TO ALL PARTIES AND THEIR ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on May 15, 2025, at 9:00 a.m., or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Courtroom 4, 5th Floor, located at 280 South 1st Street, San Jose, CA 95113, Defendant NVIDIA corporation (“NVIDIA”), through their undersigned counsel, will, and hereby does, move to dismiss Counts I, II, III, and IV of the Amended Complaint pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) for lack of Article III standing and Counts I, II, and III of the Amended Complaint pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

NVIDIA’s Motion to Dismiss is based on this Notice, the supporting Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the complete files and records in this action, and any additional material and arguments as may be considered in connection with the hearing on the Motion.

ISSUES TO BE DECIDED

The Motion presents the following issues to be decided:

- (1) whether Counts I, II, III, and IV of the Complaint, for unjust enrichment, violation of Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, et seq., violation of Mass. Gen. Law. Ch. 93A et seq., and for copyright infringement should be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(1) for lack of Article III standing;
- (2) whether Counts I, II, and III of the Complaint should be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) as preempted by Section 301 of the Copyright Act; and
- (3) whether Counts I, II, and III of the Complaint should be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim.

I. INTRODUCTION

This case is one of three nearly identical putative class action suits filed against technology companies based on their purported training of AI models using video content that Plaintiffs David Millette and Ruslana Petryazhna (“Plaintiffs”) uploaded to YouTube. Amended Complaint (“Am. Compl.”); Millette v. OpenAI, Inc., No. 24-CV-4710, Dkt. No. 47 (Aug. 2, 2024); Millette v. Google LLC, No. 24-CV-4708, Dkt. No. 35 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 2, 2024). Plaintiffs’ claims against NVIDIA are flawed in three respects, any one of which warrants dismissal.

First, Plaintiffs lack Article III standing. Their claims are based on allegations that NVIDIA “scraped,” without consent, videos that Plaintiffs purportedly uploaded to YouTube, and then “unfairly profit[ed]” by using those videos to train its AI models. Am. Compl. ¶¶ 5, 8, 52. But the Amended Complaint is devoid of allegations that Plaintiffs have suffered or will suffer a concrete, particularized injury in fact sufficient to confer standing under Article III. For example, beyond a conclusory allegation that each Plaintiff suffered unspecified “economic injury,” the Amended Complaint offers no plausible basis to infer that NVIDIA utilized Plaintiffs’ videos to train its AI models.

Second, as numerous courts in this District have concluded in similar cases, the Copyright Act preempts Plaintiffs’ state-law claims. E.g., X Corp. v. Bright Data Ltd., No. 23-CV-03698, 2024 WL 4894290, at *12 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 26, 2024) (Alsup, J.) (denying leave to amend “scraping-related claims” for “misappropriation, unjust enrichment, and related tortious interference” on preemption grounds) (emphasis omitted); Tremblay v. OpenAI, Inc., No. 23-cv-03223, 2024 WL 3640501, at *2 (N.D. Cal. July 30, 2024) (Martínez-Olguín, J.) (holding Copyright Act preempted UCL claim based on “use” of plaintiff’s books to train AI); Doe 1 v. GitHub, Inc., No. 22-CV-06823, 2024 WL 235217, at *7–9 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2024) (Tigar, J.) (holding Copyright Act preempted claims for “unjust enrichment” and “unfair competition” based on allegations that AI model reproduced a plaintiff’s licensed code as preempted by the Copyright Act); Andersen v. Stability AI Ltd., No. 23-CV-00201, 2024 WL 3823234, at *9 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 12, 2024) (Orrick, J.) (holding Copyright Act preempted unjust enrichment claim based on the “use” of plaintiffs’ works to “train, develop, and promote” defendants’ AI products); Kadrey v. Meta Platforms, Inc.,

1 No. 23-CV-03417, 2023 WL 8039640, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2023) (Chhabria, J.) (holding 2 Copyright Act preempted “UCL” and “unjust enrichment” claims premised on “the use of the 3 plaintiffs’ books to train [a large language model]”). The statute’s “explicit and broad” preemption
4 provision bars any state-law protection for rights equivalent to the “exclusive rights” in works
5 within the Act’s scope. Media.net Advert. FZ-LLC v. Netseer, Inc., 198 F. Supp. 3d 1083, 1087 &
6 n.2 (N.D. Cal. 2016).

7 The Amended Complaint asserts rights in videos, which fall within the scope of 8 “audiovisual works.” 17 U.S.C. § 102(a)(6). And Plaintiffs’ allegations about NVIDIA using 9 “unauthorized” “reproductions” of those videos echo the exclusive rights to “reproduce”
10 copyrighted work, to “prepare derivative works,” and to “authorize” the same. Am. Compl. ¶¶ 52–
11 53; 17 U.S.C. § 106(1)–(2). Indeed, Plaintiff Petryazhna claims that these very same allegations
12 make out a plausible copyright infringement claim. Am. Compl. ¶¶ 77–86. To be clear—Plaintiff
13 lacks standing to assert a copyright claim and NVIDIA intends to defend that claim, including by 14 presenting a fair use defense should this case proceed—but its inclusion in the Amended Complaint
15 undermines any argument Plaintiffs have to avoid preemption. That Plaintiff Millette fails to assert 16 that his videos are protected by copyright is of no consequence, as his videos and his allegations of 17 wrongdoing are within the subject matter of the Copyright Act. Firoozye v. Earthlink Network, 153
18 F. Supp. 2d 1115, 1124 (N.D. Cal. 2001); Patnaik v. Hearst Corp., No. CV 14-05158, 2015 WL
19 12746704, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 7, 2015).

20 Third, Plaintiffs’ California Unfair Competition Law (“UCL”), California unjust
21 enrichment, and Massachusetts Unfair and Deceptive Business Practices (“93A”) causes of action
22 fail to state a claim. Plaintiffs’ UCL claim fails because they cannot satisfy the UCL’s exacting
23 statutory standing requirement for “economic injury.” Cottle v. Plaid Inc., 536 F. Supp. 3d 461,
24 483 (N.D. Cal. 2021). Plaintiffs’ conclusory assertions that NVIDIA engaged in “unfair,” 25 “unlawful,” and “deceptive[]” practices for “commercial profit,” which “outweigh[ed] any benefit 26 to consumers,” Am. Compl. ¶¶ 50–55, cannot make out a plausible theory of UCL liability.
27 Plaintiffs’ unjust enrichment claim mirrors nearly identical claims filed by others in this District
28 that were dismissed. Tremblay v. OpenAI, Inc., 716 F. Supp. 3d 772, 781 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 12, 2024);

1 Doe 1, No. 22-CV-06823, Dkt. No. 253 at 12 (N.D. Cal. June 24, 2024). And Plaintiff Millette’s
2 93A claim similarly fails to satisfy key threshold requirements.

3 The Court should dismiss the Amended Complaint in its entirety with prejudice. Dismissal
4 with prejudice is warranted here given Plaintiffs’ ample notice of their claims’ deficiencies. Even 5 a cursory review of the caselaw in this District would alert them to the multiple similar and recent 6 actions dismissed with prejudice. Indeed, in the Complaint, Plaintiffs copied word-for-word the 7 same allegations that Judge Martínez-Olguín dismissed with prejudice last July. Compare Compl.
8 ¶ 49, with Tremblay v. OpenAI, Inc., No. 23-CV-3223, Dkt. No. 120 (Am. Compl.) at ¶¶ 73–74
9 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 13, 2024); Tremblay, 2024 WL 3640501 at *2 (dismissing “¶¶ 34, 71, 73–74” with 10 prejudice). Remarkably, Plaintiffs kept that same language in the Amended Complaint. Am
11 Compl. ¶ 53. Instead of trying to buttress those allegations with new facts, Plaintiffs simply tacked
12 on two additional claims—Plaintiff Petryazhna’s claim for copyright infringement and Plaintiff
13 Millette’s Massachusetts 93A claim. But both claims fail for lack of standing, and the latter is also 14 deficient as a matter of law. Further leave to amend will not produce an actionable complaint, and 15 Plaintiffs have already had their shot at amendment as a matter of course. Indeed, this is the sixth 16 complaint that Millette has filed across his three cases pending before this Court. This Court should 17 put an end to this litigation.

18 II. BACKGROUND

19 Plaintiffs Millette and Petryazhna allege that they created YouTube accounts in June 2009
20 and 2008, respectively, and that they have “uploaded” “video content” to YouTube since then. Am.
21 Compl. ¶¶ 6, 7. Plaintiff Petryazhna alleges that she registered her YouTube content with the United 22 States Copyright office. Id. ¶ 7. Plaintiff Millette does not assert that the videos he purportedly 23 uploaded are subject to a copyright or contain any personal content or information.

24 Nevertheless, Plaintiffs allege in a conclusory fashion that NVIDIA “scraped” their videos,
25 as well as “millions of [other] YouTube videos,” “for the purpose of training its AI system,” 26 Cosmos, “without permission.” Id. ¶¶ 3, 8. Plaintiffs claim that NVIDIA used “transcriptions and 27 copies” of their YouTube videos, among others, to make NVIDIA’s products more valuable to 28 consumers. Id. ¶¶ 53, 55. NVIDIA’s resulting profits, they claim, were “unfair[]” because they

1 relied on “unattributed reproductions” of his “videos and ideas.” Id. ¶ 52.

2 Based on these allegations, both Plaintiffs bring claims of unjust enrichment, id. ¶¶ 37–48,
 3 and violation of the UCL, id. ¶¶ 49–55. They purport to represent a nationwide class defined as 4 “all persons or entities domiciled in the United States that uploaded any YouTube video that was 5 fed to and used as training data for the ‘Cosmos’ AI Project without their consent.” Id. ¶ 25.
 6 Plaintiff Millette asserts a Massachusetts 93A claim and purports to represent a Massachusetts
 7 subclass. Id. ¶ 26.¹ And Plaintiff Petryazhna brings a claim of copyright infringement on behalf of 8 herself and a “copyright class”—a subclass of individuals whose registered copyright material
 9 appears in their YouTube videos. Id. ¶ 27. Plaintiffs seek “restitution and all other forms of 10 equitable monetary relief” as well as “injunctive relief as the Court may deem proper.” Id. at 17.

11 III. LEGAL STANDARD

12 Article III standing is a “threshold” jurisdictional issue addressed under Rule 12(b)(1).
 13 Bates v. United Parcel Serv., Inc., 511 F.3d 974, 985 (9th Cir. 2007). Plaintiffs bear the burden of 14 demonstrating they have Article III standing, requiring that Plaintiffs show injury that is (i)
 15 “concrete, particularized, and actual or imminent,” (ii) “fairly traceable to the challenged action,”
 16 and (iii) “redressable by a favorable ruling.” Clapper v. Amnesty Int’l USA, 568 U.S. 398, 409
 17 (2013) (citations omitted).

18 To overcome a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain enough facts,
 19 taken as true, to “state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 20 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007). “[A] formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action” and 21 “naked assertions devoid of further factual enhancement” “will not do.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S.
 22 662, 678 (2009) (cleaned up) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555, 557). It is also not enough that 23 the facts are “merely consistent with a defendant’s liability” or give rise to a “mere possibility of 24 misconduct.” Id. at 678–679 (quotation marks omitted). Instead, Plaintiffs’ claim to relief must be

25
 26 ¹ Plaintiffs filed a Statement of Non-Opposition to dismissal of identical state-law claims in their 27 related suit against OpenAI. Millette v. OpenAI, Inc., No. 24-CV-4710, Dkt. No. 60 (Feb. 7, 28 2025). As explained infra IV.B., these claims are clearly preempted by the Copyright Act.

1 “plausible on its face.” Id. at 663 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570).

2 IV. ARGUMENT

3 A. Plaintiffs Lack Article III Standing.

4 The Amended Complaint lacks sufficient allegations to establish Article III standing.
5 Article III allows for suit only if Plaintiffs suffered an injury in fact that is “concrete, particularized, 6 and actual or imminent.” TransUnion LLC v. Ramirez, 594 U.S. 413, 423 (2021). Any injury must 7 “affect the plaintiff in a personal and individual way.” FDA v. All. for Hippocratic Med., 602 U.S.
8 367, 381 (2024) (quotation marks omitted). That is equally true in class actions where “[n]amed 9 plaintiffs must show that they personally have been injured, not that injury has been suffered by 10 other, unidentified members of the class to which they belong.” Lewis v. Casey, 518 U.S. 343, 357
11 (1996) (quotation marks omitted).

12 The Amended Complaint fails to satisfy these bedrock requirements. Start with 13 concreteness. The relevant allegations are that (i) Plaintiffs had “ownership rights” in YouTube
14 “video content,” Am. Compl. ¶¶ 6, 7, 24, and (ii) NVIDIA “used” this video content to train an AI
15 model, id. ¶ 19, for “commercial profit,” id. ¶¶ 52, 75. But it is not enough to “point to the dollars
16 in a defendant’s pocket.” Opperman v. Path, Inc., 87 F. Supp. 3d 1018, 1056 (N.D. Cal. 2014)
17 (quotation marks omitted); B.K. v. Desert Care Network, No. 23-CV-5021, 2024 WL 1343305, at 18 *7 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 1, 2024) (explaining that a defendant’s profits, alone, do not “establish that 19 Plaintiff[] have lost money” as a result of the defendant’s conduct (emphasis in original)). Rather,
20 Plaintiffs must allege that they suffered a concrete injury in fact. They do not. In fact, Plaintiffs 21 never state that they suffered any legally cognizable harm—whether monetary, reputational,
22 privacy-based, or otherwise—from the use of their videos. They do not claim that NVIDIA severed 23 or diminished their ownership rights in any way. Nor do they assert that the market value of their 24 videos was diminished—to the extent Plaintiffs ascribed value to them in the first place.

25 The only mention of injury in the Amended Complaint is that NVIDIA deprived Plaintiffs 26 of “mon[ies] that would be owed to them” had Plaintiffs attempted to “license” their works. Am.
27 Compl. ¶ 54; see also id. ¶ 67 (similar). But that theory of harm is “purely hypothetical,” as 28 Plaintiffs do not allege that they “intended to sell” their videos in the past or in the future. E.g., In

1 re Facebook, Inc., Consumer Priv. User Profile Litig., 402 F. Supp. 3d 767, 784 (N.D. Cal. 2019)
2 (holding disclosure of personal information, without more, did not constitute concrete “economic
3 loss”); Yunker v. Pandora Media, Inc., No. 11-CV-03113 JSW, 2013 WL 1282980, at *4 (N.D.
4 Cal. Mar. 26, 2013) (finding no injury in fact based on alleged disclosure of personal information
5 where plaintiff did “not allege he that attempted to sell his PII, that he would do so in the future, or 6 that he was foreclosed from entering into a value for value transaction relating to his PII”); cf. Raw
7 Story Media, Inc. v. OpenAI, Inc., --- F. Supp. 3d ---, 2024 WL 4711729, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 7, 8 2024) (holding that the alleged “unauthorized removal of [copyright management information]
9 from [plaintiffs’] copyrighted work,” without more, does not constitute an Article III injury-in-10 fact); TransUnion, 594 U.S. at 426 (explaining that Congress “may not simply enact an injury into 11 existence” or “transform something that is not remotely harmful into something that is”). Without 12 more, Plaintiffs cannot establish concrete injury. Low v. LinkedIn Corp., No. 11-CV-01468, 2011
13 WL 5509848, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 11, 2011) (finding no injury in fact where plaintiff “failed to 14 allege how he was foreclosed from capitalizing on the value of his personal data or how he was 15 ‘deprived of the economic value of [his] personal information’ ”) (quoting LaCourt v. Specific 16 Media, Inc., No. 10-CV-1256, 2011 WL 1661532, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2011)).

17 Any alleged harm also is not particularized. In the entire Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs 18 devote only three sentences to how NVIDIA’s alleged conduct relate to them personally. Am.
19 Compl. ¶¶ 6–7, 24. The Amended Complaint lacks even the most basic information, such as the 20 name of Plaintiff Millette’s YouTube accounts and when between 2008 and 2024 Plaintiffs 21 uploaded content to YouTube. Plaintiffs’ threadbare assertions and conclusions not only fail to 22 allege any particularized harm to Plaintiffs, they also fail to “give the defendant fair notice of what 23 the claim . . . is and the grounds upon which it rests.” Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (quotation marks 24 omitted).

25 Further, Plaintiffs provide no facts whatsoever to support a plausible inference that their 26 videos were allegedly scraped or used by NVIDIA. There are billions of videos currently on 27
28

1 YouTube.² Yet Plaintiffs assert only that NVIDIA has “downloaded 100,000 videos,” Am. Compl.
2 ¶ 22, “scraped millions of YouTube videos,” id. ¶ 3, and “compiled 38.5 million URLs.” Id. ¶ 22.
3 They thus provide no plausible basis to conclude that this small fraction of the content on YouTube
4 includes their videos. Plaintiff’s allegation is no more plausible than someone picking one coin out
5 of Trevi Fountain and saying it is the one he threw in the fountain years ago.

6 Recent precedent makes clear that the mere possibility of Plaintiffs’ video content being 7 scraped is insufficient to confer standing. For example, Brantley v. Prisma Labs, Inc., No. 23 C
8 1566, 2024 WL 3673727, at *2, 5 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 6, 2024), recently dismissed on standing grounds 9 a claim that a plaintiff’s photographs were among billions allegedly scraped without consent from 10 social media sites to train an AI model. Although the model at issue in Brantley purportedly scraped 11 “almost every website from September 2021 to January 2022,” the plaintiff provided no additional 12 facts to establish that his photos “were contained in the [relevant] [d]ataset.” Id. at *5 (quotation
13 marks omitted). The complaint in that case, like the Amended Complaint, was deficient because it 14 pled “facts that [were] merely consistent with a defendant’s liability, [but that] stop[ped] short of 15 the line between possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief.” Id. at *6 (internal quotes
16 omitted); Doe 1, 2024 WL 235217, at *5 (dismissing for lack of standing where certain plaintiffs 17 “failed to plead specific instances in which their code” was unlawfully reproduced by defendant’s
18 AI model); cf. In re Google Assistant Priv. Litig., 457 F. Supp. 3d 797, 816 (N.D. Cal. 2020) 19 (dismissing Stored Communications Act claim where plaintiff failed to plausibly allege that, among 20 153 unlawfully intercepted recordings, “Plaintiffs’ own oral communications were intercepted”).

21 _____
22 ² There are approximately “14 billion” videos on YouTube. Ryan McGrady, What We Discovered
23 on ‘Deep YouTube’, The Atlantic (Jan. 26, 2024), https://www.theatlantic.com
24 /technology/archive/2024/01/how-many-videos-youtube-research/677250/; see also Perkins v.
25 LinkedIn Corp., 53 F. Supp. 3d 1190, 1204 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (recognizing that proper subjects of 26 judicial notice include “publicly accessible websites” and taking judicial notice of the contents of 27 LinkedIn.com); Wible v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 375 F. Supp. 2d 956, 965–966 (C.D. Cal. 2005) (taking 28 judicial notice of the contents of Amazon.com web pages describing books related to the case).

1 That defect applies to Plaintiff Petryazhna’s copyright claim, just as it does Plaintiffs’ state-law
 2 claims. Raw Story Media, Inc., 2024 WL 4711729, at *5 (dismissing similar copyright claim on 3 standing grounds because there was only a “remote” possibility that ChatGPT “would output . . .
 4 content from one of Plaintiffs’ articles”).

5 Accordingly, Plaintiffs fail to allege any concrete harm, and it is not plausible that any such 6 harm is personal to them. The Amended Complaint should be dismissed in its entirety for lack of 7 standing.

8 B. The Copyright Act Preempts Plaintiffs’ Claims.

9 The Copyright Act of 1976 expressly preempts state law claims “equivalent” to the 10 “exclusive rights” secured by federal law in protected “works of authorship.” 17 U.S.C. § 301.
 11 That preemption provision applies if two things hold true.

12 First, the state law claim must “fall[] within the subject matter of copyright” by asserting a 13 right in “one of the copyrightable categories” of works listed in 17 U.S.C. § 102. Best Carpet
 14 Values, Inc. v. Google, LLC, 90 F.4th 962, 970–971 (9th Cir. 2024) (quotation marks omitted).

15 Second, the “rights asserted” must be “equivalent to the rights contained in 17 U.S.C.
 16 § 106,” including the rights to “reproduce[] or distribute copies” of a work, to “prepare derivative
 17 works” based upon copyright material, and “to authorize others to do those things.” Id. at 970, 972
 18 (quoting Maloney v. T3Media, Inc., 853 F.3d 1004, 1010 (9th Cir. 2017)).

19 The focus of the second step is broad, and it applies even if the elements of a state law claim
 20 are not “identical” to those of copyright infringement. Laws v. Sony Music Entertainment, Inc., 21 448 F.3d 1134, 1144 (9th Cir. 2006). A state-law claim will “survive preemption” only if it is 22 “qualitatively different” from the copyright claim. Id. at 1143. In other words, it must contain “an 23 extra element which changes the nature of the action.” Id.

24 Both conditions for preemption are met here.

25 1. Plaintiffs’ Videos are the “Subject Matter of Copyright.”

26 Plaintiffs’ claims arise out of NVIDIA’s purported “use” of their “YouTube videos.” Am.
 27 Compl. ¶¶ 1, 3, 6–7, 50, 52–53, 56. YouTube videos are “online videos” which fall “within the 28 subject matter of the Copyright Act as ‘other audiovisual works’ under 17 U.S.C. § 102(a)(6).” Yu

1 v. ByteDance Inc., No. 23-CV-03503, 2023 WL 5671932, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 1, 2023) (“[O]nline
2 videos fall within the subject matter of the Copyright Act.”); Stavrinides v. Vin Di Bona, No. 18-
3 CV-00314, 2018 WL 1311440, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 12, 2018) (“[V]ideos constitute ‘motion
4 pictures and other audiovisual works’ subject to copyright protection.” (quoting 17 U.S.C. § 5 102(a)(5))).

6 Plaintiffs do not appear to assert rights in anything besides their video content. But to the 7 extent Plaintiffs’ passing references to the “ideas,” Am. Compl. ¶ 52, or “data,” id. ¶ 5, associated 8 with their videos can be construed to state independent claims, they fall under the same umbrella.
9 It is well-established that “ideas” contained in works, while outside the scope of copyright
10 protection, fall within the scope of the Copyright Act “[f]or preemption purposes.” Montz v.
11 Pilgrim Films & Television, Inc., 649 F.3d 975, 979 (9th Cir. 2011) (emphasis added); Briarpatch
12 Ltd., L.P. v. Phoenix Pictures, Inc., 373 F.3d 296, 306 (2d Cir. 2004) (“To the extent that the project 13 includes non-copyrightable material, such as ideas, these are not sufficient to remove it from the 14 broad ambit of the subject matter categories.”). And the same goes for the “elements” underlying 15 content posted to a website, like “source code,” “logos, images, fonts,” and the like. Best Carpet
16 Values, 90 F.4th at 971–972.

17 It also does not matter that Plaintiff Millette fails to explicitly allege any intellectual 18 property rights in his videos. A work does not “have to be actually protected by a specific copyright 19 or even itself be copyrightable” for preemption to attach; “it just has to be within the subject matter
20 of the Act.” E.g., Firoozye, 153 F. Supp. 2d at 1124 (quotation marks omitted); Patnaik, 2015 WL
21 12746704, at *8 (“[W]hether the [material at-issue] is copyrightable is not the relevant inquiry.
22 Rather, for purposes of preemption, the issue is whether the alleged copyright material is within the 23 subject matter of copyright.”).

24 As a result, Plaintiffs’ claims are “within the subject matter” of the Copyright Act under 17
25 U.S.C. § 102(a)(6).

26 2. Plaintiffs’ State-Law Claims are “Equivalent” to Claims of Copyright
27 Infringement.

28 Plaintiffs’ UCL, unjust enrichment, and 93A claims are “equivalent” to claims of copyright

1 infringement. All three rely on allegations that NVIDIA “use[d]” Plaintiffs’ videos, Am. Compl.
2 ¶¶ 24, 42, 52—including “transcriptions[,] copies,” and “reproductions,” id. ¶¶ 53, 55—to train its
3 AI model. Plaintiff further claims that NVIDIA did so without his “authorization” or “consent,”
4 id. ¶¶ 3, 5, 24, 52. The first set of allegations echoes, nearly word-for-word, the federal rights to 5 “reproduce” and “cop[y]” protected works. 17 U.S.C. § 106. And the second echoes the right to 6 “authorize” the same. Id. Proof of Plaintiffs’ allegations would “not [be] materially different” from 7 proof of copyright infringement, which requires “a plaintiff to [establish] that the defendant used,
8 reproduced, copied, or displayed a copyrighted work” without permission. Best Carpet Values, 90 9 F.4th at 974 (quotation marks omitted). The “underlying nature” of Plaintiffs’ state-law claims, in 10 other words, “is part and parcel of a copyright claim” and they are “therefore preempted by the 11 Copyright Act.” Cusano v. Klein, 473 F. App’x 803, 804 (9th Cir. 2012) (quotation marks omitted).

12 A bevy of recent cases reinforce this conclusion, each one holding that the Copyright Act
13 preempted UCL or unjust enrichment claims grounded in the “copying and use” of media to “train”
14 AI models. Tremblay, 2024 WL 3640501, at *2 (Martínez-Olguín, J.) (holding Copyright Act
15 preempted UCL claim regarding use of “books” to train AI language model); Andersen, 2024 WL 16 3823234, at *9–10 (Orrick, J.) (holding Copyright Act preempted unjust enrichment claim based 17 on “using Plaintiffs’ works to train, develop and promote [an AI m]odel[.]”); Doe 1, 2024 WL
18 235217, at *7–8 (Tigar, J.) (holding Copyright Act preempted unjust enrichment and UCL claims 19 based on defendants alleged “use[.]” of “Plaintiffs’ Licensed Materials to train [its AI]”); Kadrey, 20 2023 WL 8039640, at *1–2 (Chhabria, J.) (holding Copyright Act preempted UCL and unjust 21 enrichment claims based on alleged “unauthorized copying of the plaintiffs’ books for purposes of 22 training LLaMA,” an AI language model); see also X Corp., 2024 WL 4894290 at *11–12 (holding 23 Copyright Act preempted “misappropriation” and “unjust enrichment” claims related to scraping
24 and selling data on X). And courts have reached the same conclusion with respect to 93A claims.
25 Real View, LLC v. 20-20 Techs., Inc., 789 F. Supp. 2d 268, 273 (D. Mass. 2011) (finding that a 93A 26 claim “for the illegal download of [plaintiff’s] software” “would have been preempted”); see also 27 WNAC, LLC v. Verizon Corp. Servs. Grp., Inc., No. 21-CV-10750, 2022 WL 17752132, at *5 (D.
28 Mass. Dec. 19, 2022) (allegations “akin to an illegal download” are “preempted,” even where

1 defendant allegedly acted “without permission”); Jalbert v. Grautski, 554 F. Supp. 2d 57, 75 (D.
 2 Mass. 2008) (holding that Copyright Act preempted 93A claims that were “entirely on the alleged
 3 copyright violation[]”). As one court in this District put it: “[T]he extent to which public data may 4 be freely copied from social media platforms” is a matter that should “be governed by the Copyright
 5 Act.” X Corp. v. Bright Data Ltd., 733 F. Supp. 3d 832, 851 (N.D. Cal. 2024).

6 That precedent forecloses any attempt by Plaintiffs to avoid preemption based on 7 differences between Plaintiffs’ state-law claims and claims of copyright infringement. Indeed,
 8 Plaintiff Petryazhna alleges that these very same facts make out a copyright claim. Am. Compl.
 9 ¶ 77. Plaintiffs may spin the “harms” of their state-law claims as distinct from copyright “harms”
 10 based on allegations that NVIDIA deceived consumers or otherwise distorted the competitive
 11 marketplace. Am. Compl. ¶ 53. But any such distinctions are irrelevant where, as here, Plaintiff
 12 “only describe[s] the harms that resulted from . . . unauthorized use” of protected works. Tremblay,
 13 2024 WL 3640501, at *2; Andersen, 2024 WL 3823234, at *9 (rejecting argument that harms 14 resulting from unjust enrichment claim were qualitatively distinct from copyright because they were 15 tied “to [the] use of plaintiffs’ works”).

16 The same goes for differences between elements. The Ninth Circuit has “squarely rejected”
 17 the notion that “an unfair competition claim” premised on “alleg[ed] misappropriat[ion]” contained 18 an “additional element” “qualitatively different from copyright.” Laws, 448 F.3d at 1143-44. And 19 just last year, it held the same as to an “implied-in-law . . . unjust enrichment claim.” Best Carpet
 20 Values, 90 F.4th at 974; 1 Melville B. Nimmer & David Nimmer, Nimmer on Copyright § 1.15[G] 21 (2023) (“[A] state-law cause of action for unjust enrichment or quasi contract should be regarded 22 as an ‘equivalent right’ and, hence, preempted insofar as it applies to copyright subject matter.”).
 23 At bottom, all of Plaintiffs’ state-law claims share the underlying nature of a copyright infringement
 24 claim, and those claims are therefore preempted.

25 C. Plaintiffs’ UCL, Unjust Enrichment, and 93A Claims Fail as a Matter of Law.

26 Even if Plaintiffs’ claims were not preempted by the Copyright Act, they would still fail as 27 a matter of law. Plaintiffs neither plead facts sufficient for UCL statutory standing nor state a 28 plausible theory of liability. Plaintiffs’ unjust enrichment claim cannot survive because they do not

1 allege a benefit—conferred to NVIDIA at their expense—that NVIDIA retained unjustly. And 2 Plaintiff Millette fails to satisfy multiple threshold requirements to assert a 93A claim.

3 1. Plaintiffs’ UCL Claim Fails.

4 Plaintiffs’ UCL claim should be dismissed for three reasons:

5 First, Plaintiffs fail to satisfy the UCL’s heightened statutory standing test, which restricts
 6 recovery to individuals who “lost money or property” from the purported unfair conduct that forms
 7 the basis of the claim. Sequeira v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., No. 22-CV-07996, 2024 WL
 8 1221958, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 2024) (emphasis omitted) (quoting Cal. Bus. Prof. Code
 9 § 17204). For this claim, “intangible” injuries will not suffice. Kwikset Corp. v. Superior Ct., 51
 10 Cal. 4th 310, 324 (Cal. 2011) (quoting Troyk v. Farmers Group, Inc., 171 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1348 11 n. 31 (Cal. Ct. App. 2009)). UCL plaintiffs must “specifically allege” that they suffered an 12 “economic injury,” Samet v. Procter & Gamble Co., No. 12-CV-01891, 2013 WL 3124647, at *3
 13 (N.D. Cal. June 18, 2013), by being “deprived of money or property to which [they have] a 14 cognizable claim” or by having “a present or future property interest diminished,” Kwikset, 51 Cal.
 15 4th at 323.

16 No such injury is alleged in the Complaint. Although Plaintiffs allege that NVIDIA
 17 “profited” from using their videos, Am. Compl. ¶¶ 5, 52, nothing about those allegations “establish 18 that Plaintiffs lost money” as a result of NVIDIA’s conduct. Desert Care Network, 2024 WL
 19 1343305, at *7 (emphasis added); In re Facebook, Inc., Consumer Priv. User Profile Litig., 402 F.
 20 Supp. 3d at 804 (“Facebook may have gained money through its sharing or use of the plaintiffs’ 21 information, but that’s different from saying the plaintiffs lost money.”).

22 Similarly lacking are any allegations of diminished property interests. Plaintiffs assert that 23 they suffered economic injury because they “would be owned [sic]” funds had they chosen to 24 license their videos. Am. Compl. ¶ 54. But they do not allege that NVIDIA actually inhibited their 25 ability to monetize YouTube content. And, as explained supra __, any such injury is speculative 26 because Plaintiffs never allege that they intended to license their videos. In re Google Assistant
 27 Priv. Litig., 546 F. Supp. 3d 945, 972 (N.D. Cal. July 1, 2021) (finding “economic loss [was] purely 28 hypothetical” where “there [were] no facts to suggest that Plaintiffs intended to monetize their

1 individual voice recordings” allegedly retained by Google (quotation marks omitted)). What
 2 remains is an allegation that NVIDIA failed to “attribute the success of [its] product” to Plaintiff
 3 and other YouTubers. Am. Compl. ¶ 53, 55. But that is the very type of “intangible” harm, divorced
 4 from money or property, that fails to state a claim under the UCL. Lagrisola v. N. Am. Fin. Corp.,
 5 96 Cal. App. 5th 1178, 1194 (Cal. Ct. App. 2023) (rejecting “subjective assertion of an intangible 6 harm”).

7 Earlier this year, Judges Martínez-Olguín and Tigar dismissed analogous UCL claims
 8 alleging unlawful business practices on this exact basis. Tremblay, 716 F. Supp. 3d at 780–781
 9 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 12, 2024) (finding plaintiff’s allegation of an “economic injury” was “speculative”
 10 and his “UCL claim [of unlawful business practices] fail[ed] for this [] reason”); Doe 1 v. GitHub, 11 Inc., 672 F. Supp. 3d 837, 860–861 (N.D. Cal. 2023) (dismissing UCL claim based on AI model’s 12 use of plaintiffs’ code because the complaint lacked allegations regarding the “loss of value of the 13 computer code”). Here too, Plaintiffs’ UCL claim fails on this ground alone.

14 Second, Plaintiffs have failed to meet their threshold obligation of specifying a theory of 15 liability. That requirement draws on both Rule 8(a), which asks—at minimum—that Plaintiffs 16 allege “the theory upon which the UCL claim is based,” Franklin Fueling Sys., Inc. v. Veeder-Root
 17 Co., No. 09-CV-580, 2009 WL 2462505, at *8 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 11, 2009) (citing Silicon Image, 18 Inc. v. Analogix Semiconductor, Inc., No. 07-CV-635, 2007 WL 1455903, at *9 (N.D. Cal. May 19 16, 2007)), and Rule 12(b)(6) caselaw holding that UCL claimants “must state with reasonable 20 particularity the facts supporting the statutory elements of the violation,” Ghalehtak v. Fay
 21 Servicing, LLC, 304 F. Supp. 3d 877, 890 (N.D. Cal. 2018) (quotation marks omitted).

22 The Amended Complaint largely consists of allegations about undifferentiated “business
 23 practices” which Plaintiffs refer to variously as “unfair,” “deceptive[,]” and “unlawful.” Am.
 24 Compl. ¶¶ 49–53. These allegations fail to satisfy the requirement that Plaintiff specify “what 25 conduct forms the basis for [his] claim.” Sumotext Corp. v. Zoove, Inc., No. 16-CV-01370, 2016
 26 WL 6524409, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 3, 2016). Plaintiffs also allege that NVIDIA’s use of Plaintiffs’
 27 videos for its “own commercial profit” constituted “unfair, immoral, unethical, [or] oppressive”
 28 conduct. Am. Compl. ¶ 52. But the Ninth Circuit has held that similar allegations—which merely

1 “recit[e] one of the UCL’s legal standards” and assert that a defendant acted with a “profit
2 motive”—fail to give proper notice of the basis for a UCL unfairness claim. Doe v. CVS Pharmacy,
3 Inc., 982 F.3d 1204, 1215 (9th Cir. 2020) (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)). At its most concrete, the 4 Amended Complaint alleges that NVIDIA acted unfairly by relying on “non-consensual use” of 5 Plaintiffs’ works, which allegedly resulted in “deceptive[] market[ing]” thereby “outweigh[ing] any 6 benefits to consumers.” Am. Compl. ¶ 55. To the extent this theory is adequately noticed, the 7 Amended Complaint contains no allegations—much less “reasonabl[y] particular[]” ones—about 8 how NVIDIA marketed its products or the alleged harm to Plaintiffs. Clark v. Countrywide Home
9 Loans, Inc., 732 F. Supp. 2d 1038, 1050 (E.D. Cal. 2010).

10 Third, Plaintiffs fail to allege conduct sufficient to state a claim under any UCL prong. The 11 UCL broadly proscribes “unfair competition,” defined as “any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent 12 business act or practice” Cappello v. Walmart Inc., 394 F. Supp. 3d 1015, 1018 (N.D. Cal.
13 2019) (quoting Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200). Each one of those adjectives, or “prongs,” forms 14 a “ ‘separate and distinct theory of liability’ and an independent basis for relief.” Id. (internal 15 quotation marks omitted) (quoting Rubio v. Cap. One Bank, 613 F.3d 1195, 1203 (9th Cir. 2010)).

16 Start with the “unlawful” prong. The UCL operates by “borrow[ing] violations of other 17 laws” and treating them as “independently actionable,” Batiste v. Robert W. Baird & Co., No. 23-
18 CV-02592, 2023 WL 7280446, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 4, 2023) (quotation marks omitted), meaning
19 plaintiffs must “identify an underlying statute that [the d]efendant violated.” Penermon v. Wells
20 Fargo Bank, N.A., 47 F. Supp. 3d 982, 1002 (N.D. Cal. 2014); accord Lopez v. Bank of Am., N.A., 21 505 F. Supp. 3d 961, 976 (N.D. Cal. 2020).

22 Plaintiffs do not even bother to allege a violation of any specific law. The only relevant
23 allegation—that NVIDIA violated the UCL itself, Am. Compl. ¶ 53—by its terms fails to establish 24 a violation of a separate state or federal law. Mueller v. San Diego Ent. Partners, LLC, 260 F.
25 Supp. 3d 1283, 1299 (S.D. Cal. 2017) (holding allegation that defendant “violated [s] 17200 [the 26 UCL]” did not establish a violation of any of its prongs). And apart from the conclusory assertion
27 that certain practices were “unlawful,” Am. Compl. ¶ 53, the Amended Complaint identifies no
28 other law that NVIDIA is alleged to have violated. Tremblay, 716 F. Supp. 3d at 780 (dismissing

1 analogous UCL unlawfulness claim against OpenAI because “the Court has dismissed the predicate
 2 DMCA claims”); Doe I, 672 F. Supp. 3d at 860 (dismissing analogous UCL unlawfulness claims
 3 “[t]o the extent the predicate claims have been dismissed”). Martinez v. Welk Grp., Inc., No. 09-4 CV-2883, 2011 WL 90313, at *11 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2011) (explaining that “courts dismiss the 5 UCL claim” “where no statutory violation occurs”).

6 Plaintiffs also fail to allege a cognizable type of “unfairness.” California courts look for 7 one of three things: (1) conduct “tethered to any underlying constitutional, statutory or regulatory 8 provision, or that [] threatens an incipient violation of an antitrust law”; (2) practices that are 9 “immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous, or substantially injurious to consumers”; or (3) 10 conduct where the “impact on the victim” outweighs the “justifications and motives of the alleged 11 wrongdoer.” Doe, 982 F.3d at 1214-15 (cleaned up) (outlining the three governing tests for UCL
 12 unfairness). The first species of unfairness is not alleged. The third, also not alleged, would fail
 13 because Plaintiff does not concretely allege a negative “impact” sufficient to confer legal standing
 14 either on himself or on consumers, see supra Section IV.A. As to the second theory, Plaintiff offers
 15 no more than a bare recitation of its standard. Indeed, Plaintiffs allege merely that NVIDIA’s 16 purported “non-consensual use of Plaintiffs’ works” “outweighs any benefit to consumers.” Am.
 17 Compl. ¶ 55. “Without additional allegations” that “describe why” the alleged practices are 18 “immoral, unethical, oppressive, . . . or substantially injurious to consumers,” Plaintiffs’
 19 “allegations are too conclusory and fail to state a plausible claim.” Barboza v. Mercedes-Benz USA,
 20 LLC, No. 22-CV-0845, 2022 WL 17978408, at *5 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 28, 2022) (emphasis added). Put 21 differently, once the Amended Complaint is stripped of allegations based on the purported
 22 “unauthorized use” of Plaintiffs’ “content” and “copyrights,” there is nothing left to state an 23 “independent theory” of “unfair business practices.” Sweet People Apparel, Inc. v. Louis Grp., Inc., 24 No. 12-CV-1206673, 2013 WL 12131735, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 31, 2013).

25 Plaintiffs’ allegations under the “fraudulent” prong are deficient as well. To plead UCL
 26 fraud, Plaintiffs must satisfy the particularity requirements of Rule 9(b), Smith v. LG Elecs. U.S.A.,
 27 Inc., No. 13-CV-4361, 2014 WL 989742, at *9 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 11, 2014), including a “purportedly
 28 fraudulent statement” coupled with the “who, what, when, where, and how of the misconduct

1 charged,” Davidson v. Kimberly-Clark Corp., 873 F.3d 1103, 1110 (9th Cir. 2017). Rather than 2 plead a false statement—or any of the relevant circumstances—Plaintiffs merely allude to alleged 3 “deceptive[] market[ing]” practices and asserts that “consumers are likely to be deceived.” Am.
 4 Compl. ¶¶ 52–53. Which practices consumers were subject to or how they were deceived is 5 anyone’s guess. Yet Rule 9(b) requires that Plaintiffs answer those questions, and more, in the 6 Complaint. And the failure to do so warrants dismissal. Tremblay, 716 F. Supp. 3d at 781
 7 (dismissing analogous UCL claim against OpenAI under the fraudulent prong for “fail[ing] to 8 satisfy the heightened pleading requirements of 9(b)” because “Plaintiffs fail[ed] to indicate” which 9 acts constituted “fraudulent business practices”); ROTFL Prods., LLC v. Gzebb, No. 13-CV-0293, 10 2013 WL 12181763, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 5, 2013) (dismissing UCL complaint that did not 11 “specif[y] which of defendant’s actions were fraudulent” or “aver specific false and misleading 12 statements”).

13 2. Plaintiffs Do Not State a Cognizable Unjust Enrichment Claim.

14 To state a quasi-contract claim based on unjust enrichment, Plaintiffs must allege both that 15 (1) they “conferred a benefit on [NVIDIA],” Estate of Hoefer v. ATC Realty Fifteen, Inc., No. 20-16 CV-06698, 2021 WL 148087, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 15, 2021) (quotation marks omitted), and (2)
 17 that NVIDIA retained the benefit “unjustly” as a result of “mistake, fraud, coercion, or request,” 18 Astiana v. Hain Celestial Grp., Inc., 783 F.3d 753, 762 (9th Cir. 2015) (quoting 55 Cal. Jur. 3d 19 Restitution § 2 (2015)).³ Liability does not arise “merely because one person has realized a gain at 20

21 _____
 22 ³ Plaintiffs appear to assert that unjust enrichment is a standalone cause of action although they 23 “alternatively” claim that the same theory provides for a quasi-contract claim. Am. Compl. ¶ 41.
 24 California Courts have squarely held that the former is incorrect: “Unjust enrichment is not a cause
 25 of action. It is just a restitution claim.” De Havilland v. FX Networks, LLC, 21 Cal. App. 5th 845,
 26 870 (Cal. Ct. App. 2018) (quotation marks omitted). The Ninth Circuit likewise construes 27 allegations of unjust enrichment as a cause of action for a quasi-contract seeking restitution.
 28 Astiana, 783 F.3d at 762. Accordingly, Plaintiffs’ claim should be construed as a quasi-contract

1 another’s expense.” Russell v. Walmart, Inc., 680 F. Supp. 3d 1130, 1133 (N.D. Cal. 2023)
 2 (quotation marks omitted). Absent the second element—sometimes referred to as “qualifying 3 conduct”—“there is no injustice”; there is merely “enrichment.” Id.; accord Regents of Univ. of 4 Cal. v. LTI Flexible Prods., Inc., No. 20-cv-08686, 2021 WL 4133869, at *10 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 10, 5 2021). Plaintiff cannot satisfy either element of liability.

6 To start, Plaintiffs do not plausibly allege that they conferred a legally cognizable “benefit”
 7 on NVIDIA. Benefits typically take the form of a tangible payment from plaintiff to defendant,
 8 ESG Capital Partners, LP v. Strato, 828 F.3d 1023, 1039 (9th Cir. 2016), or receipt of a plaintiff’s
 9 “service” or “property” that “yield[s] a measurable increase in the recipient’s wealth,” Restatement
 10 (Third) of Restitution and Unjust Enrichment § 1 (2011); Am. Master Lease LLC v. Idanta Partners,
 11 Ltd., 225 Cal. App. 4th 1451, 1487 (Cal. Ct. App. 2014) (citing the Third Restatement extensively).
 12 The only benefits alleged here are NVIDIA’s “revenues derived from the sales of their products”
 13 to third party “users.” Am. Compl. ¶¶ 42, 45. But any such revenues are not Plaintiffs’ money,
 14 property, or services—they came from someone else. In other words, “[t]he only benefit [NVIDIA]
 15 allegedly received . . . came from [a third party,] not from Plaintiff” and thus cannot give rise to a 16 claim of unjust enrichment. Am. Video Duplicating, Inc. v. City Nat’l Bank, No. 20-cv-4036, 2020 17 WL 6882735, at *6 (C. D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2020) (dismissing unjust enrichment claim where 18 Defendant allegedly received lender fee from a third party, not anything “from Plaintiff”); Upper 19 Deck Co. v. Flores, 569 F. Supp. 3d 1050, 1072 (S.D. Cal. 2021) (defendant’s “unjust[] profit[s]” 20 did not constitute a “benefit” where defendant allegedly used plaintiff’s “likeness for its own 21 commercial [gain]”); Russell, 680 F. Supp. 3d at 1133 (rejecting claim where benefit did not come 22 “at the plaintiff’s expense”).

23 In addition, apart from conclusory assertions that NVIDIA’s conduct was “prohibited,” 24 “unjust[,] and inequitable,” Am. Compl. ¶¶ 42–45, the Amended Complaint is devoid of allegations
 25 of “qualifying conduct.” Russell, 680 F. Supp. 3d at 1133. At most, Plaintiffs claim that they were 26 _____
 27 cause of action and the Court should reject any demand for “[e]quitable relief” unique to unjust
 28 enrichment. Am. Compl. ¶ 47 (seeking “all profits from the wrongdoing”).

1 “unwitting[.]” YouTubers—i.e., that they were not even aware of any activity by NVIDIA.
 2 Nowhere do they allege a “mistake” that conferred a benefit on NVIDIA. Am. Compl. ¶ 42. Nor 3 do they allege that NVIDIA “request[ed]” that Plaintiffs upload their videos for public
 4 consumption, let alone attempted to obtain the videos via “fraud” or “coercion.” Astiana, 783 F.3d
 5 at 762. Plaintiffs’ assertion that NVIDIA violated YouTube’s terms of service, Am. Compl. ¶ 1,
 6 does not change that calculus as it does not resemble a claim for fraud and is in any event
 7 conclusory.⁴ Without such conduct, the “mere [allegation] that [NVIDIA] obtain[ed] a benefit”
 8 unjustly is insufficient to sustain a claim. Shum v. Intel Corp., 630 F. Supp. 2d 1063, 1073 (N.D.
 9 Cal. 2009), aff’d, 633 F.3d 1067 (Fed. Cir. 2010); Rosal v. First Fed. Bank of Cal., 671 F. Supp. 2d
 10 1111, 1133 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (finding “a conclusory allegation that defendants have been ‘unjustly
 11 enriched’ by ‘retaining profits, income and ill-gotten gains at the expense of plaintiff’ ” insufficient 12 to state a claim).

13 Judges Martínez-Olguín and Tigar dismissed unjust enrichment claims in almost identical
 14 cases on the same grounds just this year—notwithstanding allegations that defendants violated
 15 applicable terms of service and other contractual agreements. Tremblay, 716 F. Supp. 3d at 783
 16 (dismissing unjust enrichment claim against OpenAI for allegedly training an AI model on 17 Plaintiffs’ copyrighted work because “Plaintiffs have not alleged that OpenAI unjustly obtained 18 benefits from Plaintiffs’ copyrighted works through fraud, mistake, coercion, or request”); Doe I, 19 No. 22-cv-06823, Dkt. No. 253 at 5–7, 12 (N.D. Cal. June 24, 2024) (dismissing unjust enrichment 20 claim against GitHub for allegedly allowing an AI model to train on Plaintiffs’ code because 21 Plaintiffs’ claims “do not contain any allegations of mistake, fraud, coercion, or request”). Taken
 22 together, the lack of any benefit conferred at Plaintiffs’ expense, and the lack of any qualifying 23 conduct on the part of NVIDIA warrant dismissal here, too.

24
 25 ⁴ Plaintiffs’ allegations—to the extent they even satisfy Rule 8—fall well short of the heightened 26 pleading standard of Rule 9(b), which applies if Plaintiffs’ unjust enrichment theory “sounds in 27 fraud.” Regents of Univ. of Cal., 2021 WL 4133869, at *10; accord Snarr v. Cento Fine Foods
 28 Inc., No. 19-CV-02627, 2019 WL 7050149, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 23, 2019).

1 3. Plaintiff Millette Fails to State a 93A Claim.

2 As a threshold matter, “the plaintiff must allege ‘some sort of transaction between the parties
3 for [chapter 93A] liability to attach.’ ” Frost v. BI 40, LLC, No. 22-CV-11005, 2023 WL 6307530,
4 at *6 (D. Mass. Aug. 29, 2023) (quoting L.B. Corp v. Schweitzer-Mauduit Intern., Inc., 121 F. Supp.
5 2d 147, 152 (D. Mass. 2000)). No such allegation appears in the Amended Complaint. Indeed,
6 there was “no relationship between the plaintiffs and the defendant[.]” prior to this suit and it is thus 7 “axiomatic that the alleged wrongful conduct did not arise in a business context.” Swenson v.
8 Yellow Transp., Inc., 317 F. Supp. 2d 51, 57 (D. Mass. 2004) (dismissing 93A claim); Miller v.
9 Mooney, 725 N.E.2d 545, 551 (Mass. 2000) (rejecting 93A claim because “[t]he defendant was not 10 engaged in trade or commerce with the plaintiffs within the meaning of G.L. c. 93A”) (emphasis
11 added). Millette’s 93A claim fails for that reason alone. In addition, Millette’s Massachusetts 93A
12 claim fails for two of the same reasons the UCL claim does.

13 First, Millette again fails to plausibly allege statutory standing. Chapter 93A—like the 14 UCL—requires plaintiffs to “ ‘show real economic damages,’ as opposed to some speculative 15 harm.” Shaulis v. Nordstrom, Inc., 865 F.3d 1, 10 (1st Cir. 2017) (internal quotation marks omitted)
16 (quoting Rule v. Fort Dodge Animal Health, Inc., 607 F.3d 250, 253 (1st Cir. 2010)). A complaint 17 alleging “only a ‘per se’ injury—that is, a claim resting only on a deceptive practice . . . is 18 insufficient.” Id.; accord Tyler v. Michaels Stores, Inc., 984 N.E.2d 737, 744–745 (Mass. 2013).

19 Yet that is all Millette alleges. He claims injury as a “result of Defendant’s . . . use of [his] 20 works,” Am. Compl. ¶ 68, and asserts that these alleged acts mean that he and putative class
21 members “have been harmed,” id. ¶ 69. Nowhere does he present an “identifiable harm” separate
22 from “the violation itself,” much less concrete economic damages. Tyler, 984 N.E.2d at 745
23 (quotation marks omitted). Millette’s allegation that he “would have requested compensation” had 24 he known of the alleged “misappropriation” fails for the same reason. Am. Compl. ¶ 67. Millette
25 must provide an “objectively measurable” basis for resulting harm. Pershouse v. L.L. Bean, Inc., 26 368 F. Supp. 3d 185, 191 (D. Mass. 2019) (dismissing 93A claim where plaintiff did not provide 27 measure of purported loss). He has not done so, and the 93A claim must therefore be dismissed.
28 O’Hara v. Diageo-Guinness, USA, Inc., 306 F. Supp. 3d 441, 458 (D. Mass. 2018) (allegations that

1 plaintiff incurred an undefined loss “ ‘as a result’ of defendants’ deception” that he would not have 2 otherwise “is, by itself, too ‘conclusory’ and ‘speculative’ to state a [93A] claim for injury or 3 damages”).

4 Second, the Amended Complaint does not plead a plausible theory of 93A liability. Chapter
 5 93A proscribes “unfair or deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of any trade or commerce.”
 6 Crommelin v. Takeda Pharms. U.S.A., Inc., --- F. Supp. 3d ---, 2024 WL 4045730, at *2 (D. Mass.
 7 Sept. 4, 2024) (quoting Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A § 2(a)). Conduct is unfair if it falls within a 8 “common law, statutory, or other established concept of unfairness”; is “immoral, unethical, 9 oppressive, or unscrupulous”; or “causes substantial injury to [consumers].” Id. (alteration in 10 original) (quoting Tomasella v. Nestle USA, Inc., 962 F.3d 60, 79 (1st Cir. 2020)). And deceptive 11 conduct involves either “affirmative misrepresentations” or “an omission” that “may justifiably 12 induce” someone “to act or refrain from acting in a business transaction” assuming there exists a 13 duty to “disclose the matter in question.” Tomasella, 962 F.3d at 71-72 (quoting Underwood v.
 14 Risman, 605 N.E.2d 832, 836 (Mass. 1993)). The Amended Complaint fails on multiple levels.

15 Millette does not plausibly plead 93A unfairness. Much like Plaintiffs’ UCL claim, Millette
 16 mentions only “unfair and deceptive acts,” Am. Compl. ¶ 61, without explaining how these acts fit
 17 “any recognized concept of unfairness.” See Tomasella, 962 F.3d at 80 (affirming dismissal of 93A
 18 claim). These conclusory allegations are insufficient to state a claim. E.g., Sullivan Surveying Co., 19 LLC v. TD Bank, N.A., No. 15-CV-11819, 2015 WL 4207133, at *3 (D. Mass. July 10, 2015)
 20 (holding that plaintiff could not rely on “conclusory allegation that [defendant] ‘engaged in unfair 21 and deceptive practices’ to satisfy its pleading burden”). As explained supra ____, the other 22 allegations incorporated into this section of the Amended Complaint cannot give rise to unfairness, 23 either, as they are all preempted.

24 Finally, Millette does not plausibly allege 93A “deceptive” acts. The Amended Complaint
 25 nowhere contains allegations of “affirmative misrepresentations” on NVIDIA’s part. In the absence
 26 of an affirmative misrepresentation, a plaintiff may proceed only if he pleads an actionable 27 “omission.” Tomasella, 962 F.3d at 71. But Millette does not allege a specific omission either.
 28 Rather, he alleges generally that a “reasonable person” would attach importance to NVIDIA’s “acts

1 and omissions” and claims that, had he known of the “acts alleged,” he would have “requested
2 compensation.” Am. Compl. ¶¶ 63–67. Chapter 93A, however, does not ask whether a reasonable
3 person would be misled in the abstract; it asks instead whether a “reasonable consumer”—i.e. a
4 consumer or user of NVIDIA’s products—would be deceived “under the circumstances” of a 5 business transaction with the defendant. Tomasella, 962 F.3d at 71. Millette does not allege any 6 such omission in how NVIDIA “present[ed] [its] product[s],” nor does he allege detrimental acts
7 on the part of “ ‘Cosmos’ AI Program” consumers. Mack v. Cultural Care Inc., No. 19-CV-11530,
8 2020 WL 4673522, at *8 (D. Mass. Aug. 12, 2020) (explaining that a plaintiff fails to state a 93A
9 claim where the omission “would not have enticed a reasonable consumer to purchase the product
10 when they otherwise would not have”) (internal quotation marks omitted). Moreover, even 11 assuming an actionable omission could be inferred from the Amended Complaint, it is not an 12 omission of information that NVIDIA had a “duty to disclose” given there was no relationship
13 between the Parties at the time of the events giving rise to this Action. Boyle v. Douglas Dynamics,
14 LLC, 292 F. Supp. 2d 198, 219 (D. Mass. 2003) (holding that, where there is no such duty, a plaintiff 15 “does not state a claim under ch. 93A”), aff’d, 99 F. App’x 243 (1st Cir. 2004). For all these reasons, 16 Millette’s 93A claim must fail.

17 D. The Court Should Dismiss with Prejudice

18 Two separate factors warrant departure from the default rule that leave to amend be freely
19 granted. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2); see also Albrecht v. Lund, 845 F.2d 193, 195 (9th Cir. 1988)
20 (“[L]eave to amend may be denied, even if prior to a responsive pleading.”); Sanchez v. Los Angeles
21 Dep’t of Transportation, No. 20-CV-5044, 2021 WL 1220690, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 23, 2021)
22 (citing Albrecht and granting pre-answer motion to dismiss with prejudice), aff’d, 35 F.4th 721 (9th 23 Cir. 2022).

24 First, it is “plainly unlikely that [Plaintiffs] [will be] able to cure the standing problem,” 25 which applies to all their claims and Plaintiffs have failed to remedy in two successive complaints.
26 H.R. Technologies, Inc. v. Astechologies, Inc., 275 F.3d 1378, 1385 (Fed. Cir. 2002) (affirming 27 dismissal with prejudice on standing grounds). “[A]ny attempt to amend” would therefore be 28 “futile” and dismissal with prejudice is thus appropriate even at this early stage. Young Money Ent.,

1 LLC v. Digerati Holdings, LLC, No. 12-CV-07663, 2012 WL 5571209, at *9 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 15,
2 2012); Parks v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., No. 15-CV-2558, 2016 WL 411674, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Feb.
3 3, 2016) (granting pre-answer motion to dismiss state law claims with prejudice on preemption 4 grounds).

5 Moreover, the defects in Plaintiffs’ claims turn not on the sufficiency of their allegations,
6 but on the “underlying nature” of the claims alleged. Tremblay, 2024 WL 3640501, at *2 (quotation
7 marks omitted); Telesaurus VPC, LLC v. Power, 623 F.3d 998, 1011 (9th Cir. 2010) (affirming
8 dismissal of unjust enrichment claim with prejudice on preemption grounds); Brown v. Van’s Int’l
9 Foods, Inc., No. 22-CV-00001, 2022 WL 1471454, at *6 (N.D. Cal. May 10, 2022) (dismissing 10 complaint where defect “lies in the legal theory, not the factual allegations”). And no amount of 11 additional factual pleading can change Plaintiffs’ unjust enrichment, ULC, or 93A claims’ core 12 features.

13 Second, Plaintiffs have received ample notice of the deficiencies in the Amended
14 Complaint. This is Plaintiffs’ second pleading attempt in this action, and Millette’s sixth in the past 15 year alleging identical claims. Meanwhile, courts in this District have resoundingly dismissed the 16 very claims Plaintiffs bring here. See supra IV.B.2. “Even the most cursory legal inquiry” required
17 by Rule 11 would reveal the deficiencies raised in the instant Motion. Holgate v. Baldwin, 425
18 F.3d 671, 677 (9th Cir. 2005). Yet after repeatedly being placed on notice, Plaintiffs chose to copy
19 the deficient allegations from one of those actions. Compare Am. Compl. ¶ 53, with Tremblay v.
20 OpenAI, Inc., No. 23-CV-3223, Dkt. No. 120 (Am. Compl.) at ¶¶ 73–74 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 13, 2024).
21 And they made only a minimal effort to address the significant standing concerns raised in 22 NVIDIA’s prior motion. The Court should dismiss with prejudice given Plaintiffs’ “several 23 opportunities” to address these well-tread problems. Gama v. Bd. of Trustees of California State
24 Univ., No. 18-CV-02552, 2019 WL 7763827, at *1 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 8, 2019).

1 V. CONCLUSION

2 For these reasons, the Court should dismiss the Complaint with prejudice.
