

SUPPORT LETTER FOR JINCHAO WEI

To: The Honorable Judge

Dear Judge,

I am writing to you as the mother of my son, Jinchao Wei.

I come from a traditional Chinese family. Both of my parents passed away long ago. Jinchao was born on August 10, 2000, in Taiyuan, China. I divorced in 2002 when Jinchao was only sixteen months old. The reason for the divorce was that my ex-husband was unfaithful and spent all our savings. After the divorce, he sold the house and disappeared, leaving me to raise Jinchao alone.

In China, divorced women were not well accepted, and I faced discrimination and hardship. I had to quit my job many times and find new ones to support my son. Most of the money I earned was used to care for my sick mother. When Jinchao was one and a half years old, he once asked me, "Mom, why do other kids have a father but I don't?" I told him, "Your father is working abroad. You will meet him one day." He never asked again.

When Jinchao was ten years old, I sent him to a boarding school so that I could continue working and take care of my mother, who was seriously ill. Before that, I could not spend much time with him because I had to work long hours to earn money for our living expenses and to pay my mother to help take care of him. Later, when my mother became very sick, I quit my job and stayed home to take care of her for almost a year until she passed away. During that time, I finally had the chance to spend weekends, holidays, and school breaks with my son.

Jinchao grew up to be a kind, polite, and hardworking boy. He always helped people in need, especially the poor and homeless. He even buried dead animals he found on the street. If someone couldn't afford a bus ticket, he would pay for them. People often said, "You are a prince from the Himalayas, with a kind heart."

At school, he studied hard and was always among the top students. His teachers and classmates loved him. In 2016, we moved from China to Wisconsin, where I later married Peter Lenz. Peter had five children who were around my age, and they had already grown up and moved out to live their own lives. Before we got married, he told me that he would take good care of us and love us. I believed him and thought that, as a father himself, he would understand and love my child. But the truth was very different — he treated his own children with kindness, but he was very harsh towards my son.

However, living with Peter was not easy. He often treated Jinchao harshly. He made my son work outside in the summer heat, scraping old paint from the wall with a triangular scraper, and sometimes yelled at him or hit him on the chest. When Jinchao showed sadness, Peter would say hurtful things and make him frightened.

Sometimes when I tried to talk to Peter about treating my son better, he would become angry and act in a frightening way. Once, he wrapped a towel around his neck and pretended to hang himself, saying “Let me die,” just to scare us. After that, my son and I were too afraid to talk to him about anything and could only stay quiet and endure it.

Even though Peter treated him unfairly, my son never said bad things about him. Instead, he blamed himself and tried harder to do better. He wanted peace at home and worked hard to please everyone. Even a few kind words or small praise from Peter could make him happy for a long time. He truly believed that if he kept doing well, Peter would eventually change his attitude and treat him better.

Before his Navy boot camp, Peter was preparing for retirement. At that time, I was working part-time because I needed to take care of him, and I had no health insurance. Peter began to worry that if I got sick after his retirement, it might cause him financial problems, so he decided to divorce me and ordered me to move out immediately. Jinchao did everything he could to help me. He helped me find a place to live, arranged the rental, and even bought me a car. He repaired the car himself, and I am still driving that same car today—it has never had any problems. You can see how caring and responsible he is. During that difficult time, he even tried to talk to one of Peter’s daughters, hoping she could persuade her father not to divorce me. But sadly, she spoke badly about me instead. Despite this, Jinchao stayed calm, respectful, and continued to help me.

Since he was a child, Jinchao has always been very interested in repairing and studying mechanical equipment. He enjoys learning how machines work and spends time fixing and improving things. He loved maintaining vehicles and other mechanical devices, often teaching himself through manuals and videos. His curiosity, patience, and problem-solving skills have always stood out.

During his time in Navy boot camp and A School, he worked very hard and graduated first in his class, earning a promotion to E3. While serving in the Navy in San Diego, he was promoted to E4 and passed the E5 exam. He received several awards and was invited to have lunch with the ship's captain in recognition of his outstanding performance.

During his time in custody, as a devoted Christian, he continued to study and read the Bible regularly. He joined Christian fellowship meetings, exercised daily, and helped new inmates, especially those from China who had language difficulties. He also encouraged others to study the Bible together. His good behavior earned respect from everyone, even the correctional officers. During my visits, I often heard different officers tell me, "Your son is a great person."

Jinchao has always been kind, respectful, and strong in spirit despite all the difficulties he faced. I truly hope you can see the good heart and strong character he has shown since childhood.

Respectfully,
Mingli Wei
Mother of Jinchao Wei
