TO ALL PARTIES AND THEIR COUNSEL OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on February 8, 2024, at 10:00 a.m., in Courtroom 11 of the above-entitled Court, located on the 19th floor of 450 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, California 94102, before the Honorable James Donato, the State Attorneys General (the “States”), will and hereby move the Court for an order finding that the settlement is sufficiently fair, reasonable, and adequate for the Court to approve issuing notice of it to Eligible Consumers pursuant to Section 15c of the Clayton Act. 15 U.S.C. § 15c.

This Motion is based on this notice of motion and motion, the memorandum of points and authorities that follows, the concurrently filed Declaration of Paula L. Blizzard in Support of the States’ Unopposed Motion to Give Notice of Proposed Parens Patriae Settlement and exhibit thereto, the concurrently filed Declaration of Eric Schachter in Support of the States’ Unopposed Motion to Give Notice of Proposed Parens Patriae Settlement and exhibits thereto, the concurrently filed Declaration of Lana Cooper in Support of the States’ Unopposed Motion to Give Notice of Proposed Parens Patriae Settlement, the pleadings, papers, and other documents on file in this action, and such other evidence and argument presented to the Court at or prior to any hearing in this matter.

1 ISSUE TO BE DECIDED

2 Whether the settlement with Google is sufficiently fair, reasonable, and adequate for the 3 Court to approve issuing notice pursuant to Section 15c of the Clayton Act. 15 U.S.C. § 15c.

4 INTRODUCTION

5 More than two years ago, 39 Plaintiff States brought this case alleging federal and state 6 antitrust claims, as well as state consumer protection claims, against Google and certain of its 7 affiliates. The States sought damages as parens patriae on behalf of their residents and non-parens 8 relief, including disgorgement, restitution, civil penalties, attorneys’ fees, and injunctive relief.

9 For over two years, the States, along with counsel for the class this Court had originally 10 certified (“Consumer Counsel”) and other co-plaintiffs, vigorously litigated this case, as explained 11 in further detail below. Simultaneously, the States pursued a negotiated resolution short of trial. The 12 mediation process took hundreds of hours and involved senior counsel for the States, the proposed 13 Consumer Class, and Google, as well as a team of experienced mediators. The settlement provides 14 significant monetary relief to Eligible Consumers and unprecedented injunctive relief that should 15 re-invigorate competition.¹

16 The Settlement Agreement has three major components:

- 17
- 18 • Creation of a $630 million common fund to be distributed to Eligible Consumers (net 19 of authorized expenses and Consumer Counsel fees and costs);
 - 20 • Creation of a $70 million fund to be distributed to the States to resolve their non-21 parens claims (e.g., for penalties, restitution, disgorgement, and fees); and
 - 22 • Injunctive relief designed to reduce barriers to competition in the markets for app 23 distribution and payment processing services.

24 While 39 jurisdictions brought this litigation initially, all 50 States, the District of Columbia, 25 and two territories have now decided to join the settlement because they believe it will enhance

26
27 ¹ The full Settlement Agreement is attached as Exhibit A to the Declaration of Paula L. Blizzard
28 (“Blizzard Decl.”). Capitalized terms have the meanings ascribed to them in the Settlement Agreement.

1 competition in the relevant markets and properly redress consumers' injuries.² The States have 2 proposed a distribution plan designed to minimize costs and maximize the number of Eligible 3 Consumers who will recover: The settlement administrator conservatively estimates that at least 4 70% of Eligible Consumers will collect damages directly via automated payments that will not 5 require consumers to submit a claim. The settlement's combination of monetary relief to consumers 6 and injunctive relief to open the markets to competition qualifies as sufficiently fair, reasonable, and 7 adequate for the Court to approve issuing notice of it to Eligible Consumers. See 15 U.S.C. § 15c(b).

8 FACTUAL BACKGROUND

9 I. The Alleged Conduct

10 The facts of this case are familiar to the Court. The States' First Amended Complaint alleges 11 claims for (1) monopoly maintenance, (2) tying, and (3) unreasonable restraints of trade in the markets 12 for Android app distribution and for payment processing on Android devices, in violation of the 13 Sherman Act.³ The Complaint also alleges state-law antitrust and consumer protection claims.
 14 Specifically, the States allege that Google has unreasonably restrained trade and monopolized 15 Android app distribution and payment-processing services through anticompetitive conduct.⁴ This 16 includes entering into anticompetitive contracts with OEMs and mobile service providers to prevent 17 other app stores from being preloaded on Android devices, buying off key app developers to keep 18 them from launching their own app stores or offering exclusive launches or special discounts to other 19 app stores, and erecting technological hurdles to deter consumers from directly downloading 20 (i.e., sideloading) apps and app stores to their devices.⁵

21
 22
 23
 24 ² Prior to the expansion of the States' group in September, consumers in the jurisdictions that were 25 not represented by States' Attorneys General were represented by Consumer Counsel as part of the 26 formerly certified class. As discussed below, the States and Consumer Counsel agreed to collectively 27 represent consumers nationwide through their Joint Prosecution Agreement, which was previously 28 submitted to the Court. See Joint Prosecution Agreement, No. 3:21-md-02981, Dkt. No. 251-2. All references to the docket in this motion are to the docket for the States' case, No. 3:21-cv-05227-JD.

1 As a result of Google's unlawful conduct, the States alleged, Google has been able to extract
 2 enormous sums from consumers.⁶ With certain limited exceptions, when a consumer buys a paid app
 3 or in-app content, Google takes 30% of the money.⁷ Google collects its 30% cut by forcing consumers 4 to use Google Play Billing to buy apps and in-app content, and by prohibiting app developers from 5 suggesting alternative ways to purchase content (e.g., purchasing directly from the developer's 6 website, bypassing Google altogether).⁸ The Complaint seeks damages, restitution, disgorgement, 7 attorneys' fees, civil penalties, and injunctive relief.⁹

8 II. The States' Vigorous Prosecution of this Case

9 For over two years, and following several months of coordinated investigation, the States and 10 Consumer Counsel pursued claims in this Court on behalf of consumers nationwide. The States, 11 Consumer Counsel, Epic, and Match served over 1,000 requests for production and hundreds of 12 interrogatories and/or requests for admission. The States deposed over 40 individuals from Google, 13 20 third-party witnesses from over a dozen companies or organizations, and over a half-dozen expert
 14 witnesses. The States and the other plaintiffs opposed Google's Motion for Partial Summary 15 Judgment, and the States argued the critical question of the States' and Consumers' standing to bring 16 damages claims for in-app purchases.¹⁰ The States spent hundreds of hours developing the record that 17 resulted in Google being sanctioned for its willful destruction of Chats, working with Consumer 18 Counsel and the other co-plaintiffs.¹¹ And the States served expert reports on behalf of five experts, 19 totaling thousands of pages of testimony. One of these experts, Dr. Rysman, advanced a well-20 founded, but novel model that calculated the value to consumers of lost variety in the app market, as 21 opposed to a traditional overcharge model.

1 III. The Mediation Process

2 This Settlement resulted from an intensive mediation process. Throughout, the States worked 3 diligently to ensure that any settlement would include strong injunctive relief that would open up the 4 relevant markets to competition.¹² Senior antitrust enforcers from California, New York, North 5 Carolina, Tennessee, and Utah devoted hundreds of hours over more than a year negotiating alongside 6 Consumer Counsel to obtain the relief reflected in the Settlement Agreement from Google.

7 Talks began in earnest in August 2022, with a Zoom mediation session including the States, 8 Consumer Counsel, and Google, moderated by Judges Daniel Weinstein and Rebecca Westerfield.¹³
9 The representatives for the States were: Melissa Holyoak, the Solicitor General for the State of Utah; 10 Paula Blizzard, Senior Assistant Attorney General for the Antitrust Section for the State of California; 11 Elinor Hoffmann, Chief of the Antitrust Bureau for the State of New York; Sarah Boyce, Deputy 12 Attorney General and General Counsel for the State of North Carolina; and David McDowell, 13 Consumer Protection & Antitrust Chief for the State of Tennessee.¹⁴ These senior officials continued 14 to represent the States throughout the mediation process. Consumer Counsel also attended with 15 representatives from the Plaintiffs' Steering Committee and co-lead counsel, Karma Giulianelli and 16 Hae Sung Nam.

17 In October 2022, counsel for the States, Consumer Counsel, and Google held the first in-18 person mediation session.¹⁵ That session lasted two full days, overseen by Judges Weinstein and 19 Westerfield.¹⁶ The States, Consumer Counsel, and Google continued to meet regularly for the next 20 eleven months, with assistance from Judges Weinstein and Westerfield.¹⁷ Most of these sessions were 21 virtual, but the parties met for a second two-day, in-person session in late July 2023.¹⁸

1 The mediation process started coalescing around a set of terms in late July 2023.¹⁹ The parties
 2 continued to negotiate the final details of the settlement through late August, while simultaneously
 3 preparing to go to trial.²⁰ After the Court excluded the testimony of the proposed Consumer Class’s 4 economics expert, Dr. Hal Singer, and announced its intention to decertify the proposed Consumer 5 Class on August 28, 2023,²¹ the States expanded their coalition to include all fifty States, as well as 6 the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.²² This ensured that all affected U.S.
 7 consumers would still have relief and provided a path to the global peace that Google required.

8 Over the 2023 Labor Day weekend, the States, Consumer Counsel, and Google finally reached 9 tentative settlement terms.²³ On September 5, 2023, the States, Consumer Counsel, and Google
 10 notified the Court that they had reached a settlement in principle, although it still required approval
 11 by all 53 Attorneys General.²⁴ On October 12, 2023, the States notified the Court that all 53 Attorneys 12 General had approved the settlement, although final signatures and formatting were still being 13 addressed.²⁵ On November 17, 2023, the States notified the Court that the settlement had been 14 finalized and executed in full.²⁶

15 IV. The Terms of the Proposed Settlement Agreement

16 A. Injunctive Relief

17 The Settlement contains six categories of robust injunctive terms that address the 18 anticompetitive effects of Google’s unlawful conduct.²⁷ Google would be enjoined from continuing 19 or restarting certain anticompetitive conduct related to Android and the Google Play Store for at least

1 four to seven years. An Independent Compliance Professional (“ICP”), paid for by Google but 2 selected by Google and the States, will monitor Google’s compliance for five years.²⁸

3 Exclusivity and preloading. The Settlement prohibits Google from (i) for at least five years, 4 entering into or enforcing deals with OEMs that require preload exclusivity or home screen
5 exclusivity for the Google Play Store; (ii) for at least four years, entering into or enforcing OEM deals 6 that block the granting of “installer rights” to preloaded apps; and (iii) for at least five years, requiring 7 that OEMs obtain its consent before preloading third-party app stores.²⁹

8 Sideloaded. The Settlement requires Google (i) to continue to allow installation of third-9 party apps, including third-party app stores, from outside the Google Play Store, for at least seven 10 years; and (ii) to simplify the process for installing apps from outside Google Play, including by 11 combining certain warning screens and updating user interface language, for at least five years.³⁰

12 Android Support for Third-Party App Stores. The Settlement requires that Google
13 maintain Android operating system support for third-party app stores installed through non-Play-14 Store channels, including by enabling automatic background updates of apps installed from those 15 third-party app stores, for at least four years.³¹

16 Most Favored Nation (“MFN”) Clauses. The Settlement prohibits Google from offering or 17 enforcing (i) for at least four years, any “simultaneous shipping” (or “sim ship”) MFN clauses that 18 require a developer to launch their app catalog on Google Play Store at the same time as on other 19 Android app stores, or to offer their titles with the same or better features on Google Play Store as on 20 other app stores;³² and (ii) for at least five years, any price parity MFN clauses.³³

1 this motion.³⁷ Distribution of funds can commence within ten days of the Effective Date (i.e., the 2 date when the Court has granted final approval, and appellate review is exhausted).³⁸ Prior to that,
 3 the fund will earn interest that will inure to the benefit of consumers. The Consumer Compensation 4 and the Notice and Distribution plans are explained in greater detail below (at pp. 15-18). The 5 proposed long and short form Notices are attached as Exhibits A and B, respectively, to the 6 Declaration of Eric Schachter in Support of States’ Motion to Give Notice of Proposed Parens
 7 Patriae Settlement (“Schachter Decl.”). The Distribution Plan is described in detail in the 8 Declaration of Lana Cooper in Support of States’ Motion to Give Notice of Proposed Parens Patriae
 9 Settlement (“Cooper Decl.”).

10 The $70 million States’ Monetary Fund is intended to resolve the States’ non-parens state 11 antitrust and consumer protection claims, including claims for restitution, disgorgement, attorneys’ 12 fees, and civil penalties. The States’ Monetary Fund shall be apportioned among the States according 13 to a distribution agreement negotiated among the States. Unlike the parens claims asserted under 14 § 15c, settlement of these non-parens claims does not require court approval.

15 As explained in Section 5.6 of the Settlement Agreement, the States intend to use the States’
 16 Monetary Fund for one or more of the following purposes: (i) antitrust or consumer protection law 17 enforcement; (ii) deposit into a state antitrust or consumer protection account (e.g., revolving 18 account, trust account), for use in accordance with state laws governing that account; (iii) deposit 19 into a fund exclusively dedicated to assisting state attorneys general to enforce the antitrust laws by 20 defraying the costs of (a) experts, economists, and consultants in multistate antitrust investigations 21 and litigation, (b) training or continuing education in antitrust for attorneys in state attorney general 22 offices, or (c) information management systems used in multistate antitrust investigations and 23 litigation; (iv) payment of States’ Attorneys’ Fees and Expenses; or (v) for any other purpose as the 24 Attorneys General deem appropriate, consistent with the various states’ laws.

25 C. Release of Claims

26 The Settlement Agreement provides that upon entry of a Final Approval Order and following 27

28 ³⁷ Settlement Agreement § 5.3.2.

³⁸ Id. §§ 1.14, 5.3.6.

1 the exhaustion of all appeals, the States shall be deemed to have released, to the extent permitted by 2 law, all “Released Claims,” as defined in the Settlement.³⁹

3 LEGAL FRAMEWORK

4 States have long-standing authority to bring parens patriae actions for antitrust law 5 violations. In Hawaii v. Standard Oil Co., 405 U.S. 251 (1972), the Supreme Court affirmed the 6 “right of a State to sue as parens patriae to prevent or repair harm to its ‘quasi-sovereign’ 7 interests.”⁴⁰ In 1976, Congress enacted the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act, which 8 sets out an explicit statutory framework for antitrust parens claims and authorized the States to 9 pursue damages on behalf of consumers.⁴¹ That provision requires that parens actions for monetary 10 relief “shall not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the court” and requires the 11 dissemination of “notice of any proposed dismissal or compromise.”⁴² Because federal and state 12 antitrust statutes do not “set[] forth a standard by which proposed parens patriae settlements are 13 approved ... federal courts have adopted the approval procedure and standards used for preliminary 14 approval in class action settlements under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 23.”⁴³

15 Under Rule 23(e), if the Court determines that it “will likely be able to” approve the settlement 16 after a hearing and a “finding that [the settlement] is fair, reasonable, and adequate,” the Court “must 17 direct notice in a reasonable manner to all class members who would be bound by the proposal.” Fed.
18 R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1)(B). To determine whether the Court will likely be able to approve the class, Rule 19 23(e) directs the Court to consider certain specific factors. The Preliminary Approval section of the 20 District’s Procedural Guidance for Class Action Settlements (“Procedural Guidance”) sets out 21 additional criteria to be assessed in connection with disseminating notice.⁴⁴

ARGUMENT

I. The Settlement Is Fair, Reasonable, and Adequate

The factors set forth in Rule 23 favor dissemination of notice in this case.

A. The States Have Adequately – and Zealously – Represented Consumers

The States have vigorously represented the interests of their citizens in this action for more than two years. As explained above (at p. 3), the States, working together with Consumer Counsel and the other co-plaintiffs, engaged in extensive discovery and motion practice and actively contributed to all aspects of the coordinated prosecution of this case.

B. The Settlement Agreement Was Negotiated at Arm’s Length

As discussed above (at pp. 4-5), the Settlement resulted from arm’s length negotiations between the States, Consumer Counsel, and Google. Senior law enforcement officials from California, New York, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Utah represented the States. Negotiations started in earnest in August 2022, and the mediation process took hundreds of hours, including multiple two-day, in-person negotiation sessions overseen by experienced mediators. Throughout, the States pushed forcefully for strong injunctive relief. The settlement terms reflect the parties’ most up-to-date assessments at the time of the strengths and weaknesses of the case and the relative risks of trial versus settlement.

C. The Relief Provided for Consumers Is Adequate

1. The Trial and Appeal Would Be Costly, Risky, and Protracted

The unprecedented injunctive relief that the States obtained from Google will bring significant, immediate, and certain relief to consumers, and will bring down barriers to competition in the relevant markets. Under the terms of the Settlement Agreement, consumers will face significantly fewer obstacles to installing apps, including third-party app stores, from non-Play Store

1 sources.⁴⁵ They will also be able to keep those apps updated automatically.⁴⁶ Device manufacturers 2 will have more freedom to pre-load third-party app stores,⁴⁷ and consumers will be able to receive 3 discounts from, and find exclusive titles on, third-party app stores.⁴⁸ Developers will no longer be 4 prohibited from telling consumers about better, cheaper ways to pay for in-app content,⁴⁹ and 5 consumers will be able to use multiple payment methods to transact on the Play Store.⁵⁰ No other 6 U.S. antitrust enforcer has been able to achieve comparable results.

7 The monetary component of the settlement also reflects a reasonable compromise and 8 allocation of risk. The States' economic expert estimated damages to all U.S. consumers at 9 approximately $10.5 billion, depending on the assumptions used.⁵¹ The $630 million parens patriae
 10 fund available to consumers is roughly 6% of the estimated nationwide single damages. This 11 percentage is fair and adequate under the circumstances. First, the amount of compensatory relief 12 must be considered in light of the strength of the injunctive relief.⁵² Most antitrust settlements do not

1 include injunctive relief of this magnitude. Second, this case was unusually risky and difficult to 2 litigate, even for an antitrust case. Indeed, at the time the States and Consumer Counsel decided to 3 settle, there was a substantial probability, for the following reasons, that proceeding to trial may have 4 resulted in a defense verdict or in a plaintiffs' verdict with a small damages figure.

5 Damages and Injury. Even if the States and Consumer Counsel prevailed on liability, 6 damages would have posed a significant trial risk. Indeed, "the history of antitrust litigation is replete 7 with cases in which antitrust plaintiffs succeeded at trial on liability but recovered no damages, or 8 only negligible damages, at trial, or on appeal."⁵³ Google successfully excluded Dr. Singer's 9 testimony. At trial, the States would have relied on the expert testimony of Dr. Rysman, who 10 advanced a structural model calculating the dollar value to consumers of lost variety in the app market, 11 as opposed to a traditional overcharge model. Although well-grounded in economic literature, no 12 model like Dr. Rysman's variety model has ever been tested in antitrust litigation. Google also 13 challenged the aggregate nature of the calculation and the appropriateness of variety losses as a 14 measure of damages under the Clayton Act. And the exclusion of Dr. Singer's testimony, which 15 occurred one week before the parties agreed to the settlement in principle, meant that the States would 16 have had no damages model if the Court had granted Google's pending motions against Dr. Rysman's 17 testimony.

18 Finally, there was the risk that jurors would have thought that $10.5 billion dollars in damages, 19 or anything approaching that, was simply too much. Even at the low end, Dr. Rysman's damages
 20 calculations far exceed the largest-ever antitrust verdict of which the States are aware.⁵⁴ The States 21 believe Dr. Rysman's calculations accurately capture the scope of Google's wrongful conduct. But 22 some jurors might have struggled to award damages of that magnitude.

23 Epic and Match as Co-Plaintiffs. The States and Consumers would likely have been going 24 to trial with Epic Games and Match and may have suffered from that juxtaposition. There would have 25 been significant tension between the States' claim that consumers suffered damages and injury, and 26 the claim of Match and Epic that developers bore the harm, especially Match's claim for millions of

1 dollars in direct damages. Furthermore, Google asserted counterclaims against Epic and Match and 2 argued, with some force, that Epic acted in bad faith. Indeed, it argued at trial that Epic deceived
3 Google about its intentions with Project Liberty and intentionally breached its developer agreement.
4 A joint trial risked becoming about Epic’s alleged misconduct, not Google’s, and the States may well 5 have struggled to distance themselves from Epic and Match.

6 Market Definition and Power. At trial, Google would have argued, as it did in its trial against 7 Epic, that Android competes fiercely against Apple in the same markets and thus that Google is not a 8 monopolist.⁵⁵ Apple won similar arguments concerning competition between Apple and Google in 9 the Epic Games v. Apple litigation.⁵⁶ The Ninth Circuit affirmed the trial court’s finding that Apple
10 and Google “compete with one another” and that Google “operates in the same market” as Apple.⁵⁷
11 While the decision in the Apple litigation of course would not bind the jury in a trial against Google, 12 Apple’s win at the trial and appellate level demonstrated the power of the argument at the time of 13 settlement.

14 Exclusionary Conduct and Procompetitive Justifications. Google may also have been able 15 to capitalize on the differences between its conduct and Apple’s. Unlike iOS, Android permits 16 consumers to download third-party app stores, including from well-resourced companies like Amazon
17 and Samsung; unlike the Apple App Store, Google Play is not the only app store available on Android.
18 Additionally, Samsung’s app store is typically preloaded on its smartphones, which comprise the 19 majority of Android smartphones sold in the United States. Google may have been able to convince 20 a jury that competing stores simply had inferior products.⁵⁸

21 Moreover, some of the conduct at issue, like sideloading warnings and certain technical 22 restrictions on the current operations of third-party app stores, have facially plausible security 23 justifications. Here again, Google may have been able to gain traction with the jury by comparing 24 itself to Apple’s locked-down ecosystem. That is, by maintaining a degree of openness, Android

1 differentiated itself from iOS, while the challenged conduct also constituted action to safeguard 2 Android against the greater malware risk resulting from that very openness.⁵⁹ While the States and 3 Consumers have vigorously argued that Google’s security justifications are pretextual, there was 4 substantial risk at the time of settlement that a jury would have agreed with Google that its restrictions 5 strike the right procompetitive balance.

6 Anticompetitive Effects. Google would have argued at trial that plaintiffs cannot show 7 anticompetitive harm because the evidence shows “expanding output and improved quality” of 8 devices, apps, and app transactions.⁶⁰ A jury could well have rejected as speculative the argument 9 that absent the challenged conduct, Android smartphones would be even richer in apps, features, and 10 choices.

11 Appellate Risk and Cost of Delay. Given the factual and legal complexity of this case, there 12 was no guarantee that a verdict in favor of the States would withstand appeal. The appropriate market 13 definition and the admissibility of Dr. Rysman’s variety model stand out as issues likely to have 14 attracted close scrutiny, with no guarantee of a favorable resolution in the Ninth Circuit or beyond.

15 And even if the States succeeded at trial and on appeal, that would come at a cost: delay. In 16 Epic v. Apple, about 19 months elapsed between the district court’s decision (September 2021) and 17 the Ninth Circuit’s opinion (April 2023), and the Ninth Circuit stayed the district court’s antisteering 18 injunctive relief pending appeal.⁶¹ Even now, more than two years since the trial verdict, Epic and 19 Apple are still waiting for the Supreme Court to decide whether to take up their case. If that same 20 pattern held here, consumers would have to wait until the end of 2025—and perhaps later—to obtain 21 relief. That delay has a cost, both in terms of the time value of damages that cannot yet be distributed 22 and the delayed implementation of injunctive relief, which would further cement Google’s 23 dominance.

24 For instance, absent the settlement, there is no guarantee that Google would allow all Android
 25 developers to offer user choice billing to all U.S. customers at any point in the future, let alone

1 immediately.⁶² Moreover, the other injunctive provisions, such as the terms effectively allowing 2 developers to offer exclusive titles and lower prices on competing app stores, will only begin to loosen 3 Play Store’s grip on the app distribution market once they go into effect.

4 Securing a certain recovery and robust injunctive relief in the face of significant litigation risk
 5 represents an excellent result for consumers. Moreover, having the injunctive relief take effect 6 immediately, and the monetary relief paid out promptly, is itself of significant value to consumers 7 and other market participants.

8 2. The Proposed Method for Distributing Relief to Consumers Is Effective

9 Notice. The notice process uses account information provided by Google to provide direct 10 notice via email to virtually all Eligible Consumers, in addition to publication notice. The States’
 11 proposed Long Form Notice⁶³ and Summary Notice⁶⁴ include all the information required by Rule 12 23(c)(2)(B), including basic information about the case and the settlement, as well as information 13 about the process and deadline for opting out. The States propose a notice program managed by 14 A.B. Data, a firm with deep experience in representative actions. The notice program will include 15 direct notice by email, as well as publication notice via digital advertising, PR Newswire Online, 16 and a dedicated notice website.⁶⁵ The States will publish notice on their State Attorney General 17 websites.

18 For direct email notice, A.B. Data will use e-mail addresses and other data provided by 19 Google to send out an email version of the Summary Notice.⁶⁶ In this case direct notice offers the 20 best notice practicable because the notice provider will have contact information for nearly every 21 Eligible Consumer and can send direct notice electronically and affordably. Electronic notice by 23 ⁶² Although various Congressional committees have considered bills that would require Apple and 24 Google to reform their app stores and implement User Choice Billing, none have ever passed a floor 25 vote. And while Google has implemented user choice billing in other countries, it offers it in the U.S.

 26 only as a “pilot program” – and then only for non-game apps that make up a small minority of Play’s revenue. See Google, Enrolling in the User Choice Billing Pilot, <https://support.google.com/googleplay/android-developer/answer/12570971?hl=en>.

 4 Eligible Consumers, who are defined as natural persons with a “Legal Address” in their Google 5 payments profile in one of the States when they purchased an app from Google Play or made an in-6 app purchase (including subscriptions) through Google Play Billing from August 16, 2016 through 7 September 30, 2023.⁷⁸ The States understand that the lawyers for the proposed Consumer Class will 8 make an application for payment of attorneys’ fees and costs against the Settlement Fund Amount, 9 as the Settlement Agreement and the Joint Prosecution Agreement contemplate.⁷⁹ The funds
 10 remaining in the Settlement Fund—net of any award to the lawyers for the proposed Consumer 11 Class, taxes, notice and claims administration costs, or other payments authorized by the Court—
 12 shall be distributed to Eligible Consumers until the amount of remaining unclaimed funds makes it 13 no longer feasible or cost-effective to continue distribution. At that point, the States will seek the 14 Court’s approval to distribute the remaining unclaimed funds to the States as penalties pursuant to 15 Title 15, Section 15e(2).

16 The distribution plan will make automatic and direct payments to Eligible Consumers without 17 a claims submission process. Each Eligible Consumer is eligible to receive at least $2 and may 18 receive additional payments in proportion to their Google Play spending from August 16, 2016 19 through September 30, 2023, unless the consumer has filed a timely request for exclusion.⁸⁰ If the 20 Eligible Consumer’s email address associated with his or her Google Play account matches an email

 22 directly to that PayPal or Venmo account.⁸¹ The Eligible Consumer will receive an email from PayPal

1 Eligible Consumer’s email address associated with the consumer’s Google Play Account does not 2 match an email address associated with an existing PayPal or Venmo account, that Eligible Consumer 3 will receive an email notifying the consumer of the available payment and the opportunity to create a 4 new PayPal or Venmo account, redirect the payment to an existing PayPal or Venmo account at 5 another email address, or select another payment mechanism such as a written check or an ACH 6 transfer.⁸²

7 After these payments have been made, Eligible Consumers who have not received payment 8 through PayPal, Venmo, or another means and are entitled to payment above a certain threshold will 9 be sent a written check.⁸³ Payments to Eligible Consumers are for over-charges and are not deemed 10 reportable for tax purposes.

11 The settlement administrator believes that Eligible Consumers who can receive automatic 12 payments will account for the vast majority of funds to be distributed.⁸⁴ PayPal has 237,000,000 13 accounts in the United States, with a domestic market share of 82%.⁸⁵ In the last five years, 70% of 14 U.S. adults have used PayPal.⁸⁶ Venmo has 90,000,000 active accounts in the United States.⁸⁷ In 15 addition, consumers with significant Google Play spending—those who will receive most of the 16 funds—are probably even more likely than the average US consumer to have digital payment 17 accounts such as PayPal or Venmo.⁸⁸ Because most of the funds will be distributed to Eligible 18 Consumers automatically, the States conservatively expect a 70% distribution rate, which compares 19 extremely well with similar settlements.⁸⁹

20 The States anticipate that any unclaimed funds will be distributed pro-rata in subsequent 21 rounds of payment to Eligible Consumers to whom payments were previously made. When the (5.2% claims rate for a $725 million class action settlement).

1 amount of remaining unclaimed funds is low enough that the States, in consultation with the 2 settlement administrator, believe that it is no longer feasible or cost-effective to continue to distribute 3 funds to Eligible Consumers, the States will seek the Court’s approval to distribute the remaining 4 unclaimed funds to the States’ Monetary Fund.⁹⁰ No Settlement Funds will return to Google.

5 3. *The Amount Paid into the States’ Monetary Fund Is Fair and Reasonable

6 Google will transfer $70 million into a separate States’ Monetary Fund to resolve the non-7 parens state claims, including for restitution, disgorgement, and civil penalties. This States’ Monetary 8 Fund—10% of the Settlement total—is consistent with California state law.⁹¹ The States will 9 apportion and use this States’ Monetary Fund in accordance with state law.⁹² Payment for the States’ 10 attorneys’ fees and costs—including expert costs—will come from the States’ Monetary Fund.

11 The States understand that, consistent with the principle of quantum meruit, the Joint 12 Prosecution Agreement between the States and Consumer Counsel, and the Settlement Agreement, 13 Consumer Counsel will petition the Court to receive fees and litigation expenses from the parens 14 Settlement Fund.⁹³ Consumer Counsel has advised the States that they have invested a total of 15 $64,191,411.15 in attorney time and approximately $8,630,018.87 in costs in this matter. Consumer 16 Counsel have further advised the States that they will seek a fee award of no more than $122,850,000, 17 which would amount to a 1.91 multiplier and 19.5% of the parens fund, as well as reimbursement of 18 litigation expenses of approximately $8,630,018.87.⁹⁴ If the Court were to grant the maximum 19 possible request, a remaining fund of nearly $500 million for payments to consumers well justifies 20 disseminating notice. The States take no position at this time on any fee request by Consumer 21 Counsel.

1 4. There Are No Other Related Agreements

2 The States have not entered into any related agreements requiring disclosure under Federal 3 Rule of Civil Procedure 23(e)(3). The Joint Prosecution Agreement with Consumer Counsel has 4 already been disclosed.⁹⁵

5 5. The Settlement Agreement Treats Consumers Equitably

6 Each Eligible Consumer will receive at least $2 and will receive additional payments in 7 proportion to their Google Play spending during the period between August 16, 2016 and September 8 30, 2023. Any unclaimed funds will be distributed in additional rounds of distribution to Eligible 9 Consumers for whom payment can be issued. Consumers will not be required to submit claims.
10 Payments will be made to Eligible Consumers' accounts on PayPal or Venmo or, if the Eligible 11 Consumer elects, through an alternative method of distribution.

12 D. The Settlement Satisfies the District's Procedural Guidance

13 This District's Procedural Guidance on the approval of class action settlements does not by 14 its terms apply to a parens settlement. Nevertheless, in accordance with it, above, the States have 15 provided relevant information regarding: (1)c. the consumer recovery under the settlement and the 16 potential consumer recovery if the States were to fully prevail; (1)e. the proposed allocation plan; 17 (1)f. the expected participation by consumers in the settlement; (1)g. the non-reversion of unclaimed
18 funds; (3-5) the proposed notice including (9) the opt-out and objection timeline; and (6) States' 19 attorneys' fees and costs. Information regarding (1)a. differences between the settlement class and 20 the class proposed in the complaint and (10) compliance with CAFA are not applicable since this is 21 a parens settlement and not a class settlement.

22 Discussed below are the remaining relevant provisions of the Procedural Guidance regarding 23 (1)b. differences between the claims to be released and the claims alleged in the operative complaint; 24 (1)d. any other cases that will be affected by the settlement; (2)a. and b. the settlement administrator, 25 the selection process, and the anticipated administrative costs; (7) named plaintiff incentive awards; 26 (8) cy pres awards; and (11) past distributions in comparable class settlements.

1 1. The Releases Track the Allegations in the Complaint

2 Procedural Guidance, Preliminary Approval section (1)b. instructs parties to explain any 3 differences between the claims to be released in the settlement and claims asserted in the complaint.
4 The Settlement Agreement defines Claims as follows: “For the avoidance of doubt ‘Claims’ includes, 5 and this agreement releases, only claims that arise from the factual allegations or claims made in any 6 complaint filed in the Actions.” Paragraph 11.6 of the Settlement Agreement further states: “For 7 avoidance of doubt, the releases in this Settlement do not include consumer protection claims, 8 antitrust claims, or non-antitrust claims that do not arise from the factual allegations or claims in the 9 Actions.” The releases therefore track the claims in the operative complaint.

10 2. The Settlement Administrator Selection Process and Costs are Reasonable

11 Procedural Guidance, Preliminary Approval section (2), instructs parties to identify (i) the 12 proposed settlement administrator, (ii) the settlement administrator selection process, (iii) the number 13 of proposals submitted, (iv) counsel’s history of engagements with the settlement administrator over 14 the last two years, (v) procedures for securely handling consumer data, (vi) liability and insurance 15 coverage in case of errors, (vii) anticipated administration costs, (viii) the reasonableness of those 16 costs in relation to the value of the settlement, and (ix) who will pay the costs. The Guidance also 17 instructs the parties to identify the methods of notice and claims payment proposed, which the States 18 have done above (at pp. 15-18). Here, the answers to each of these questions support the fairness and 19 adequacy of the proposed settlement administration process.

20 Selection Process. KCC will implement the distribution plan for the Settlement. Prior to 21 selecting KCC, the States solicited and received proposals from three nationally recognized class 22 action claims administrators. KCC has been appointed as notice, claims, and/or settlement 23 administrator in large consumer and antitrust cases, including previous parens patriae actions.⁹⁶

 4 v. Uber Technologies, Inc., No. EQCE083577 (Polk Cnty., Iowa). In addition, KCC has handled the 5 administration of California’s Consumer Recovery Fund for consumers affected by bankrupt motor 6 vehicle dealers who failed to fulfill contractual obligations.⁹⁸

7 Data Security and Liability Coverage. KCC has developed a comprehensive information 8 and cybersecurity framework that applies to all business units. KCC’s proprietary technology and 9 data-handling processes set the industry standard for security and quality.⁹⁹ Its cryptographic 10 solutions protect data using industry-leading practices to implement strong encryption for 11 authentication and transmission of information. KCC’s Information Security team actively monitors 12 the internal and external threat environment to ensure that its security controls are appropriate and 13 effective.¹⁰⁰ KCC also has a team dedicated to fraud prevention that develops prevention measures 14 customized for each administration.¹⁰¹

15 KCC maintains insurance applicable to its services. KCC’s errors and omissions insurance 16 covers any claim that arises out of any wrongful professional act (subject to terms and conditions of 17 the policy) with a policy limit of $50 million. KCC’s crime insurance covers all thefts and dishonest 18 acts (subject to terms and conditions of the policy) with a policy limit of $50 million.¹⁰²

19 Administration Costs. The total cost of the notice and distribution program is currently 20 estimated to be approximately $15 million. The administration costs are to be paid from the 21 Settlement Fund, and the cost of administration—both in dollar terms and as a percentage of the 22 Fund—compare favorably with comparable settlements in this district, as explained below.

3. Service Awards

The States do not anticipate seeking service awards. The States understand that the six individual plaintiffs in the proposed Consumer Class action intend to request service awards. The States take no position at this time on any such request.

4. Cy Pres

The States do not presently intend to perform any sort of cy pres distribution.

5. Past Distributions

As shown below, the expected claims rate and administrative costs for this case compare favorably to similar settlements in this district along the metrics specified by Procedural Guidance, Preliminary Approval section (11).¹⁰³

¹⁰³ The chart below compares this Settlement to the settlements in (i) In re: Facebook, Inc. Consumer Privacy User Profile Litigation, Case No. 3:18-md-02843-VC (N.D. Cal.), and (ii) In re TFT-LCD (Flat Panel) Antitrust Litig., No. 07-md-01827-SI (N.D. Cal.). These figures reflect best estimates based on publicly available records.
