Re: Potential Special Masters, Case No. 22-81294-CIV-CANNON

Dear Judge Cannon:

In light of the news that you may choose to appoint a Special Master in the above-captioned case to address any potential issues of Executive Privilege, I write to respectfully bring four uniquely qualified experts in the field to your attention for your consideration. We are not advocating for or against the appointment of a Special Master and take no position on that question; we simply wish to let you know of their existence and expertise in this exceedingly esoteric corner of the law. Each of the below individuals—listed in alphabetical order and with only a current title to avoid any suggestion of ranking—is willing to serve as a Special Master should you request it, and they are all willing to fully abide by the terms of the appointment.

- Heidi Kitrosser, Professor of Law, Northwestern University Pritzker School of Law
- Mark J. Rozell, Dean, Schar School of Policy and Government, George Mason University
- Jonathan Shaub, Assistant Professor of Law, University of Kentucky Rosenberg College of Law
- Mitchel A. Sollenberger, Ph.D., Professor of Political Science, University of Michigan-Dearborn

I have also attached a curriculum vitae for each person and a copy of an amici curiae brief I submitted on their behalf to the U.S. Supreme Court in a previous case involving former President Trump's claims of Executive Privilege. It is this last fact—that these scholars have already accumulated and applied specific expertise and knowledge regarding issues surrounding a former President's claims of Executive Privilege in comparable circumstances—that we believe uniquely qualifies any of these individuals to ably serve you as a Special Master, should you choose to appoint one.

I remain at your disposal should you choose to discuss any of this in greater detail.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Kel McClanahan". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Kel" being particularly prominent.
