INTRODUCTION

2 1. This lawsuit presents a challenge to Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) Secretary Kristi Noem’s decision to deprive 600,000 Venezuelans protected by Temporary Protected Status (“TPS”) of the right to live and work legally in the United States for the 18-month period lawfully authorized by her predecessor. Secretary Noem took two illegal actions within one week of assuming her role at the head of DHS. Three days after her confirmation, she “vacated” an extension of TPS protections for Venezuelans residing in the United States, just weeks after the extension was duly published in the Federal Register. Two days later, she terminated TPS for the Venezuelans who initially registered in 2023. These actions have the effect of robbing 600,000 Venezuelan TPS holders of the right to live and work in this country for the next 18 months. Approximately 350,000 Venezuelan TPS holders stand to lose this humanitarian legal status on April 7, 2025, and their work authorization as soon as April 2, 2025. Secretary Noem announced the vacatur decision in an exclusive interview she gave to Fox News, saying that “the American people . . . want these dirtbags out of the country.”

15 2. Plaintiffs in this case are the National TPS Alliance (“NTPSA”), a member-led organization representing TPS holders across the country, and individuals from Venezuela who have TPS (“Individual Plaintiffs”). These individuals cannot return safely to their country of origin. TPS allows them to live and work lawfully in the United States. They represent the diverse population of Venezuelans who have relied on TPS to provide them the most basic forms of human security—a stable place to live and a chance to work for a living during this time of severe crisis in Venezuela. They are educators, laborers, caretakers, and advocates; parents, students, and children. They live all across the country, with homes, families, jobs, and deep community ties. If Secretary Noem’s TPS termination goes into effect, they will be subject to deportation yet unable to return safely to their home country; and without legal authorization to live or work in the United States.

26 3. The Secretary’s actions are illegal for multiple reasons. At the outset, DHS has no authority to “vacate” a prior TPS extension. The TPS statute tightly regulates the conditions under which TPS decisions can be made, setting time periods and other procedural rules that must be

1 followed for both extensions and terminations. The agency does not have implicit authority to 2 accomplish the same objectives on whatever timeframe it wants, and without following the 3 requisite procedures.

4 4. Even if DHS did have such authority, the reasons provided by the Secretary to 5 vacate the extension are arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, pretextual, and inexplicably 6 deviate from past practice in violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”). Contrary to 7 the claims made in the Federal Register, there was nothing unusual about the timing of the now-
8 vacated extension. Nor did it suffer from any of the other purported defects on which Secretary 9 Noem relied to justify her decision—defects which, in any event, should have been resolved by 10 alternatives short of vacatur.

11 5. Even if DHS’s vacatur order were somehow valid, the termination decision that 12 followed suffers from additional defects. Among other things, DHS’s decision to terminate TPS
13 for Venezuelans rests on the assumption that TPS is itself illegal, and that Venezuelans with TPS 14 in the United States are here illegally. This error is evident on the face of the decision. It is also 15 evident from statements made by Secretary Noem. Before she assumed leadership of DHS, she—16 along with President Trump, Vice President J.D. Vance, and high-level Trump advisors—made 17 plain their position that TPS was “illegal,” that persons protected by TPS are here “illegally,” and 18 that this justified their plan to terminate TPS. But neither their disdain for TPS nor the Secretary’s 19 decision can nullify a statute.

20 6. The Secretary’s decisions also were motivated at least in part by racial animus, in 21 contravention of the Fifth Amendment. That is clear from statements the Secretary made when 22 announcing the decisions themselves, labeling Venezuelan TPS holders as “dirtbags”—an 23 expression of racism made by the official decisionmaker as part of her explanation for the 24 decision. Making matters worse, that statement is just one among a torrent of similar racist 25 statements that Secretary Noem, President Trump, and members of the Trump campaign and 26 administration have made to attack and marginalize nonwhite immigrants generally, and the 27 Venezuelan TPS community in particular.

1 7. For each of these reasons, this Court should set aside the agency’s unlawful vacatur 2 and termination orders, and reinstate the prior extension.

3 JURISDICTION AND VENUE

4 8. This Court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. 1331 because this action arises under the 5 Constitution and laws of the United States. This Court has additional remedial authority under the 6 Declaratory Judgment Act, see 28 U.S.C. 2201 et seq., and the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 7 U.S.C. 701–706. Article III and the Fifth Amendment independently grant this Court subject 8 matter jurisdiction over Plaintiffs’ Fifth Amendment claim.

9 9. The federal government has waived its sovereign immunity and permitted judicial 10 review of agency action under 5 U.S.C. 702. See Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) v. United States, 11 870 F.2d 518, 525 (9th Cir. 1989). In addition, sovereign immunity does not bar claims against 12 federal officials seeking to prevent violations of federal law (rather than monetary relief). See, 13 e.g., Larson v. Domestic & Foreign Com. Corp., 337 U.S. 682, 697–99 & nn.18–19 (1949); 14 Shields v. Utah Idaho Cent. R.R. Co., 305 U.S. 177, 183–84 (1938).

15 10. Venue is proper in the Northern District of California under 28 U.S.C. 1391(e)(1) 16 because at least one Plaintiff resides in this judicial district and each Defendant is an agency of the 17 United States or an officer of the United States sued in his or her official capacity.

18 INTRADISTRICT ASSIGNMENT

19 11. Assignment is proper in the San Francisco division because the claims of Plaintiffs 20 that reside in this judicial district arise in Alameda and San Mateo Counties. Civil Local Rule 3-21 2(d) and 3-5(b).

22 THE PARTIES

23 Plaintiffs

24 12. Plaintiff National TPS Alliance (NTPSA) is a member-led organization whose 25 mission is to defend the TPS program and win a path to permanent residency for TPS holders.
26 NTPSA is fiscally sponsored by the Central American Resource Center - CARECEN - of 27 California, a non-profit organization headquartered in Los Angeles, California, which has worked 28 for more than four decades to provide immigrant integration programs, deliver immigration legal

1 services, and foster civic participation and community engagement on immigration policy, 2 education reform, and workers' rights.

3 13. NTPSA advocates to defend TPS and win a path to permanent status for TPS
4 holders; organizes actions to raise public awareness about TPS and the contributions TPS holders 5 make to this country; facilitates community and civic engagement by TPS holders; and provides 6 access to timely and accurate TPS-related information and services to its members. Membership in 7 the NTPSA is free and voluntary. Individuals can become NTPSA members either by joining a 8 local NTPSA committee or by submitting an individual membership application. NTPSA's 9 members set the organization's priorities, lead and participate in NTPSA's local committees and 10 working groups, and select and serve on NTPSA's Executive Committee.

11 14. NTPSA brings this action on behalf of its members. The vast majority of NTPSA's 12 members are TPS holders, including TPS holders from Afghanistan, Burma (Myanmar), 13 Cameroon, El Salvador, Haiti, Honduras, Lebanon, Nepal, Nicaragua, Sudan, Ukraine, Venezuela, 14 and Yemen; the rest are family members of TPS holders and other individuals who wish to 15 support the TPS community. The NTPSA has over 84,000 Venezuelan TPS holder members 16 living in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. They face irreparable harm from the 17 challenged vacatur and termination.

18 15. Plaintiff Mariela González is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2021
19 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur, is at risk of losing her TPS and work 20 authorization on September 10, 2025. She is a resident of San Mateo County, California, and has 21 lived in the United States for the past fourteen years. Mariela works as an instructional coach with 22 an urban school district. Her mother, father, brother, sister, and nephews all live in the United 23 States and are U.S. citizens. She is an NTPSA member.

24 16. Plaintiff Freddy Jose Arape Rivas is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023
25 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing his TPS 26 on April 7, 2025. He applied to renew his TPS and work authorization on January 17, 2025, 27 pursuant to the now-vacated extension of TPS for Venezuelans. USCIS already automatically 28 extended his employment authorization for up to 540 days in response to his application. But the

1 new Federal Register Notice vacating the January 17 extension provides that “USCIS will 2 invalidate EADs” and TPS-related documentation issued pursuant to the January extension. Thus 3 Freddy’s work authorization is at risk of expiring on April 2, 2025. Freddy lives in Collin County, 4 Texas, and works for a technology company. He has family in Texas, including a cousin who, 5 along with his wife and seven-year-old daughter, also have TPS. He is an NTPSA member.

6 17. Plaintiff M.H. is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023 designation and, as a 7 result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing her TPS status on April 7, 8 2025. Her work authorization expires on April 2, 2025. She lives in a Tennessee suburb with her 9 husband and two children. Her seven-year-old daughter also has TPS. Her husband, an engineer, is 10 a U.S. citizen employed by a government subcontractor, and together they have a two-year-old 11 U.S. citizen son. M.H. is a full-time caregiver for her two young children. Her driver’s license 12 expires when her TPS does, and she depends on it for her daily needs. She is an NTPSA member.

13 18. Plaintiff Cecilia Daniela González Herrera is a Venezuelan who has TPS under 14 the 2021 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur, is at risk of losing her TPS on 15 September 10, 2025. She lives with her parents and younger brother in Kissimmee, Florida, and is 16 a derivative applicant on her parents’ long-pending asylum application. She is a student at the 17 University of Central Florida and expects to graduate with a bachelor’s degree in May. She is also 18 employed as the Voting Rights Advocacy Coordinator for Latino Justice PRLDEF. She is an 19 NTPSA member.

20 19. Plaintiff Alba Cecilia Purica Hernández is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 21 2023 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing her 22 work authorization on April 2, 2025 and TPS on April 7, 2025. She had been a university student 23 in Venezuela. She lives in San Leandro, California and works as a childcare provider. She is an 24 NTPSA member.

25 20. Plaintiff E.R. is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023 designation and is at 26 risk of losing her TPS on April 7, 2025 and her work authorization on April 2, 2025. She is a 27 single parent to a twelve-year-old daughter, who is also a TPS holder. She lives in New York, 28

1 where she works in a factory. She relies on TPS for her work authorization and legal status. She is 2 an NTPSA member.

3 21. Plaintiff Hendrina Vivas Castillo is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023
4 designation, and, as a result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing her TPS 5 on April 7, 2025. Her work permit expires on April 2, 2025. She lives in Culver City, California 6 and works as a delivery driver. She is an NTPSA member.

7 Defendants

8 22. Defendant Kristi Noem, sued in her official capacity, is the Secretary of Homeland 9 Security. As the highest-ranking officer for DHS, Defendant Noem has ultimate statutory 10 authority over all TPS extension, termination, and designation decisions. See 8 U.S.C. 1254a(b); 6 11 U.S.C. 557 (transferring functions from the Attorney General).

12 23. Defendant U.S. Department of Homeland Security is a cabinet-level department 13 of the Executive Branch of the federal government and is an “agency” within the meaning of 5 14 U.S.C. 551(1). DHS includes various component agencies, including the U.S. Citizenship and 15 Immigration Services (“USCIS”). DHS, together with all of its component agencies, is responsible 16 for administering and enforcing the TPS program.

17 24. Defendant United States of America includes all other government agencies and 18 departments responsible for the implementation, administration, and change in policy concerning 19 the TPS program.

20 STATUTORY FRAMEWORK

21 25. Congress established the Temporary Protected Status program in the Immigration 22 Act of 1990.¹ TPS is a form of humanitarian relief, providing lawful immigration status to eligible 23 foreign nationals who cannot safely return home to war-torn or disaster-stricken countries. By 24
25
26
27

28 ¹ Pub. L. No. 101-649, § 302, 104 Stat. 4978, 5030–36.

1 enacting the TPS statute, which is codified at 8 U.S.C. 1254a, Congress established formal criteria
2 for relief and set forth predictable procedures.²

3 26. Under the TPS statute, the Secretary of Homeland Security³ makes a “designation” 4 decision for a given country.⁴ After consulting with “appropriate” government agencies, the 5 Secretary may designate a foreign state, or any part of that state, for TPS based on: (A) an 6 “ongoing armed conflict within the state” that would “pose a serious threat” to the “personal 7 safety” of the foreign nationals of that state; (B) an “earthquake, flood, drought, epidemic, or other 8 environmental disaster in the state resulting in a substantial, but temporary, disruption of living 9 conditions,” which makes the foreign state “unable, temporarily, to handle adequately the return to 10 the state” of its nationals, and where the foreign state has “officially” requested a designation; or 11 (C) the existence of “extraordinary and temporary conditions in the foreign state” that prevent 12 foreign nationals from safely returning, and where the temporary presence of those foreign 13 nationals in the United States is not “contrary to the national interest of the United States.”⁵

14
15 ² Before Congress created TPS, the Executive Branch previously used ad hoc enforcement 16 mechanisms to allow individuals to remain in the United States for humanitarian reasons. See 17 Adam B. Cox & Cristina Rodríguez, The President and Immigration Law, 119 Yale L.J. 458, 18 501–02 (2009) (discussing use of the “parole power,” which is currently codified at 8 U.S.C.
19 1182(d)(5)); Lynda J. Oswald, Extended Voluntary Departure: Limiting the Attorney General’s 20 Discretion in Immigration Matters, 85 Mich. L. Rev. 152 (1986) (discussing use of “Extended 21 Voluntary Departure”). Presidents have continued to employ such programs even after the 22 creation of TPS. For example, President Trump exercised his discretion to designate Venezuela 23 for “Deferred Enforced Departure” in 2020. Somewhat like TPS, deferred enforced departure 24 allows foreign nationals to remain and work in the United States lawfully while conditions in their 25 homeland are unsafe or return is impracticable.

22 ³ References to the Attorney General in provisions describing functions transferred from the 23 Department of Justice to the Department of Homeland Security “shall be deemed to refer to the 24 Secretary” of Homeland Security. See 6 U.S.C. 557.

24 ⁴ The agency has long recognized authority to designate a country more than once, which is called 25 “redesignation.” See Extension of Designation and Redesignation of Liberia Under Temporary 26 Protected Status Program, 62 Fed. Reg. 16608-01 (April 7, 1997) (concluding that the TPS statute 27 “explicitly contemplates more than one designation” for one country” because 8 U.S.C.
28 1254a(c)(1)(A)(i) refers to “the most recent designation of the state”). A TPS designation for a country that is already designated for TPS is called a “redesignation.” When DHS redesignates a country for TPS, it generally has the effect of expanding the pool of potential beneficiaries to include individuals who came to the United States after the country was first designated for TPS.

⁵ 8 U.S.C. 1254a(b)(1).

1 27. An initial designation period for a given country lasts for six, twelve, or eighteen
2 months, at the Secretary’s discretion.⁶ Before the designation can become effective, the Secretary 3 must publish a notice in the Federal Register that includes, among other things, a statement of 4 findings, the effective date of the designation, and a tally of eligible foreign nationals. Once the 5 designation is ordered, it “shall remain in effect” for a period “of not less than 6 months,” and 6 remains operative until terminated under procedures specified in the statute.

7 28. Once the Secretary has designated a particular country for TPS, individuals from 8 that country (or persons without nationality who last habitually resided in that country) may apply 9 for immigration status under the program. To be eligible for TPS, however, individuals from a 10 designated country must meet stringent requirements. These requirements include, among other 11 things, continuous physical presence in the United States from the most recent date of designation; 12 continuous residence in the United States from a (potentially earlier) date designated by the 13 Secretary; satisfaction of the criteria for admissibility as an immigrant; lack of disqualifying 14 criminal history (where more than one misdemeanor or a single felony is disqualifying); and 15 submission of an application, extensive documentation, and fees.⁷

16 29. Congress ensured that individuals who are ultimately granted protected status could 17 enjoy the freedom to live and work in the United States without fear of deportation. Under the 18 statute’s clear directives, an individual who receives and maintains TPS “shall [be] authorize[d]” 19 to engage in employment in the United States; “shall not be detained” by the Secretary of 20 Homeland Security on the basis of immigration status; and “shall not [be] remove[d]” from the 21 United States by the Department of Homeland Security.⁸

22 30. The TPS statute requires the Secretary to periodically re-evaluate country 23 designations. At least 60 days before a particular designation expires, the Secretary must “review 24 the conditions in the foreign state . . . for which a designation is in effect” and determine whether 25

26 ⁶ 8 U.S.C. 1254a(b)(2), (b)(3)(C).

27 ⁷ 8 U.S.C. 1254a(c)(1); 8 C.F.R. 244.2, 244.4, 244.9.

28 ⁸ 8 U.S.C. 1254a(a)(1), (d)(4).

1 the country still meets the conditions for TPS.⁹ The review requires “consultation with appropriate
2 agencies of the Government” and, ultimately, publication of notice in the Federal Register.¹⁰

3 31. The review and consultation process typically begins months before the 60-day 4 deadline. First,

5 RAIO [the Refugee, Asylum and International Operations Directorate] 6 (a division within USCIS) provides a Country Conditions Memo. In 7 addition, OP&S [Office of Policy and Strategy] (another division within 8 USCIS) drafts a Decision Memo that contains USCIS’s 9 recommendation on what to do about the TPS designation. Once the 10 Decision Memo is finalized, the USCIS Director passes it on to the DHS 11 Secretary. The State Department provides further input (e.g., country 12 conditions, recommendations). At times, input can also come from other 13 government sources, but the above is the information consistently 14 provided to the DHS Secretary.¹¹

15 32. The Secretary must terminate TPS only if the designated country “no longer 16 continues to meet the conditions of designation.”¹² The statute does not permit consideration of 17 other grounds for termination. The effective date of any TPS termination must be at least 60 days 18 after publication of an official notice of termination, and may not precede the expiry of “the most 19 recent previous extension.”¹³ In other words, the statute does not permit the Secretary to cut short 20 a TPS period. The Secretary may, however, extend the period “to provide for an orderly 21 transition.”¹⁴

22 33. If the Secretary does not terminate TPS for a particular country, either because she 23 affirmatively finds that the country continues to meet the conditions for designation or because she 24 simply fails to make a decision, then the designation “is extended” for a period of six months, or 25 by discretion of the Secretary, for a period of twelve or eighteen months.¹⁵

1 34. When a designation for a particular country is terminated, an individual TPS 2 holder’s status will typically revert back to their original immigration status so long as that status 3 remains valid.¹⁶

5 TPS HOLDERS TO WHOM THE GOVERNMENT HAD GRANTED RENEWED
6 PROTECTION ONLY WEEKS EARLIER

7 Venezuelan TPS Designations

8 35. Venezuelans living in the United States first received temporary protection from 9 removal on January 19, 2021, when President Trump—on the last day of his first 10 Administration—directed the Secretaries of State and Homeland Security to “take appropriate 11 measures to defer for 18 months the removal of any national of Venezuela . . . who is present in 12 the United States as of January 20, 2021,” with limited exceptions, and “to take appropriate 13 measures to authorize employment for aliens whose removal has been deferred, as provided by 14 this memorandum, for the duration of such deferral.” Memorandum re Deferred Enforced 15 Departure for Certain Venezuelans, 86 Fed. Reg. 6845 (Jan. 19, 2021).

16 36. In designating Venezuela for Deferred Enforced Departure, President Trump 17 declared:

18 [T]he Maduro regime is responsible for the worst humanitarian crisis in 19 the Western Hemisphere in recent memory. A catastrophic economic 20 crisis and shortages of basic goods and medicine have forced about five 21 million Venezuelans to flee the country, often under dangerous 22 conditions. . . . The deteriorative condition within Venezuela, which 23 presents an ongoing national security threat to the safety and well-being 24 of the American people, warrants the deferral of the removal of 25 Venezuelan nationals who are present in the United States. Id.

26 37. On March 9, 2021 (under the Biden Administration), DHS designated Venezuela for 27 TPS based on the Secretary’s determination that “extraordinary and temporary conditions in the 28 foreign state prevent [Venezuelans] from returning in safety” and “permitting [Venezuelans] to remain temporarily in the United States” is not “contrary to the national interests of the United

1 States.” 86 Fed. Reg. 13574, 13575 (“2021 Venezuela Designation”). The Secretary found that 2 “Venezuela is currently facing a severe humanitarian emergency” and:

3 [H]as been in the midst of a severe political and economic crisis for 4 several years . . . marked by a wide range of factors including: Economic 5 contraction; inflation and hyperinflation; deepening poverty; high levels 6 of unemployment; reduced access to and shortages of food and 7 medicine; a severely weakened medical system; the reappearance or 8 increased incidence of certain communicable diseases; a collapse in 9 basic services; water, electricity, and fuel shortages; political 10 polarization; institutional and political tensions; human rights abuses 11 and repression; crime and violence; corruption; increased human 12 mobility and displacement (including internal migration, emigration, 13 and return); and the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, among other 14 factors.

15 Id. at 13576.

16 38. Also on March 9, 2021, via the same Federal Register Notice, DHS provided 17 employment authorization for Venezuelans covered by Deferred Enforced Departure. Id. at 13579.

18 39. The 2021 Venezuela Designation allowed eligible Venezuelans who had 19 continuously resided in the U.S. since March 8, 2021 and been physically present in the United 20 States since March 9, 2021 to apply for TPS.

21 40. On July 11, 2022, DHS issued a press release announcing then-Secretary Alejandro 22 Mayorkas’s decision to extend Venezuela’s TPS designation. The press release instructed:

23 Venezuelans who are currently eligible for TPS under the existing 24 designation but may have not yet applied with U.S. Citizenship and 25 Immigration Services (USCIS) should file their applications prior to the 26 September 9, 2022, application deadline, including those Venezuelans 27 who are covered under the January 2021 grant of Deferred Enforced
28 Departure (DED). Venezuela’s DED is set to expire July 20, 2022.¹⁷

41. Venezuela’s Deferred Enforced Departure expired on July 20, 2022. Every person 29 who had been eligible for it was by then eligible for TPS, provided they could satisfy the more 30 stringent background check criteria required for TPS.

42. On September 8, 2022, DHS extended Venezuela’s TPS designation for 18 months, 31 through March 10, 2024. 87 Fed. Reg. 55024. The Secretary found that extension was warranted

1 due to ongoing “[e]xtraordinary and temporary conditions that prevent Venezuelan nationals from 2 returning in safety includ[ing] severe economic and political crises ongoing within Venezuela, 3 which have an impact across sectors, including limited access to food, basic services, and 4 adequate healthcare, and the deterioration of the rule of law and protection of human rights.” Id. at 5 55026. The Secretary also determined that “it is not contrary to the national interest of the United 6 States to permit Venezuelan TPS beneficiaries to remain in the United States temporarily.” Id. at 7 55027. However, because the decision was only an extension, and not also a re-designation, it did 8 not provide protection to Venezuelans who had arrived in the U.S. after March 9, 2021.

9 43. On October 3, 2023, DHS again extended the 2021 designation of Venezuela for 18 10 months, and also re-designated Venezuela for TPS for 18 months. 88 Fed. Reg. 68130 (“2023 11 Venezuela Designation”). The extension of the 2021 designation ran from March 11, 2024 to 12 September 10, 2025. The new 2023 re-designation ran from October 3, 2023 through April 2, 13 2025. The Secretary again found that

14 [E]xtraordinary and temporary conditions continue to prevent 15 Venezuelan nationals from returning in safety due to a severe 16 humanitarian emergency which has resulted in food insecurity and the 17 inability to access adequate medicine, healthcare, water, electricity, and 18 fuel. Additionally, human rights violations and abuses, high levels of poverty, high levels of crime and violence, and heavy rains and flooding prevent Venezuelan nationals from returning in safety and permitting Venezuelan noncitizens to remain in the United States temporarily would not be contrary to the interests of the United States.

19 Id. at 68134.

20 44. In order to qualify under the 2023 Venezuela Designation, TPS applicants had to 21 prove that they had continuously resided in the United States since July 31, 2023 and had been 22 continuously physically present since October 3, 2023. Id.

23 45. All individuals who were eligible for TPS under the 2021 Designation were also 24 eligible for TPS under the 2023 Designation, provided they registered in accordance with DHS 25 instructions.

26 46. DHS estimated that 243,000 Venezuelan TPS beneficiaries who first registered for 27 TPS under the 2021 Venezuela Designation were eligible to re-register for TPS under its 28 extension. Id.

1 47. In addition, DHS estimated “approximately 472,000 additional individuals may be 2 eligible for TPS under the redesignation of Venezuela. This population includes Venezuelan 3 nationals in the United States in nonimmigrant status or without immigration status.” Id. Such 4 individuals were not eligible under the first designation because they arrived after March 9, 2021.

5 January 2025 TPS Extension for Venezuela

6 48. On January 17, 2025, Secretary Mayorkas extended the 2023 Venezuela Designation 7 by 18 months, through October 2, 2026. 90 Fed. Reg. 5961 (“January 2025 Extension”). The 8 Secretary found that extraordinary and temporary conditions in Venezuela continued to prevent 9 nationals from returning in safety. He explained:

10 Venezuela is experiencing a complex, serious and multidimensional 11 humanitarian crisis. The crisis has reportedly disrupted every aspect of 12 life in Venezuela. Basic services like electricity, internet access, and 13 water are patchy; malnutrition is on the rise; the healthcare system has 14 collapsed; and children receive poor or no education. Inflation rates are 15 also among the highest in the world. Venezuela's complex crisis has 16 pushed Venezuelans into poverty, hunger, poor health, crime, 17 desperation and migration. Moreover, Nicolas Maduro's declaration of 18 victory in the July 28, 2024 presidential election—which has been 19 contested as fraudulent by the opposition—has been followed by yet 20 another sweeping crackdown on dissent.

21 Id. at 5963 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

22 49. The Secretary also determined that “it is not contrary to the national interest of the 23 United States to permit Venezuelan TPS beneficiaries to remain in the United States temporarily.”

24 Id.

25 50. The extension was effectively immediately. The registration period opened that day 26 and extended through September 10, 2025.

27 51. The January 2025 Extension also explained that there would no longer be two 28 separate filing process for TPS designations for Venezuela. Rather:

To decrease confusion among stakeholders, ensure optimal operational processes, and maintain the same eligibility requirements, upon publication of this Notice, individuals registered under either the March 9, 2021 TPS designation or the October 3, 2023 TPS designation will be allowed to re-register under this extension. This would not, however, require that a beneficiary registered under the March 9, 2021 designation re-register at this time. Rather, it would provide such individuals with the option of doing so. Venezuela TPS beneficiaries who appropriately apply for TPS or re-register under this Notice and are

1 approved by USCIS will obtain TPS through the same extension date of 2 October 2, 2026.

3 Id. at 5963.

4 52. The January 2025 Extension also automatically extended relevant employment 5 authorization documents. The notice instructed TPS holders that “if you already have an EAD 6 with a ‘Card Expires’ date of September 10, 2025, April 2, 2025, March 10, 2024, or September 9, 7 2022, this Federal Register Notice automatically extends it through April 2, 2026 without any 8 further action on your part.” Id. at 5967. It further instructed employers that they “should accept”
9 an expired EAD accompanied by a copy of the January 17, 2025 Federal Register Notice as proof 10 of work authorization through April 2, 2026. Id. at 5969-70.

11 53. DHS estimated that, as of January 17, 2025, there were 607,000 beneficiaries under 12 the 2021 and 2023 Venezuela Designations combined. Id.

13 Vacatur of TPS Extension Three Days After Secretary Noem’s Confirmation

14 54. On January 20, 2025, President Trump was sworn in as President of the United 15 States.

16 55. That same day, President Trump issued an Executive Order titled “Protecting the 17 American People Against Invasion.” The Order mandated that TPS designations be “appropriately 18 limited in scope” in order to ameliorate the “continued presence of illegal aliens in the United 19 States”:

20 The Secretary of State, the Attorney General, and the Secretary of 21 Homeland Security shall promptly take all appropriate action, consistent 22 with law, to rescind the policy decisions of the previous administration 23 that led to the increased or continued presence of illegal aliens in the 24 United States, and align any and all departmental activities with the 25 policies set out by this order and the immigration laws. Such action 26 should include, but is not limited to . . . ensuring that designations of 27 Temporary Protected Status are consistent with the provisions of section 28 244 of the INA (8 U.S.C. § 1254a), and that such designations are appropriately limited in scope and made for only so long as may be necessary to fulfill the textual requirements of that statute.¹⁸

56. On January 25, 2025, Secretary Noem was sworn in as DHS Secretary.

¹⁸ Exec. Order 14159 (Jan. 20, 2025), available at <https://www.whitehouse.gov/presidential-actions/2025/01/protecting-the-american-people-against-invasion/>.

1 57. On January 28, 2025, Secretary Noem vacated the January 2025 Extension for 2 Venezuela, rendering more than 600,000 Venezuelans vulnerable to the loss of legal status and 3 associated benefits in April or September 2025.¹⁹

4 58. Secretary Noem’s decision was the first vacatur of a TPS extension in the 35-year 5 history of the TPS statute.

6 59. On February 3, 2025, DHS formally published a notice in the Federal Register 7 vacating the January 2025 Extension. 90 Fed. Reg. 8805.

8 60. The vacatur asserted that the Secretary has “inherent authority under the INA to 9 reconsider any TPS-related determination, and upon reconsideration, to vacate or amend the 10 determination.” Id. at 8806.

11 61. In the vacatur, Secretary Noem did not find any error in Secretary Mayorkas’s 12 conclusion that Venezuela continued to meet the conditions for TPS designation. Instead, her sole 13 reason for vacating the extension was her objection to the registration requirement procedures 14 established by Secretary Mayorkas, specifically his decision to permit individuals who initially 15 applied for TPS under the 2021 Venezuela Designation to re-register under the 2023 Designation.

16 62. The vacatur states that it vacates: “(1) [the] extension of the Venezuela 2023 TPS 17 designation, (2) the consolidation of filing processes for both designations, which, in effect 18 resulted in the extension of the 2021 TPS designation, and (3) the EADs that were extended.” Id.
19 at 8807.

20 63. The vacatur further rescinds the automatic extension of employment authorization 21 granted by the January 2025 extension; invalidates employment authorization and approval 22 notices already granted; and cancels the ongoing processing of applications already filed. The 23 notice states:

24 Pursuant to this vacatur, USCIS will no longer accept Venezuela TPS 25 re-registration applications (Form I-821) and associated Applications 26 for Employment Authorization (Form I-765) filed under the [January 2025 Extension]. For TPS beneficiaries who have already filed

1 applications to re-register for TPS pursuant to the [January 2025
2 Extension] and paid any fees associated with their applications, USCIS 3 will cease processing their applications, and issue refunds of any fees 4 paid by those aliens.[FN5] Additionally, USCIS will invalidate EADs; 5 Forms I-797, Notice of Action (Approval Notice); and Forms I-94, 6 Arrival/Departure Record (collectively known as TPS-related 7 documentation) that have been issued with October 2, 2026 expiration 8 dates under the [January 2025 Extension]. USCIS will provide refunds 9 to any fees paid by these aliens as well.

10 Additionally, pursuant to this vacatur the automatic EAD extensions
11 provided in the [January 2025 Extension] are hereby rescinded. USCIS
12 will provide additional guidance regarding the two Venezuela TPS 13 designations on a future date in accordance with applicable laws.

14 Fast-Track Termination of TPS for 350,000 Venezuelans

15 64. On February 1, 2025, Secretary Noem “decided to terminate” the 2023 Venezuela 16 Designation, ordering an end to the legal status of approximately 350,000 Venezuelans, effective 17 in April.²⁰

18 65. The reasoning in Secretary Noem’s decision would also justify the termination of 19 TPS for the approximately 250,000 people protected by the 2021 Venezuela Designation. Under 20 the statute that decision must be made no later than July 2025.²¹

21 66. On February 5, 2025, DHS published a notice in the Federal Register terminating 22 the 2023 Venezuela Designation. 90 Fed. Reg. 9040.

23 67. The termination notice does not contend that the crisis conditions supporting the 24 2023 Venezuela Designation have ended, finding instead that “the relevant conditions in 25 Venezuela remain both ‘extraordinary’ and ‘temporary.’” Secretary Noem nonetheless 26 “determined that Venezuela no longer continues to meet the conditions for the 2023 designation” 27 because “it is contrary to the national interest to permit the covered Venezuelan nationals to 28 remain temporarily in the United States.” Id. at 9041.

29 ²⁰ USCIS, Temporary Protected Status Designated Country: Venezuela, available at 30 https://www.uscis.gov/humanitarian/temporary-protected-status/temporary-protected-status- 31 designated-country-venezuela.

32 ²¹ The statute requires a decision at least 60 days prior to the expiry of any particular TPS 33 designation. 8 U.S.C. 1254a(b)(3).

1 68. In her review of whether TPS for Venezuela is in the national interest, Secretary
2 Noem cited President Trump’s directives—his Executive Order, “Protecting the American People
3 Against Invasion,” his “recent, immigration and border-related executive orders and proclamations 4 [which] clearly articulated an array of policy imperatives bearing upon the national interest”; his 5 declaration of a “national emergency at the southern border,” and his directive to put “America 6 and American citizens first.” Id. at 9042–43.

7 69. Most TPS holders lack any criminal history. Indeed, individuals are ineligible for 8 TPS if they have more than a single misdemeanor conviction. Yet the termination notice justifies 9 terminating the status of nearly 350,000 Venezuelan TPS holders because alleged members of a 10 Venezuelan gang have been “blamed for sex trafficking, drug smuggling, police shootings, 11 kidnappings, and the exploitation of migrants,” and because President Trump recently placed that 12 gang on a “list of transnational criminal organizations.” In elaborating why extension is not in the 13 national interest, the Notice provides: “TPS has allowed a significant population of inadmissible 14 or illegal aliens without a path to lawful immigration status to settle in the interior of the United 15 States[.] . . . Among these Venezuelan nationals who have crossed into the United States are 16 members of the Venezuelan gang known as Tren de Aragua.” Id.

17 70. Despite that the termination notice issued only two days after the vacatur notice (and 18 less than two weeks after Noem took office), the Notice proclaims that the decision to terminate 19 the 2023 Venezuela Designation followed “consultation with the appropriate U.S. Government 20 agencies,” a review of “country conditions,” and a “consider[ation of] whether permitting 21 Venezuelan nationals covered by the 2023 designation is contrary to the national interest.” Id. at 22 9041.

23 71. The termination takes effect April 7, 2025 or 60 days after the publication of the 24 termination notice. This is the earliest possible date of termination allowed by law; it provides for 25 no orderly transition period.²² While the termination notice recognizes the discretionary authority 26

27 ²² 8 U.S.C. 1254a(b)(3)(B) (termination may be effective no earlier than 60 days after publication 28 in the Federal Register or, “if later, the expiration of the most recent previous extension”); 8
U.S.C. 1254a(d)(3) (Secretary may establish an orderly transition period).

1 of the DHS Secretary to provide for an “‘orderly transition’ period if she determines it to be 2 appropriate,” it rejects one as improper here. The termination notice justifies this in light of the 3 Secretary’s determination that the termination is compelled in the “national interest,” and her 4 finding that there are limited “putative reliance interests.” Id. at 9042–44.

5 72. The termination notice does not extend the employment authorization documents for 6 2023 Venezuela registrants beyond the date permitted by the original 2023 Designation. Thus, 7 TPS holders protected by the 2023 Venezuela Designation have TPS-related work authorization 8 only until April 2, 2025—five days prior to the expiry of their legal status—even though the 9 statute requires that individuals protected by TPS have “effective” work authorization “throughout 10 the period [they are] in temporary protected status.”²³

11 THE TRUMP ADMINISTRATION PUBLICLY COMMITTED TO END TPS

12 PROTECTIONS AND DESTROY THE TPS PROGRAM

13 Secretary Noem and President Trump Promised to Terminate TPS

14 73. Secretary Noem, President Trump and Vice President J.D. Vance have repeatedly 15 characterized TPS itself as illegal, and committed to terminate TPS long before the Secretary had 16 any opportunity to consider the factors required by the statute. Secretary Noem’s decision to 17 terminate the 2023 Venezuela Designation treats the program itself as illegal.

18 74. DHS never acknowledged or explained the departure from the agency’s prior 19 recognition that Congress lawfully authorized TPS designations, that TPS is itself legal, and that 20 individual TPS designations may be in the national interest.

21 75. Both prior to and since assuming her position running DHS, Secretary Noem has 22 reiterated her view that TPS, as it has been used, is illegal. At her confirmation hearing, Secretary 23 Noem stated that “[TPS] has been abused and manipulated by the Biden Administration, and that 24

28 ²³ 8 U.S.C. 1254a(a)(1)(B).

1 will no longer be allowed . . . and these extensions going forward the way that they are. The 2 program was intended to be temporary[.]”²⁴

3 76. Secretary Noem defined TPS holders as law violators just by virtue of having this 4 humanitarian status. In announcing her decision to end TPS for Venezuela, Secretary Noem said 5 the termination “stopped” former Secretary Mayorkas from letting Venezuelan TPS holders “stay 6 here and violate our laws for another 18 months.”²⁵

7 77. In a February 2, 2025 “Meet the Press” appearance the day the vacatur was 8 published, Secretary Noem said, “The TPP [sic] program has been abused and it doesn’t have 9 integrity right now.”²⁶

10 78. President Trump, Vice President Vance, and Trump surrogates have likewise 11 championed the view that TPS designations are “illegal”—or, in the Vice President’s words, “a 12 magic amnesty wand.”²⁷ They have made clear their intent to target TPS and/or TPS designations 13 for termination.

14 79. President Trump, while campaigning, said that he would personally revoke TPS and 15 that he did not consider it legal. President Trump responded to an interviewer’s question as to 16 whether Haitian TPS holders in Springfield, Ohio were “legal or illegal” and whether he would

1 “revoke TPS status” by saying: “You have to remove the people; you cannot destroy our country
2 . . . In my opinion, it’s not legal. . . . Absolutely I would revoke [TPS].”²⁸

3 80. Though TPS holders in Springfield, Ohio were welcomed by local officials and 4 employers, and legally authorized to live and work in the United States through the TPS program, 5 President Trump said, “they are illegal immigrants as far as I’m concerned. They’re destroying the 6 towns. . . . [T]hey’ll end up destroying the state!”²⁹

7 81. Vice President Vance, during the campaign, expressed a goal of ending TPS: “We’re 8 going to stop doing mass grants of Temporary Protected Status. Of course, you’re going to have 9 people fleeing from tyranny, but that happens on a case-by-case basis, not by waving the magic 10 government wand.”³⁰ Given that TPS is, by statute, designed to be a mass grant for all eligible 11 individuals (unlike asylum and other forms of fear-based immigration relief), this statement can 12 only be understood as an attack on TPS itself.

13 82. According to the New York Times, Stephen Miller, President Trump’s Deputy Chief 14 of Staff and chief architect of his immigration policy platform, and other top advisers flagged the 15 revocation of TPS as a priority for the incoming administration, again without consideration of 16 country conditions or the merit of any individual designation.³¹

1 83. Project 2025, “the 2025 Presidential Transition Project,” a product of current and 2 former Trump political appointees, also called for the “[r]epeal [of] TPS designations”—without 3 elaboration as to any consideration of country conditions or any other review criteria or 4 processes.³²

5 84. President Trump’s motivation to terminate TPS is not new. During the first Trump 6 Administration, DHS Secretaries faced unrelenting pressure from the White House to reach its 7 “desired result of terminating TPS” and responded by ordering pre-textual terminations of TPS 8 designations for nearly everyone who held the status. Those termination decisions were ultimately 9 struck down in litigation.³³

10 85. Secretary Noem’s actions follow this familiar pattern, and show that she was 11 motivated in part in response to a clear mandate from President Trump and other Trump 12 administration immigration officials. This is evident by her reliance on President Trump’s policy 13 objections as the sole support for her determination that termination of TPS for Venezuela was not 14 in the national interest.

15 SECRETARY NOEM AND PRESIDENT TRUMP EXPRESSED DISCRIMINATORY
16 ANIMUS TOWARDS VENEZUELAN TPS HOLDERS

17 86. Secretary Noem’s vacatur and termination decisions were motivated in significant 18 part by animus against Venezuelans based on their perceived race, ethnicity, and national origin .
19 The animus is evidenced by numerous statements made by Secretary Noem, President Trump and

4 Secretary Noem’s Racist Statements

5 87. In announcing the vacatur in a “Fox and Friends” interview on January 29, 2025, 6 Secretary Noem described Venezuelans in the United States as “dirtbags”: “Today we signed an 7 executive order within the Department of Homeland Security and a direction that we were not 8 going to follow through on what he did to tie our hands, that we are going to follow the process, 9 evaluate all of these individuals that are in our country, including the Venezuelans that are here
 10 and members of TdA [transnational gang Tren de Aragua]. Listen, . . . the people of this country 11 want these dirtbags out. They want their communities to be safe . . . So, this is part of our plan to 12 make sure we are protecting America and keeping it safe again, just like President Trump 13 promised.”³⁴

14 88. This was not an isolated occurrence. Secretary Noem has repeatedly described 15 immigrants, and particularly those from Venezuela, as “dirtbags.”³⁵

16 89. The vast majority of Venezuelan TPS holders have no criminal history, and in 17 general people are ineligible for TPS if they have more than a single misdemeanor conviction.
 18 Nonetheless, Secretary Noem has also sought to disparage Venezuelan TPS holders as 19 “criminals.” At her confirmation hearing, Secretary Noem said: “[T]his extension [of TPS] of over

3 90. She has also repeatedly conflated Venezuelan TPS holders with members of a 4 Venezuelan gang which the Trump administration designated as a foreign terrorist organization.
5 On the January 29 "Fox and Friends" interview, Secretary Noem described ending TPS for

1 this false claim repeatedly.³⁹ One year before she was named DHS Secretary, Noem already 2 targeted Venezuelans for deportation, saying “Venezuela didn’t send us their best. They emptied 3 their prisons and sent criminals to America. Deportations need to start on DAY ONE of [President 4 Trump’s] term” in office.⁴⁰

5 94. In a CBS News interview on March 5, 2024, Secretary Noem asserted that the 6 “invasion” by Venezuelan (and Cuban) immigrants constituted an existential threat to the country.
 7 “We’ve seen these countries that hate us empty out their prisons, their mental institutions. They’ve 8 given us their responsibilities and some of the most dangerous people in the world have made their 9 way to the United States of America. . . . [C]ountries such as Venezuela and Cuba have been 10 emptying out their prisons. . . . So we know for a fact that this was facilitated, that the White 11 House has this invasion happening on purpose, and it is to remake the foundation of this 12 country.”⁴¹

13 95. Secretary Noem’s assertions are not just unsubstantiated; they are false. Tren de 7 of state and federal legal databases found zero “U.S. criminal cases mentioning Tren de

9 Secretary Noem claimed had been ravaged by the gang each thoroughly refuted that assertion, 10 instead identifying a delinquent property manager as the primary culprit for dilapidated properties 11 with “‘criminal elements,’ not widespread gang activity.”⁴⁶ And a Washington Post investigation 12 laid bare the fallacy of DHS’s claim that it had transferred to Guantanamo Tren de Aragua

1 at the time of their arrest; and experts consistently rejected the assertion that there were more than 3 97. DHS itself identified only 600 Venezuelan migrants “who may have connections” to 4 Tren de Aragua—including not just members, but also victims, witnesses or subjects of interest.⁴⁸

5 98. The claim that Venezuelan prisons and mental health facilities are being emptied out

11 President Trump’s Racist Statements

12 99. From his candidacy for his first term as president through the present, President 13 Trump has repeatedly denigrated people perceived to be non-white immigrants. He has 14 specifically targeted both TPS holders generally and Venezuelans in particular.

1 100. Secretary Noem’s reliance on President Trump’s objectives in justifying the 2 termination of TPS for Venezuela demonstrated her adoption of President Trump’s animus as well 3 as her response to pressure from President Trump and the White House to reach a quick decision 4 to terminate TPS.

5 101. During his prior administration, President Trump repeatedly denigrated immigrants 6 from countries designated for TPS, including Haiti, El Salvador, and Honduras. Most infamously, 7 he referred to countries designated for TPS as “shithole” countries in a conversation with 8 legislators about TPS. He expressed a preference, instead, for immigrants from countries “such as 9 Norway.”⁵²

10 102. During his recent campaign, President Trump defended these remarks, reiterating 11 comparisons between “nice countries, you know like Denmark, Switzerland” and “Norway,” and 12 “unbelievable places and countries, countries that are a disaster,” when speaking about 13 immigrants.⁵³

14 103. President Trump has sought to dehumanize immigrants, including TPS holders in 15 particular, through other statements. For months, he repeated and amplified the false claim that 16 Haitian TPS holders were “eating the dogs” and “eating the cats,” “eating the pets of the people

1 104. President Trump has often compared immigrants to snakes that will bite and kill 2 anyone foolish enough to shelter them.⁵⁵ He has also described nonwhite immigrants as 3 “animals.”⁵⁶ For example, President Trump said about some undocumented immigrants during a 4 March 2024 rally, “I don’t know if you call them people. In some cases they’re not people, in my 5 opinion, but I’m not allowed to say that[.]”⁵⁷

6 105. President Trump has repeatedly described immigrants in the United States as an 8 terrorists.”⁵⁸

1 107. At a rally one week before the 2024 election, President Trump described the country 2 as “occupied” by criminal migrants—heaping scorn on “savage” Venezuelan gang members in 3 particular. “We’re not going to have a country any longer. That’s who we’re allowing in. The 4 United States is now an occupied country, but it will soon be an occupied country no longer . . .
5 November 5, 2024 . . . will be Liberation Day in America. . . . I will rescue every city and town 6 that has been invaded and conquered.”⁶⁰

7 108. During his first term in office, President Trump also conflated large groups of 8 immigrants, and sometimes even all of them, with members of the MS-13 gang.⁶¹ In his first State 9 of the Union address, he suggested that the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (“DACA”) 10 program, recipients of which are immigrants first brought to the United States as children many 11 years ago, contributed to the spread of MS-13.⁶²

12 109. President Trump has also falsely claimed that “jails and mental institutions from 13 other countries and gang members right off the streets of the toughest cities of the world are being 14 brought to the United States of America and emptied out into our country.”⁶³ There is no basis for 15 this claim.

16 110. Like Secretary Noem, President Trump has singled out Venezuela for particular 17 opprobrium. He has contended that Venezuelans have “destroyed the fabric of our country.”⁶⁴

They’ve destroyed the fabric of our country. Millions of people let in.”).

1 111. President Trump has used dehumanizing language and repeatedly called Venezuelan 2 immigrants “animals”: “[E]veryday Americans . . . are living in fear all because [former Vice 3 President] Kamala Harris decided to empty the slums and prison cells of Caracas [Venezuela] and 4 many other places [A]nd we have to live with these animals, but we’re not going to live with

6 debates, and interviews found that he called Venezuelan migrants “criminals” at least seventy 7 times between September 1, 2023 to October 2, 2024.⁶⁶

8 112. He has alleged that Venezuelan “prisons are . . . at the lowest point in terms of 9 emptiness that they’ve ever been” because Venezuela was “taking their people out of those prisons
10 by the thousands” and sending them to the United States.⁶⁷

11 113. President Trump has also made disparaging remarks about Latin American countries 12 and people, frequently relying on crude and derogatory stereotypes to stoke fear about 13 immigration.

14 114. President Trump has also repeatedly “retweeted” avowed white nationalists, such as 15 @WhiteGenocideTM, as well as publicly dined with prominent, self-declared white supremacists, 16 thereby endorsing their racist views and amplifying their racist message.⁶⁸

1 115. The Trump Administration has not shown similar opposition to immigrant 2 populations perceived as white. On the contrary, on February 7, 2025 President Trump signed 3 Executive Order No. 14204, Addressing Egregious Actions of the Republic of South Africa, which 4 directs Secretary Noem (among others) to:

5 [T]ake appropriate steps, consistent with law, to prioritize humanitarian 6 relief, including admission and resettlement through the United States 7 Refugee Admissions Program, for Afrikaners in South Africa who are 8 victims of unjust racial discrimination.

9 116. Trump’s Executive Order to protect white South Africans yet again makes clear that 10 his administration strongly prefers white immigrants over those perceived as non-white.

11 117. Together, all of President Trump’s repeated statements denigrating immigrants, and 12 targeting Venezuelans and TPS holders in particular, have not functioned merely as hateful 13 rhetoric. They have also worked as a call to action for those serving him.

14 Statements of Trump Surrogates

15 118. Like President Trump, prominent officials who exerted influence to ensure that 16 DHS’s decision-making process on TPS favored termination also harbor racial animus against 17 immigrants perceived as non-white in general and Venezuelans in particular. These officials have 18 been motivated by their racial animosity to intervene in and influence the TPS decision-making 19 process towards termination.

20 119. For example, Stephen Miller, Deputy Chief of Staff to the President, has long 21 expressed support for White Nationalism, “promoted white nationalist literature,” and “pushed 22 racist immigration stories” to the media.⁶⁹ Miller lauded historical immigration laws that imposed

2 immigrants were uniquely violent and targeted Americans with that violence.⁷¹

3 120. Miller has been described as an “early architect[] of the Trump administration’s 4 immigration policies,” and has prioritized curtailing both legal and illegal immigration.⁷² When he 5 was the senior advisor to the President during Trump’s first term in office, Miller repeatedly called 6 DHS officials to urge termination of TPS.⁷³

7 121. Secretary of State Marco Rubio, who was purportedly consulted in Secretary 8 Noem’s review of the Venezuela TPS designations, has demonstrated how Trump surrogates 9 respond to his call to action. In 2022, the Senator Rubio advocated for the extension of TPS for 10 Venezuela, calling it “absolutely essential” to avoid a “very real death sentence for countless 11 Venezuelans who have fled their country.”⁷⁴ He even co-sponsored legislation to re-designate TPS
12 for Venezuela.⁷⁵ However, more recently, Secretary Rubio embraced President Trump’s racist 13 talking points about Venezuela, espousing in 2024 the “exaggerate[ed]” depiction of Tren de

2 and chaos to U.S. cities and small towns.”⁷⁶

3 The Trump Administration’s Previous Racist Attempts to End TPS

4 122. This is not the first time that an administration guided by President Trump has 5 embarked on an unlawful campaign to destroy TPS in violation of the APA and Equal Protection 6 Clause.

7 123. During President Trump’s first term, every federal district court to consider the 8 question found “evidence that President Trump harbors an animus against non-white, non-9 European aliens which influenced his (and thereby the Secretary’s) decision to end the TPS 10 designation[s]” for El Salvador, Haiti, Sudan, and Nicaragua in 2017 and 2018.⁷⁷

11 124. The evidence adduced in those cases further illustrates that the conduct challenged 12 here is part of a premeditated effort to terminate TPS without regard to applicable law or 13 standards, and to further a racist agenda.⁷⁸

14 125. Political appointees during the first Trump administration also sought to paint TPS 15 holders as criminals and to manufacture evidence to support this impossible claim—to justify the 16 termination of designations, and the undermining of the TPS program. Subordinates of then-DHS 17 Secretary John Kelly covertly sought data on the number of Haitian TPS holders who committed decision” to terminate TPS for Haiti, El Salvador and Honduras); Saget, 375 F. Supp. 3d at 372 (finding that “evidence of [White House] animus toward non-white immigrants, including Haitians specifically, raises at the very least serious questions going to the merits of Plaintiffs’ equal protection claim” challenging the termination of TPS for Haiti).

25 ⁷⁸ See, e.g., Ramos, 336 F. Supp. 3d at 1101–04 (describing how, i.e., “the record evidence
26 indicates that, after receiving Decision Memos from career DHS employees, higher-level DHS 27 employees – i.e., the political appointees – were ‘repackaging’ the memos in order to get to the President/White House’s desired result of terminating TPS”; and how “Acting Secretary Duke 28 expressly acknowledged that the terminations of TPS designations were ‘a strong break with past practice,’ [citation omitted] - designed to fit the President’s objectives on immigration which would put ‘America first.’”); Saget, 375 F. Supp. 3d at 322.

1 crimes and relied on public assistance, despite that virtually any criminal record is disqualifying
2 for TPS.⁷⁹ A federal district court found that “[t]he information sought by the Secretary [Kelly]
3 coincides with racial stereotypes – i.e., that non-whites commit crimes and are on the public 4 dole.”⁸⁰

5 126. During President Trump’s first term in office, the pressure from President Trump 6 and the White House into the DHS Secretary’s TPS decision-making was less evident and public 7 than here. The federal district court nonetheless found that “Acting Secretary Duke’s writings 8 suggest that she, in her role at DHS, was largely carrying out or conforming with a predetermined 9 presidential agenda to end TPS.”⁸¹ There, Acting Secretary Duke, in separate personal memos, 10 expressed that her TPS decision-making was based on “an America first view,” a term that 11 invoked then-President Trump’s racist views preferring immigration from majority-white 12 European countries.⁸² Here, by contrast, Secretary Noem has included President Trump’s 13 “America First” objectives expressly in the published Federal Register Notice terminating TPS.

14 THE TERMINATION OF TPS STATUS WOULD IMPOSE 15 EXTRAORDINARY AND IRREPARABLE HARM ON TPS HOLDERS, THEIR 16 FAMILIES, AND THEIR COMMUNITIES

17 127. More than 600,000 TPS holders will lose the TPS status they were scheduled to 18 have until October 2026 as a result of Defendants’ vacatur. More than 350,000 of them stand to 19 lose their employment authorization as soon as April 2, 2025 and their legal status on April 7, 20 2025 as a result of the termination of the 2023 Venezuela Designation. The scale of the harm 21 wrought by Defendants’ actions to eliminate TPS protection for Venezuelans will be massive if 22 not reversed.

1 Loss of Legal Status, Employment Authorization and Drivers Licenses

2 128. TPS holders are facing the imminent loss of legal status, and as a result, are already 3 being forced to make the impossible choice whether to return to a country in crisis, remain in the 4 United States without lawful immigration status, or uproot themselves again to try to find refuge
5 in some third country. For most, this is not a choice at all. Venezuelan TPS holders cannot safely 6 return to Venezuela.⁸³ Moreover, due to the lack of diplomatic relations between the United States
7 and Venezuela, TPS holders without valid passports lack the requisite documentation to travel 8 voluntarily to Venezuela or a third country.

9 129. Without TPS, many Venezuelans will be at immediate risk of deportation to 10 Venezuela—a country which has experienced an exodus of one-fourth of its population in the past 11 decade. Some Venezuelan TPS holders may currently be seeking other legal avenues to remain in 12 this country (such as asylum or adjustment of status). However, due to the yearslong asylum 13 backlog, affirmative asylum applications remain long-pending, and do not guarantee an individual 14 protection from either detention or deportation in the interim. Defendants' actions also threaten 15 detention and deportation for TPS holders who do not presently have alternative paths to legal 16 status, even though TPS was established expressly to serve this population—individuals who 17 cannot safely return but may not fit the stringent legal requirements of asylum. The loss of TPS in 18 some instances also limits the possibility of acquiring a permanent legal status for which an 19 individual would otherwise be eligible, but for which present legal status is a prerequisite.⁸⁴

20 130. Venezuelan TPS holders also face the prospect of losing employment authorization.
21 This may result in their summary dismissal from their place of work, jeopardizing their and their 22 families' financial stability. Without stable employment, some TPS holders risk losing their homes

23 ⁸³ See, e.g., Venezuela, U.S. STATE DEPARTMENT BUREAU OF CONSULAR AFFAIRS (Sep. 24, 2024), 24 available at <https://travel.state.gov/content/travel/en/international-travel/International-Travel-Country-Information-Pages/Venezuela.html> (“Do not travel to Venezuela due to the high risk of 26 unrest, poor health infrastructure.”).

1 or other material assets, leading to further economic harm. Many Venezuelan TPS holders also 2 face the imminent loss of their drivers' licenses and, with them, their mobility and freedom of 3 movement, because drivers' licenses are limited to those with legal status in many states.⁸⁵ And 4 because the Secretary's termination decision goes into effect so quickly, Venezuelan TPS holders 5 have been afforded almost no time to make alternative arrangements for themselves and their 6 families, including by applying for other forms of immigration relief, employment authorization, 7 or drivers' licenses.

8 Other Harms to TPS Holders: Family Separation, Psychological Harm, and Stigma

9 131. The loss of legal status renders TPS holders vulnerable to separation from U.S.
10 citizen children and other loved ones. There are many Venezuelan TPS holders in mixed-status 11 families—with children, spouses, partners, elderly parents, and other family members who are 12 U.S. citizens or Green Card holders. These TPS holders face the risk of being forced to leave their 13 family members behind, or bringing their U.S. citizen children (or other family members) to a 14 country in economic and political ruin, where severe repression is pervasive.

15 132. Venezuelan TPS holders have been experiencing tremendous emotional and 16 psychological harm since the challenged decisions. This has resulted in heightened anxiety, 17 trauma, insomnia, and depression, in some cases severe enough to result in acts of self-harm. The 18 psychological harms resulting from Defendants' actions will only increase as the effective date 19 approaches.

20 133. Venezuelan TPS holders have also suffered the additional constitutional harm of 21 being subject to an administrative action motivated by racial, ethnic, or national-origin 22 discrimination. Many describe the emotional pain of being subjected to racist attacks by high-23 ranking U.S. government officials. Some also live in fear of leaving the house, speaking Spanish, 24 or disclosing their nationality due to the racist targeting of Venezuelans and other nonwhite 25 migrants.

Harm to Plaintiffs

134. Plaintiff National TPS Alliance has over 84,000 Venezuelan TPS holder members. These members are anxious and desperate. Many are making plans to sell homes and cars, end leases, and collect their belongings in preparation to leave the country. But they do not believe they can safely return to Venezuela because it remains politically unstable and repressive, and because the economy is in total collapse. If the United States will not allow them to stay, they do not know where they will go or what they will do. Among them:

a) NTPSA member A.V. has TPS under Venezuela's 2023 designation. He lives in Alabama and works full-time on the night shift at an auto parts manufacturer. As the 2024 presidential election drew near, A.V. began struggling with severe anxiety and fears that he would lose his TPS status. News reports about President Trump's plans to deport all immigrants awakened a deep sense of dread in him, as he is terrified to return to Venezuela. He faces the April 2025 loss of his job, driver's license, and legal right to remain in the United States. His uncle, uncle's wife, and their three-year old son all rely on TPS. Another cousin relies on TPS, and lives with her two U.S. citizen children.

b) NTPSA member M.R. has TPS under Venezuela's 2021 designation. She lives in West Virginia and works two jobs—full-time in the health care sector and part-time at McDonalds. She is the sole provider for her two minor children and elderly mother. As a result of Defendants' actions, in September 2025 M.R. faces the loss of her legal status, work authorization, and driver's license, as well as health care for her chronically ill daughter and mother. Her twelve-year-old daughter and elderly mother also rely on TPS for their legal status; her five-year-old daughter is a U.S. citizen and faces the prospect of being separated from her family if their TPS is terminated.

c) NTPSA member Laura Guerrero has TPS under Venezuela's 2021 designation. She has been waiting over nine years with a pending asylum application. She fears being in limbo—with limited access to employment, without legal status, and at risk of deportation if her TPS is terminated. Her elder daughter, a TPS holder, is currently in her first year as an undergraduate at a prestigious music school but stands to lose the full

1 scholarship that TPS affords her. Laura has suffered panic attacks since the vacatur 2 announcement.

3 d) NTPSA member C.D., a 60-year old father of three, holds TPS under 4 Venezuela's 2021 designation. He lives in Houston, Texas with his wife, where they own 5 their own home. They have consistently paid their taxes. C.D. works for a temporary 6 staffing agency and was recently diagnosed with prostate cancer. If he loses his TPS in 7 September 2025 he would lose his job and be unable to pay for his mortgage and health 8 care, which would be economically devastating for him and his wife. Losing TPS would 9 also expose C.D. to risk of being deported from the United States, which would inflict many 10 harms, including preventing him from accessing the medical care he needs to treat his 11 cancer.

12 135. Plaintiff Mariela González, a long-time educator, has lived in the United States for 13 fourteen years and is currently employed by an urban school district. She faces termination of her 14 legal status and work authorization in September 2025 as a result of Defendants' actions. She 15 lacks a valid passport and could not legally travel even if she could safely return to Venezuela, 16 which she cannot. Moreover, all of Mariela's immediate family—her parents, siblings, and 17 nephews—reside in the United States and have permanent status.

18 136. Plaintiff Freddy Jose Arape Rivas fled Venezuela due to worsening conditions, 19 including rising repression and violence against opposition members, and a collapsing economy 20 where it became impossible to obtain basic necessities. He works in the IT sector in Texas. He 21 will lose his legal status, employment authorization, and driver's license in April 2025 as a result 22 of Defendants' actions. He also fears he will lose the possibility of an H1B visa, for which he has 23 a pending application through his employer, because he has been told he will no longer be eligible 24 without lawful status.

25 137. Plaintiff M.H. lives in Tennessee, graduated from a Venezuelan university with a 26 nursing degree, and is currently the primary caregiver for her two children—the elder a TPS 27 holder, and the younger a U.S. citizen with severe asthma. M.H.'s husband works full-time for a 28 government subcontractor. M.H.'s two-year-old son faces an uncertain fate should TPS be

1 terminated—unable to live safely in Venezuela, particularly with a serious and chronic health 2 condition, but facing the possibility of being separated from his mother and sister following the 3 termination of their TPS in April 2025 as a result of Defendants’ actions. M.H. has a mandatory 4 check-in with ICE in May 2025, the month after she is scheduled to lose her TPS.

5 138. Plaintiff Cecilia González Herrera came to the United States in 2017, at the age of 6 18, and has lived her entire adult life in this country. She was a student activist in Venezuela, and 7 now attends university and works as a voting rights advocate in Florida. Her mental health has 8 suffered as a result of Defendants’ actions, and she faces the loss of the ability to pay in-state 9 tuition for university, which TPS affords her. She has also abandoned the prospect of postgraduate 10 education as a result of the uncertainty created by the termination announcement. And because of 11 Defendants’ repeated statements targeting Venezuelans as “dirtbags” and gang members, she feels 12 unwanted in a country that has been her home for eight years.

13 139. Plaintiff Alba Cecilia Purica Hernandez is a childcare provider in San Leandro, 14 California. Her deportation proceedings were terminated on account of her TPS registration.
15 However, she risks losing her legal status and employment authorization in April 2025 as a result 16 of Defendants’ actions. She cannot safely return to Venezuela. Nor can she practically return as 17 she lacks a valid Venezuelan passport. Alba has felt sad, scared and adrift since the announcement 18 of the termination of TPS for Venezuela, and feels that the decision is reflective of a perception at 19 the highest levels of the U.S. government that Venezuelans and non-white migrants are less than 20 human.

21 140. Plaintiff E.R. and her twelve-year-old daughter live in New York where E.R. works 22 the night shift in a makeup packaging factory to be able to take her daughter to and from school.
23 E.R. has legal status and employment authorization only through TPS and risks losing her 24 employment on April 2, 2025 as a result of Defendants’ actions. She is the sole provider for her 25 twelve-year-old daughter, who also has TPS. E.R. also requires medical care which she would not 26 be able to get in Venezuela, as a result an accident in which she suffered an injury which required 27 her to get twenty staples in her head. She and her daughter have a mandatory check-in with ICE in 28 June 2025, two months after they are scheduled to lose their TPS status.

1 141. Plaintiff Hendrina Vivas Castillo is a mother and former business owner who 2 works as a delivery driver in Los Angeles, California. In Venezuela, the economic crisis forced 3 her to shut down her business and she faced mounting political repression, including the arrest of 4 her business's co-owner. She risks losing her TPS and employment authorization in April 2025.
5 Hendrina is terrified of going back to Venezuela and does not know what she will do if her TPS is 6 terminated.

7 Harm to Communities and the Public

8 142. TPS holders are an integral part of the economic and social fabric of U.S.
9 communities, and they give back to the country in countless ways. Venezuelan TPS holders are 10 health care providers, factory workers, engineers, agricultural workers, childcare providers, 11 educators, and students. They are active in civic life and volunteer at schools, neighborhood and 12 work organizations, and religious institutions. They pay federal, state, and local taxes, and support 13 government social welfare programs. Summarily withdrawing hundreds of thousands of people 14 from the workforce will strain the social safety net and have economic repercussions on citizen 15 and noncitizen communities alike.

16 143. Recognizing the diverse public benefits of designating countries for TPS when they 17 are in the midst of crisis, the mayors of 33 cities urged Secretary Mayorkas in 2023 to extend TPS 18 for Venezuela and other countries. Among the public benefits these local leaders emphasized were 19 adding eligible workers to the workforce, taking pressure off the social safety net by allowing 20 beneficiaries to secure work and be self-sufficient, and helping to clear the asylum backlog.⁸⁶

21 144. TPS for Venezuela is serving the exact purpose intended by Congress—providing 22 nationality-based humanitarian immigration relief due to a country's severe instability, regardless 23 of whether individuals meet the narrow eligibility requirements for other forms of humanitarian 24 protection, such as asylum.⁸⁷

1 CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

2 FIRST CLAIM

3 Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (Vacatur)

4 (Against All Defendants)

5 145. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained 6 in the preceding paragraphs.

7 146. The Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. 701 et seq., ensures that federal 8 agencies are accountable to the public by providing a “right of review” to any “person suffering 9 legal wrong because of agency action, or adversely affected or aggrieved by agency action.” 5 10 U.S.C. 702. Judicial review is generally limited to “final agency action for which there is no other 11 adequate remedy in a court.” 5 U.S.C. 704.

12 147. The APA empowers the federal courts to “hold unlawful and set aside agency 13 actions, findings, and conclusions” that are “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or 14 otherwise not in accordance with law,” “in excess of statutory jurisdiction, authority, or 15 limitations,” or “without observance of procedure required by law.” 5 U.S.C. 706(2)(A), (C), (D).
16 The right of review under the APA includes a right to judicial review of “legal question[s] of 17 statutory authority,” In re Border Infrastructure Env’t Litig., 915 F.3d 1213, 1222 (9th Cir. 2019), 18 and review of “executive agency action for procedural correctness.” FCC v. Fox Television 19 Stations, Inc., 556 U.S. 502, 513 (2009). To engage in procedurally appropriate decision-making, 20 an agency must ordinarily “display awareness that it is changing position.” Id. at 515. Agencies 21 “may not . . . depart from a prior policy sub silentio or simply disregard rules that are still on the 22 books.” Id. And the APA requires a “more detailed justification . . . for disregarding facts and 23 circumstances that underlay . . . the prior policy.” Id. at 515–16.

24 148. Defendants’ February 3, 2025 vacatur of the TPS extension for Venezuela 25 constitutes “final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court” pursuant 26 to 5 U.S.C. 704, because the Defendants’ vacatur has resulted in all of the Individual Plaintiffs and 27 tens of thousands of members of Plaintiff NTPSA losing TPS protection until October 2026, 28

1 which had been granted to them pursuant to the January 17, 2025 extension, “automatically and 2 without further notice or right of appeal.” 8 C.F.R. 244.19.

3 149. Defendants’ vacatur of the TPS extension decision they had made on January 17, 4 2025 exceeded their statutory authority and was arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, 5 pretextual, and deviated from past practice, including because, among other things:

6 a) The TPS statute carefully regulates the length of TPS extensions, the 7 conditions under which they may be terminated, and the timetable for doing so. Defendants 8 had no authority to annul a TPS extension under the timetable and procedures they utilized 9 here.

10 b) Defendants objected to the January 2025 extension for allowing 2021 TPS
11 holders to re-register under the 2023 extension, but failed to consider that 2021 TPS holders 12 were necessarily eligible for TPS under the 2023 designation as well. See San Luis Obispo
13 Mothers for Peace v. United States Nuclear Regul. Comm’n, 100 F.4th 1039, 1055–56 (9th 14 Cir. 2024) (“An agency action is arbitrary and capricious if . . . the agency has . . . entirely 15 failed to consider an important aspect of the problem.”).

16 c) Defendants’ decision rested on a misinterpretation of the TPS statute’s 17 flexible registration requirements and failed to “consider the alternatives that are within the 18 ambit of the existing policy” before vacating the January 17, 2025 extension in its entirety.
19 DHS v Regents of the Univ. of Cal., 591 U.S. 1, 30 (2020) (cleaned up); see Fed. Election 20 Comm’n v. Akins, 524 U.S. 11, 25 (1998) (“If a reviewing court agrees that the agency 21 misinterpreted the law, it will set aside the agency's action and remand the case.”).

22 d) The decision assumed that TPS designations, including the 2023 Venezuela 23 Designation, are themselves illegal.

24 e) The decision assumed that TPS holders are present in the United States 25 illegally.

26 f) The decision presupposed that prior TPS designations or extensions can be 27 rescinded merely because of policy disagreements between administrations.

28

1 g) The decision occurred under circumstances and a timeline that reflect that it
2 was pretextual. Cf. Dep't of Com. v. New York, 139 S. Ct. 2551, 2575 (2019) (reversing 3 agency action because stated reason for decision was pretextual).

4 h) To the extent Defendants engaged in any process, it was so deficient as to 5 amount to no process at all, defeating the purpose of the TPS statute and deviating from past 6 practice and rules regarding the applicable process.

7 150. Plaintiffs will suffer irreparable injury from the unlawful vacatur.

8 SECOND CLAIM

9 Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (Termination)

10 (Against All Defendants)

11 151. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained 12 in the preceding paragraphs.

13 152. The order terminating the 2023 TPS designation for Venezuela constitutes “final 14 agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court” under 5 U.S.C. 704 because 15 it will result in TPS holders’ loss of TPS “automatically and without further notice or right of 16 appeal.” 8 C.F.R. 244.19.

17 153. Defendants’ termination of the 2023 Venezuela Designation exceeded their statutory 18 authority and was arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, pretextual, and deviated from past 19 practice, including because, among other things:

20 a) The decision assumed that TPS designations, including the 2023 Venezuela 21 Designation, are illegal.

22 b) The decision assumed that TPS holders are present in the United States 23 illegally.

24 c) The research, consultation, and review process leading up to the decision 25 deviated dramatically from past practice without explanation.

26 d) The decision occurred under circumstances and a timeline that reflect that it 27 was pretextual. Cf. Dep't of Com., 139 S. Ct. at 2575 (reversing agency action because 28 stated reason for decision was pretextual).

1 e) To the extent Defendants engaged in any process, it was so deficient as to 2 amount to no process at all, defeating the purpose of the TPS statute.

3 154. Plaintiffs will suffer irreparable injury from the unlawful termination.

4 THIRD CLAIM

5 Violation of the Equal Protection Guarantee of the

6 Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment

7 (Against All Defendants by All Plaintiffs)

8 155. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained 9 in the preceding paragraphs.

10 156. The Fifth Amendment contains an implicit guarantee of equal protection that 11 invalidates any official action that in part reflects a racially discriminatory intent or purpose.
12 Classifications based on race, ethnicity, or national origin receive exacting scrutiny, and even 13 facially neutral policies and practices will be held unconstitutional when they reflect a pattern 14 unexplainable on grounds other than race. Bolling v. Sharpe, 347 U.S. 497, 499 (1954); Vill. of 15 Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 265–66 (1977).

16 157. Defendants’ decisions to vacate the January TPS extension for Venezuela, and to 17 terminate the 2023 Venezuela Designation, are unconstitutional because they were motivated, at 18 least in part, by intentional discrimination based on race, ethnicity, or national origin.

19 158. Plaintiffs will suffer irreparable injury resulting from the illegal vacatur and the 20 arbitrary termination of the 2023 Venezuela Designation.

21 PRAYER FOR RELIEF

22 Plaintiffs ask this Court to grant the following relief:

23 1. Declare that Defendants’ vacatur of the January 17, 2025 TPS extension for 24 Venezuela and Defendants’ purported termination of TPS for Venezuela on February 5, 2025 were 25 unlawful under the APA and unconstitutional under the Due Process Clause of the Fifth 26 Amendment and;

27 2. Declare that Defendants have no authority to vacate a TPS extension under 8 U.S.C.
28 1254a;

1 3. Declare that the January 17, 2025 TPS extension for Venezuela remains in effect
2 under the terms specified in that extension, 90 Fed. Reg. 5961;

3 4. “Set aside” Defendants’ vacatur order of February 3, 2025, and termination order of 4 February 5, 2025, as beyond Defendants’ authority and/or unlawful under the APA;

5 5. Postpone or stay the vacatur order of February 3, 2025, and termination order of 6 February 5, 2025, from taking effect or being put into effect;

7 6. Enjoin and restrain all Defendants, and their officers, agents, servants, employees, 8 attorneys, and all other persons who are in active concert or participation with any of them from 9 enforcing the vacatur order of February 3, 2025, and termination order of February 5, 2025;

10 7. Order Defendants to take all steps necessary to ensure that the extension of TPS 11 issued on January 17, 2025 remains in full force and effect;

12 8. Grant an award of attorneys’ fees and costs; and 13 9. Grant any other and further relief that this Court may deem fit and proper.
