to regulate deepfakes that actually fool people makes little sense. Id.

19 Also consider AB 2839’s broad exemption for “interactive computer 20 service[s],” which “does not impose liability” on them. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(e)(4) 21 (citing 47 U.S.C. § 230(f)(2)). That means all interactive computer services escape 22 any regulation under AB 2839, inexplicably exempting many interactive blogs and 23 news websites. They can post whatever they want, including maliciously distributed 24 deepfakes that cause actual harm. This discrepancy is irrational because “the 25

 26
 27 ⁵ Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump), Truth Social (Aug. 18, 2024), 28 <https://bit.ly/4drwhZA>.

1 exempted speech implicates the very same concerns as the regulated speech.”

2 Chaker, 428 F.3d at 1226–27.

3 Add to this that AB 2839 imposes different requirements on different 4 speakers. Candidates can post fake content portraying themselves by attaching the 5 prescribed disclaimer. See Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(2). Plaintiffs can post similar 6 content only if it’s parody or satire. Id. § 20012(b)(3). But politicians promoting 7 “self-aggrandizing falsehoods” are just as, or perhaps even more likely, to 8 undermine elections as citizens posting similar content. Grimmett, 59 F.4th at 696 9 n.9; accord Rickert, 168 P.3d at 831–32. Trump, for example, has tens of millions of 10 followers on his X account. Rickert has far less; she has about 25,000 followers on 11 Instagram and less than 2,000 on X. PSUF ¶ 78. Not just because of audience size 12 either; allowing politicians greater speech rights than independent commentators 13 gets the First Amendment backwards. See McIntyre, 514 U.S. at 351.

14 Or, consider the different disclaimer requirements for broadcasters. They can 15 show prohibited content as long as they “clearly acknowledge[]” it’s fake. Cal. Elec.
16 Code § 20012(e)(1). But here too, Plaintiffs can only post similar content if it’s satire
17 and parody. But The Bee, Kohls, and Rickert don’t have the same audience as CNN 18 or Fox. And even then, it isn’t enough for Plaintiffs to “clearly acknowledge[]” that 19 something is fake E.g., PSUF ¶¶ 56, 58–59, 155. They have to include California’s 20 specifically worded and burdensome disclaimer throughout the content they post.
21 Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(1)(A). This “speaker-based disclosure requirement ... is 22 wholly disconnected from California’s informational interest.” NIFLA, 585 U.S. at 23 777.

24 AB 2839 is also overinclusive for the all of the same reasons that its 25 unconstitutionally overbroad. See infra § II.A (describing overbreadth). To take the 26 most glaring example, AB 2839 doesn’t further any interest as applied to Plaintiffs’ 27 speech involving satirical memes and parody campaign ads. In the Harris Parody 28

1 Video, for example, Harris brags that she served under “the ultimate deep state 2 puppet” Joe Biden. PSUF ¶ 57. An “average” viewer grasps that, however authentic 3 appearing, this is a joke. Knieval, 393 F.3d at 1074. So California’s restrictions on 4 political speech to prevent confusion among voters is unnecessary.

5 The disclaimer requirement is also particularly onerous. In fact, the 6 disclaimer requirement “effectively rules out the possibility of” Kohls’ parody 7 campaign ads “in the first place.” NIFLA, 585 U.S. at 778 (cleaned up). Below is a 8 still from the Harris Parody Video next to the same ad with California’s required 9 disclaimer, which occupies the entire screen. PSUF ¶ 194. If a forced label 10 occupying 20% of an advertisement (which receives lower First Amendment 11 scrutiny) is “unjustified or unduly burdensome,” Am. Beverage Ass’n, 916 F.3d at 12 757 (cleaned up), there’s no question that AB 2839’s forced disclaimer would “drown 13 out” Plaintiffs’ protected political messages, id. at 757 (cleaned up); see Order 15.

14
 15
 16
 17
 18
 19 20 II. AB 2839 is overbroad and vague.

21 When a statute regulates speech, the Supreme Court has “lowered [the] very 22 high bar” to facial challenges. Moody, 603 U.S. at 723. If a “statute prohibits a 23 substantial amount of protected speech relative to its plainly legitimate sweep, then 24 society’s interest in free expression outweighs its interest in the statute’s lawful 25 applications, and a court will hold the law facially invalid.” United States v. Hansen, 26 599 U.S. 762, 770 (2023) (cleaned up).

1 A law can also be overbroad if it's vague. Yet the test for vagueness is 2 distinct: a law is facially void-for-vagueness when it (1) fails to "give the person of 3 ordinary intelligence a reasonable opportunity to know what is prohibited, so that 4 he may act accordingly;" or (2) fails to "provide explicit standards for those who 5 apply them." Grayned v. City of Rockford, 408 U.S. 104, 108 (1972); accord Edge v.
6 City of Everett, 929 F.3d 657, 664–665 (9th Cir. 2019). "When speech is involved, 7 rigorous adherence to those requirements is necessary to ensure that ambiguity 8 does not chill protected speech." FCC v. Fox Television Stations, Inc., 567 U.S. 239, 9 253–54 (2012).

10 Here, AB 2839 applies to much protected speech (below § A). But it's unclear 11 whether it applies to other protected speech (below § B). Plus, its vague 12 proscriptions give officials unbridled enforcement discretion. So, in addition to 13 bringing overbreadth claims, Plaintiffs bring as-applied and facial vagueness claims 14 too. Tucson v. City of Seattle, 91 F.4th 1318, 1329 (9th Cir. 2024) ("[F]acial 15 vagueness challenges are appropriate if the statute clearly implicates free speech 16 rights." (cleaned up)); Act Now to Stop War & End Racism Coal. & Muslim Am.
17 Soc'y Freedom Found. v. District of Columbia., 846 F.3d 391, 410 (D.C. Cir. 2017)
18 (allowing as-applied First Amendment and facial vagueness arguments when law 19 provided "standardless enforcement discretion").

20 A. AB 2839 explicitly covers a substantial amount of speech.

21 "The first step in the proper facial [overbreadth] analysis is to assess the 22 state laws' scope." Moody, 603 U.S. at 724. Here, of course, "AB 2839 specifically 23 targets speech" by facially regulating images, videos, and audio recordings about 24 proscribed topics. Order 10. Also importantly, it does not regulate any non-25 expressive conduct. In other words, every application of the law regulates speech.

26 At step two, the "question is whether a substantial number of the law's 27
28

1 applications are unconstitutional, judged in relation to the statute’s plainly 2 legitimate sweep.” Moody, 603 U.S. at 723 (cleaned up). Here, the answer is yes.
 3 Start with parody—fictitious speech protected under the First Amendment. Hustler
 4 Mag., 485 U.S. at 54–56. The law sweeps up Kohls’s parodic Kamala Harris 5 campaign ads, The Bee’s video of Governor Newsom mockingly endorsing Harris, 6 and Rickert’s post of Trump’s fictitious exchange with Barack Obama (if it had been 7 posted during the election). See PSUF ¶ 103a. It would even cover Kohls’s “Honest 8 Ad” containing Biden gaffes, even though all of the statements and videos of Biden 9 are real. See id. ¶ 60. But weave them into a fictitious ad with the Biden/Harris 10 campaign slogan slapped on at the end, and it “falsely appear[s] ... authentic” in 11 violation of the law. Cal. Elec. Code. § 20012(f)(8).

12 The law’s application to satire generally sweeps up even more content, like 13 the fake news articles below just because The Bee cropped and edited real images to 14 make them “falsely appear ... authentic.” Id.

19 PSUF ¶¶ 26w, aa. In fact, the law goes even further to cover a person who 20 republishes these images just because they think they’re funny, even though they 21 didn’t create them. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(4).
 22

23 The law also sweeps up much exaggeration and “rhetorical hyperbole which 24
 25
 26
 27
 28

1 has traditionally added much to the discourse of our Nation.” Knieval, 393 F.3d at 2 1074 (cleaned up). Like memes of Kamala Harris in a red uniform addressing a 3 communist party rally. PSUF ¶ 88. Or, suppose J.D. Vance’s 2028 presidential 4 campaign creates an ad featuring AI-generated images of Alexandra Ocasio Cortez 5 (the Democratic nominee) speaking at a lectern while Vance narrates that “she 6 promises to fly all the homeless people from every third-world country on the planet 7 into our country.” This would obviously be protected speech. Again, a reasonable 8 person would understand it not as a quotation from Ocasio Cortez’s campaign page, 9 but an exaggeration of her immigration policies. But AB 2839 prohibits this ad 10 because the image “falsely appear[s] ... authentic” and the narration suggests 11 Ocasio Cortez said something she did not say. Cal. Elec. Code. § 20012(b)(1)(A), 12 (f)(8)(A).

13 The law also sweeps up content that isn’t materially harmful. It doesn’t 14 require covered content to have a material effect on a candidate’s electoral 15 prospects. Suppose Ocasio Cortez’s hypothetical presidential campaign runs an ad 16 accurately criticizing the Trump/Vance administration’s foreign policy while using 17 “deepfake” images of Trump talking to NATO officials with whom he never spoke.
 18 The images are fake and violate the law. But they’re not materially harmful to the 19 Republican nominee.

20 The broad definition of “election communication” extends AB 2839’s reach in 21 staggering ways too. It covers “any 22 general or public communication” 23 sent through “telephone,” “text” or 24 the “internet” that addresses a 25 “candidate,” “ballot measure,” or 26 “voting.” Cal. Elec. Code.
 27 § 20012(f)(5). That includes general
 28

1 posts on private social-media accounts, text messages and emails to friend groups, 2 and billboards like this one.⁶ Regulating social-media accounts with few followers or 3 billboards seen from rural one-lane roads reinforces how overbroad the law is. Cf.
4 Comite de Jornaleros de Redondo Beach v. City of Redondo Beach, 657 F.3d 936, 949
5 (9th Cir. 2011) (finding law “geographically overinclusive”). AB 2839 “applies to a 6 broad range of content that does not pose a realistic threat to the maintenance of 7 fair and free elections.” Lucas, 34 N.E.3d at 1255; see also Alvarez, 567 U.S. at 722– 8 23 (plurality) (“Here the lie was made in a public meeting, but the statute would 9 apply with equal force to personal, whispered conversations within a home.”).

10 What’s more, AB 2839’s liberal enforcement provisions are a recipe for 11 chilling untold amounts of speech, including speech that does not clearly fall within 12 the statute. Infra § II.B (explaining vagueness). It isn’t just offended candidates or 13 elected officials who can sue—any “recipient of materially deceptive content” can 14 “seek injunctive or other equitable relief.” Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(d)(1). That 15 includes any “person who views, hears, or otherwise perceives” the content. Id.
16 § 20012(f)(9). Plus, that person can seek “general or special damages” and 17 “attorney’s fees and costs,” even against a person who merely “republishe[s]” 18 prohibited content. Id. § 20012(d)(2). Laws like these that allow “[a]nyone [to] file a 19 complaint” drastically increase the chances of rivals and activists filing lawsuits, 20 regardless of whether the content falls under AB 2839’s scope. 281 Care Comm., 766 21 F.3d at 792; Lucas, 34 N.E.3d at 1256 (same). And as soon as such a suit is filed, 22 “damage is done.” 281 Care Comm., 766 F.3d at 792. Thus, AB 2839 is “overbroad 23 because ... there is nothing to prohibit the filing of a complaint against speech that 24

25 ⁶ If this billboard was put up in California, and Biden had still been the presidential 26 candidate on September 17, 2024, it would have violated the law. It still arguably 27 violated the law on September 17, 2024, when Kamala Harris was the candidate, by 28 harming Harris’ electoral chances through her association with Biden (an elected official). See Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(C).

1 may later be found wholly protected.” Id.

2 “[T]he state does not have carte blanche to regulate the dissemination of false 3 statements during political campaigns.” 281 Care Comm., 766 F.3d at 787. But that 4 is essentially what California asks for—even if the speech isn’t “material, negative, 5 defamatory, or libelous,” Susan B. Anthony List v. Driehaus, 814 F.3d 466, 473 (6th 6 Cir. 2016), and even if it doesn’t fool anyone or have any effect on an election. For 7 these reasons, this Court has already correctly held that “AB 2839’s legitimate 8 sweep pales in comparison to the substantial number of its applications.” Order 14.

9 B. AB 2839’s vagueness covers even more protected speech.

10 A law is unconstitutionally vague “if its prohibitions are not clearly defined.” 11 Grayned, 408 U.S. at 108. The doctrine requires fair notice about what the law 12 proscribes plus guardrails to ensure that “those enforcing the law do not act in an 13 arbitrary or discriminatory way.” Fox Television., 567 U.S. at 253. While these 14 requirements spring from the Due Process Clause, “vagueness concerns are more 15 acute when a law implicates First Amendment rights” because of the risks of chilled 16 speech and discriminatory enforcement. Butcher v. Knudsen, 38 F.4th 1163, 1169 17 (9th Cir. 2022). In this context, there is an “enhanced standard” requiring “an even 18 greater degree of specificity and clarity of laws.” Edge, 929 F.3d at 664–65. “These 19 concerns are magnified even further when a law regulates political speech.” 20 Butcher, 38 F.4th at 1169.

21 AB 2839’s problems start with malleable terms like “materially deceptive.” 22 Cal. Elec. Code. § 20012(f)(8)(A). As already explained, this does not require 23 showing that content actually fools a reasonable person. It’s enough to “falsely 24 appear ... authentic” in some respect. Id. § 20012(f)(8)(A). That means satirists, 25 bloggers, or social media users “must necessarily guess at” what types of political 26 satire and parody appear authentic enough to violate the law. Fox Television, 567 27
28

1 U.S. at 253; cf. Bullfrog Films, Inc. v. Wick, 847 F.2d 502, 513 (9th Cir. 1988) (treaty 2 affording favorable treatment to materials deemed “representative,” “authentic,” 3 and “accurate” was “unquestionably vague”). After all, “[p]arody needs to mimic an 4 original to make its point.” Dr. Seuss, 109 F.3d at 1400. Consider that The Bee’s 5 satirical posts are regularly fact-checked.

6 PSUF ¶ 33. Snopes, for instance, thought it
 7 necessary to “fact-check” this satirical post 8 The Bee wrote about United States
 9 Representative Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez. Id.
 10 ¶¶ 34–35. If websites like Snopes, USA
 11 Today, and other news organizations believe 12 these articles need a fact-check, an activist or the Secretary of State could easily 13 conclude that this and other similar content violates the law.

Ocasio-Cortez Appears On 'The Price Is Right,' Guesses Everything Is Free

14 AB 2839 seemingly reaches commonplace “‘half-truths’ and ‘misinformation’” 15 too. Sullivan, 376 U.S. at 273. For example, during the 2024 election, @KamalaHQ 16 (an account run by the Harris campaign), posted a short video on X of then 17 candidate JD Vance stating: “Democrats want to attack Republicans as being anti-18 union and sometimes the shoe fits.” PSUF ¶ 214. The clip leaves out the second part 19 of Vance’s statement: “but not me, and not Donald Trump.” Id. AB 2839 seemingly 20 prohibits this and similar posts because deleting certain contextual statements 21 makes it “digitally ... modified” and “deceptive,” falsely suggesting that Vance 22 admitted to being anti-union. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(f)(8). But campaigns do this 23 type of electioneering all the time. As the legislature’s Judiciary Committee 24 recognized, “the use of questionable tactics to win an election are as old as 25 America’s democracy.” PSUF ¶ 157.

26 Next, AB 2839’s prohibition on content “reasonably likely to harm the 27 reputation or electoral prospects of a candidate” is vague. Cal. Elec. Code 28

1 § 20012(b)(1)(A), (C). That’s because the term “likely to harm” is inherently 2 subjective. Take a satirical AI-generated campaign ad of Ocasio Cortez calling for 3 open borders and blanket amnesty for illegal
 4 immigrants. If the ad appeals to her party’s 5 base, is it “reasonably likely to harm” her 6 electoral chances? Or take an AI-generated 7 memes of Taylor Swift endorsing Trump. See 8 PSUF ¶ 209b. What about a fake endorsement
 9 from a B-list celebrity instead? Or, consider a 10 fake image of a candidate that just makes the 11 candidate appear unattractive? The law 12 provides “no principle for determining when” speech will “pass from the safe harbor 13 ... to the forbidden.” Gentile v. State Bar of Nev., 501 U.S. 1030, 1049 (1991); see 14 Flomo v. Firestone Nat. Rubber Co., LLC, 643 F.3d 1013, 1022 (7th Cir. 2011) 15 (observing that law prohibiting practices “likely to harm” was “pretty vague, in part 16 because no threshold of actionable harm is specified”).

17 Equally problematic is the statutory language singling out content that is 18 “reasonably likely to falsely undermine confidence in the outcome” of an election.
 19 Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(b)(1)(C). Consider one video posted by the Republican 20 National Committee that contains “12 Minutes of Democrats Denying Election 21 Results,” featuring elected officials denying the legitimacy of the 2016 election 22 results because of Russian disinformation. PSUF ¶ 209a. That might “falsely 23 undermine confidence” in the outcome of an election. The answer, once again, 24 depends on whether the enforcement official perceives the video as sufficiently 25 deceptive.

26 Additionally, vagueness lies in what constitutes acceptable “minor” 27 modifications. Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(f)(8)(B). It is no answer to say that they are 28

1 small changes that “do not alter [the content’s] substantive meaning” (Opp’n to 2 MPI 22) because “substantive meaning” itself is a matter of subjective 3 interpretation, as is whether the modifications “significantly change the perceived 4 contents or meaning of the content.” Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(f)(8)(B). Cf. Sackett v.
5 EPA, 598 U.S. 651, 681 (2023) (“the boundary between a ‘significant’ and an 6 insignificant nexus is far from clear”).

7 The law’s vagueness also violates the content and viewpoint neutrality 8 requirements, making the law facially invalid, because it gives enforcement 9 authorities “unbridled discretion.” Kaahumanu v. Haw., 682 F.3d 789, 806 (9th Cir.
10 2012). Simply, “an indeterminate prohibition carries with it the opportunity for 11 abuse.” Minn. Voters All., 585 U.S. at 21 (cleaned up). Enforcement officials “must 12 be guided by objective, workable standards.” Id. Return to “materially deceptive.”
13 Run-of-the-mill campaign ads attacking “a candidate’s voting record,” for example, 14 often contain exaggerations. Lucas, 34 N.E.3d at 1256 (explaining that 15 “distinguishing between truth and falsity may prove exceedingly difficult” in this 16 context). If courts must undertake an “in-depth analysis of legislative history” to 17 determine the truth or falsity of digitally altered content, that gives enforcement 18 authorities much discretion to determine which posts violate the law. Id. Or take a 19 meme of Trump running from police. PSUF ¶ 212. It’s ambiguous whether it is 20 “reasonably likely to harm” his candidacy because some will view this meme 21 favorably while others will not. Or, it may depend on whether someone somewhere 22 thinks it’s “materially deceptive.” Cal. Elec. Code § 20012(f)(8). Or, it may depend 23 on the poster’s “subjective intent.” Berger v. City of Seattle, 569 F.3d 1029, 1047 (9th 24 Cir. 2009) (cleaned up). “[T]his myriad of factors lends itself to discriminatory 25 enforcement,” where activists and government officials alike “resort to enforcing the 26 [law] only against those messages the officer or the public dislikes.” Id. at 1048 27 (cleaned up).

1 At bottom, what’s deceptive or “misleading’ is unconstitutionally vague and 2 in the eyes of the beholder.” See Richard L. Hasen, A Constitutional Right to Lie in 3 Campaigns and Elections?, 74 Mont. L. Rev. 53, 71–72 (2013) (targeting “deceptive’ 4 or ‘misleading’ election speech ... could chill legitimate speech given the elasticity of 5 the terms”). A speech-targeting enforcement scheme built on these amorphous and 6 vague terms “contains more than the possibility of censorship through uncontrolled 7 discretion.” See Forsyth Cnty. v. Nationalist Movement, 505 U.S. 123, 133 (1992).
8 “Uncertain meanings inevitably lead citizens to ‘steer far wider of the unlawful 9 zone’ ... than if the boundaries of the forbidden areas are clearly marked.” Grayned, 10 408 U.S. at 109 (citation omitted).

11 III. This Court should grant Plaintiffs’ requested relief.

12 Because Plaintiffs have shown that AB 2839 is unconstitutional, this Court 13 should grant a permanent injunction and declaratory relief.

14 Permanent injunctive relief requires a showing of (1) irreparable injury, (2) 15 that other remedies are inadequate; and that (3) the balance of hardships and (4) 16 the public interest favor an injunction. Epic Games, Inc. v. Apple, Inc., 67 F.4th 946, 17 1002 (9th Cir. 2023). Plaintiffs satisfy these factors. At the preliminary injunction 18 stage, this Court already recognized that chilled speech is the quintessential 19 example of irreparable harm. Order 17. And “constitutional violations cannot be 20 adequately remedied through damages.” Am. Trucking Ass’ns, Inc. v. City of Los 21 Angeles, 559 F.3d 1046, 1059 (9th Cir. 2009) (citation omitted)). Indeed, “[t]he harm 22 is particularly irreparable where, as here, a plaintiff seeks to engage in political 23 speech.” Klein v. City of San Clemente, 584 F.3d 1196, 1208 (9th Cir. 2009). Rickert 24 reasonably chilled her speech during the 2024 election. PSUF ¶¶ 82–91. She will 25 likely do so again unless Defendants are permanently enjoined from enforcing 26 the law. Further, California’s interests here are “minimal when measured against 27
28

1 the gravity of First Amendment values at stake.” Order 18. Governments simply 2 don’t have an interest in enforcing discriminatory, overbroad, and vague laws. Id.
3 And because the law threatens the rights of both Plaintiffs and the public at large, 4 the balance of equities and public interest “tip sharply in favor of enjoining [the 5 law].” Klein, 584 F.3d at 1208. In this case, “all citizens have a stake in upholding 6 the Constitution.” Baird v. Bonta, 81 F.4th 1036, 1042 (9th Cir. 2023) (cleaned up).

7 And for all the reasons given above, this Court should grant declaratory relief 8 too. See Wilton v. Seven Falls Co., 515 U.S. 277, 289–90 (1995) (explaining court 9 always has discretion to enter declaratory relief).

10 CONCLUSION

11 Plaintiffs want to post satirical news articles, parody videos, and other 12 digitally altered images and memes poking fun at politicians. This type of speech “is 13 more than self-expression; it is the essence of self-government.” Garrison v.
14 Louisiana, 379 U.S. 64, 74-75 (1964). The democratic experiment is, at its core, the 15 freedom to criticize candidates, elected officials, and government policies with which 16 we disagree.

17 So California’s “claim that it is enhancing the ability of its citizenry to make 18 wise decisions by restricting the flow of information to them” deserves much 19 skepticism. Eu v. San Francisco Cnty. Democratic Cent. Comm., 489 U.S. 214, 228 20 (1989) (citations omitted). In fact, accepting California’s arguments would give it 21 the power to prohibit speech it deems harmful untethered from history and 22 unchecked by the courts. American history going back to the Sedition Act teaches 23 that governments simply cannot be trusted to wield this much power. “In this field 24 every person must be his own watchman for truth, because the forefathers did not 25 trust any government to separate the true from the false for us.” Meyer v. Grant, 26 486 U.S. 414, 419–20 (1988) (cleaned up).

27 Digitally altered memes and parody campaign ads are the “political cartoons 28

1 of today.” Order 12. Plaintiffs need permanent relief from this Court to prevent the 2 state’s “use [of] its power for political ends.” Id. (cleaned up). They respectfully ask 3 that this Court enter summary judgment for Plaintiffs, declare AB 2839 invalid 4 facially and as-applied, permanently enjoin Defendants from enforcing it.
