6 Plaintiff,

7 v.

8 PARLER LLC,

9 Defendant.

Case No. 2:21-cv-01006-CDS-DJA

Order Granting Defendant's
Motion to Dismiss (ECF No. 13)

10
11 This case arises out of dueling 'P'-shaped logos between two companies. Plaintiff 46 Labs
12 LLC brings four claims against Defendant Parler, LLC, alleging: (1) trademark infringement
13 under 15 U.S.C. § 1141(1); (2) false association under 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1)(A); (3) common law
14 trademark infringement; and (4) common law unfair competition. ECF No. 2 at 6-8. 46 Labs 15 filed its complaint on May 26, 2021. ECF No. 2. Parler moved to dismiss under Fed. R. Civ. P.
16 12(b)(6) on Aug. 30, 2021. ECF No. 13. Plaintiff responded on Sep. 13, 2021. ECF No. 18.
17 Defendant replied on Sep. 20, 2021. ECF No. 19. After consideration of the moving papers and 18 relevant law, I grant Defendant Parler's Motion to Dismiss for the reasons stated below.

19 I. Relevant Background Information

20 i. Plaintiff 46 Labs and the Peeredge Mark

21 46 Labs is an Oklahoma LLC involved in communication infrastructure and related 22 services. ECF No. 2 at ¶¶2, 6. One of the services 46 Labs offers is a user interface called 23 "Peeredge." ECF No. 2 at 3. The logo 46 Labs has used for Peeredge since 2015 is a stylized 'P', 24 which remains in sight of customers while they log into and use the service. Id. at 3-4.

1 As set forth in the Complaint, 46 Labs owns a trademark registered with the U.S. Patent 2 and Trademark Office for the that stylized 'P,' Reg. No. 4,790,688. ECF No. 2 at ¶9. It was 3 registered on Aug. 11, 2015. Id. The mark "consists of a stylized letter 'P' composed of a semicircle 4 with and [sic] extended straight line forming the body of the 'P' and a curved line that starts in 5 the semicircle and extends downward to form the leg of the 'P.'" Id. The mark is registered as a 6 service mark for "cloud computing featuring software for use in the management of 7 telecommunications including switching, management of call data, telecommunications systems 8 and telecommunications business functions..." Id.

9 ii. Defendant Parler and the Parler Logo

10 Parler is a Nevada LLC that operates a social media platform. ECF No. 2 at ¶3. Parler 11 launched its platform in August of 2018. Id. at ¶11. In connection with the Parler platform, Parler 12 utilizes a red stylized 'P,' which users frequently see while using the platform. Id. at ¶12. Plaintiff 13 alleges, and Parler does not dispute, that the Parler 'P' mark looks nearly identical to the 14 Peeredge 'P' mark in every respect except for their respective colors (red for Parler and blue for 15 Peeredge). ECF No. 2 at 4.

16 iii. Trademark Infringement Claims

17 46 Labs argues that Parler has "intentionally used the Infringing Mark in connection 18 with its" business without 46 Labs' consent. ECF No. 2 at 5-6. Plaintiff alleges that Parler's use 19 of the infringing mark "has caused actual confusion among 46 Lab's [sic] customers." Id. at 5. 46 20 Labs claims it "has suffered and will continue to suffer monetary loss and irreparable injury to its 21 business, reputation, and goodwill associated with its Peeredge Mark." Id. 46 Labs brings 22 trademark infringement claims under the Lanham Act and at common law. Id. at 6-7.

23 Parler contends that its use of the similarly stylized 'P' does not rise to the level of 24 infringement because Parler's use does not reasonably confuse Plaintiff's customers. See generally

1 ECF No. 13. Parler argues that this case must be dismissed for two reasons: first, because Parler's 2 social networking platform is unrelated to the Peeredge service, and second, because the two 3 companies' services are not competitive with each other so reasonable consumers are unlikely to 4 be confused. Id.

5 iv. False Association & Unfair Competition Claims

6 46 Labs also complains of Parler's false association under the Lanham Act and Parler's 7 unfair competition at common law. ECF No. 2 at 6-8. In both counts, Plaintiff argues that 8 Parler's infringing mark is likely to confuse or deceive 46 Labs' customers. Id. Plaintiff claims that 9 it has suffered diversion of trade, loss of profits and goodwill, and damage to its reputation. Id.

10 Parler avers that 46 Labs has failed to plead these allegations with any specificity. ECF 11 No. 13 at 8-9. It notes that, in lieu of actual confusion demonstrated by 46 Labs, the non-12 infringement causes of action turn on the same standard as the infringement causes of action: 13 likelihood of confusion to reasonable customers. Id. at 10-11.

14 Essentially, in moving to dismiss all four of 46 Labs' causes of action, Parler relies upon 15 the argument that "trademark infringement allegations that fail to plausibly allege probable 16 consumer confusion should be dismissed at the pleading stage." Id. at 11. It contends that 46 17 Labs' failure to allege that its services are like those provided by Parler and 46 Labs' failure to 18 allege facts that plausibly show probable consumer confusion are both fatal to 46 Labs' case. Id.

19 II. Discussion

20 i. Jurisdiction and Venue

21 This Court's jurisdiction over the matter is proper based on federal question jurisdiction.
22 28 U.S.C. § 1331. Plaintiff's causes of action are appropriately pled in federal law, specifically the 23 Lanham Act. Thus, the federal element of those claims appears on the face of Plaintiff's 24 complaint, are substantial components of 46 Labs' claims, and are of significant federal interest.

1 Furthermore, some of Plaintiff’s claims relate to trademark infringement. As a result, this Court 2 may exercise subject matter jurisdiction over those claims. See 28 U.S.C. § 1338(a) (“[T]he 3 district courts shall have original jurisdiction of any civil action arising under any Act of 4 Congress relating to...trademarks.”). Additionally, this Court may exercise jurisdiction over 46
5 Labs’ unfair competition claim as it is joined with the trademark infringement claims. See 28
6 U.S.C. § 1338(b) (“[T]he district courts shall have original jurisdiction of any civil action 7 asserting a claim of unfair competition when joined with a substantial and related claim under 8 the...trademark laws.”).

9 Finally, this Court may also exercise supplemental jurisdiction over 46 Labs’ state law 10 claims on the basis that those state law claims are related to the federal trademark infringement 11 claims. See 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

12 ii. Legal Standard for Motions to Dismiss

13 The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require a plaintiff to plead “a short and plain 14 statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2).
15 Dismissal is appropriate under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) where a pleader fails to state a claim upon 16 which relief can be granted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6); Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 17 (2007). A pleading must give fair notice of a legally cognizable claim and the grounds on which 18 it rests, and although a court must take all factual allegations as true, legal conclusions couched 19 as factual allegations are insufficient. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555. Accordingly, Fed. R. Civ. P.
20 12(b)(6) requires “more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements 21 of a cause of action will not do.” Id. To survive a motion to dismiss, “a complaint must contain 22 sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” 23 Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570). “A claim has facial 24 plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the 1 reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Id. This standard 2 “asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id.

3 If the court grants a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, leave to amend should 4 be granted unless it is clear that the deficiencies of the complaint cannot be cured by 5 amendment. DeSoto v. Yellow Freight Sys., Inc., 957 F.2d 655, 658 (9th Cir. 1992). Pursuant to Fed. R.
6 Civ. P. 15(a), a court should “freely” give leave to amend “when justice so requires,” and in the 7 absence of a reason such as “undue delay, bad faith or dilatory motive of the part of the movant, 8 repeated failure to cure deficiencies by amendment previously allowed, undue prejudice to the 9 opposing party by virtue of allowance of the amendment, futility of the amendment, etc.” Foman
10 v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178 (1962).

11 iii. Federal Law Trademark Infringement Claim

12 Under the Lanham Act, “[t]o prevail on a claim of trademark infringement ... a party must 13 prove: (1) that it has a protectible ownership interest in the mark; and (2) that the defendant’s 14 use of the mark is likely to cause consumer confusion.” Network Automaton, Inc. v. Advanced Sys.
15 Concepts, Inc., 638 F.3d 1137, 1144 (9th Cir. 2011) (simplified). The “sine qua non of trademark 16 infringement is consumer confusion.” Id. at 1142. “The test for likelihood of confusion is whether 17 a reasonably prudent consumer in the marketplace is likely to be confused as to the origin of the 18 good or service bearing one of the marks.” Multi Time Mach., Inc. v. Amazon.com Inc., 804 F.3d 930, 19 935 (9th Cir. 2015). A reasonably prudent consumer is one who “exercise[s] ordinary caution,” 20 and that caution presumably increases where a buyer exercises “care and precision in their 21 purchases, such as for expensive or sophisticated items.” Id. at 937. The “default degree of 22 consumer care is becoming more heightened as the novelty of the Internet evaporates and online 23 commerce becomes commonplace.” Id. The confusion must be a probability, not simply a 24 possibility. Murray v. Cable Nat’l Broad. Co., 86 F.3d 858, 860 (9th Cir. 1996).

1 In determining the likelihood of confusion at the motion to dismiss stage, this Court 2 must consider whether 46 Labs has stated a plausible case that consumers would be confused by 3 Parler's use of a substantially similar stylized 'P' to 46 Labs' registered trademark. To answer
4 this question, courts in this Ninth Circuit consider the following "Sleekcraft" factors:

5 (1) strength of the mark; (2) proximity of the goods; (3) similarity of the marks; 6 (4) evidence of actual confusion; (5) marketing channels used; (6) type of goods 7 and the degree of care likely to be exercised by the purchaser; (7) defendant's 8 intent in selecting the mark; and (8) likelihood of expansion of the product lines.

9 M2 Software, Inc. v. Madacy Ent., 421 F.3d 1073, 1080 (9th Cir. 2005) (citing AMF Inc. v. Sleekcraft Boats, 10 599 F.2d 341, 348-49 (9th Cir. 1979), abrogated in part on other grounds by Mattel, Inc. v. Walking 11 Mountain Prods., 353 F.3d 792, 810 n.19 (9th Cir. 2003)). These factors are neither exhaustive nor 12 dispositive; "it is the totality of facts in a given case that is dispositive." Pom Wonderful LLC v.
13 Hubbard, 775 F.3d 1118, 1125 (9th Cir. 2014) (quoting Entrepreneur Media, Inc. v. Smith, 279 F.3d 1135, 14 1140 (9th Cir. 2002)).

15 Before addressing the Sleekcraft factors, however, this Court must define the relevant 16 consumer market because "a court conducting a trademark analysis should focus its attention on 17 the relevant consuming public." Rearden LLC v. Rearden Com., Inc., 683 F.3d 1190, 1214 (9th Cir.
18 2012).

19 46 Labs has not sufficiently pled that Parler's use of the stylized 'P' is likely to cause 20 consumer confusion rising to the level of trademark infringement, and for that reason, claim one 21 of the complaint must be dismissed. Critically, Plaintiff has not pled facts that, even if accepted 22 as true, allow this Court to determine that 46 Labs and Parler compete with similar services.
23 Trademark infringement occurs when an infringer uses a substantially identical mark for similar 24 goods. Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences v. Creative House Promotions, Inc., 944 F.2d 1446, 1454 (9th Cir. 1991). 46 Labs provides no evidence that Parler competes within the same

1 industry, or provides similar goods or services, as 46 Labs' Peeredge service. "Goods and services 2 are related when they are complementary, sold to the same class of purchasers, or similar in use
3 and function." Ironhawk Technologies, Inc. v. Dropbox, Inc., 2 F.4th 1150, 1163 (9th Cir. 2021) (citing 4 Sleekcraft, 599 F.2d at 350). "Related goods (or services) are those 'which would be reasonably 5 thought by the buying public to come from the same source if sold under the same mark.'" 6 Rearden, 683 F.3d at 1212 (quoting Sleekcraft, 599 F.2d at 348 n.10).

7 46 Labs describes itself as a "leader in communication infrastructure and services since 8 2012, and a leading provider of communications infrastructure and services throughout the 9 United States." ECF No. 2 at 3. Its Peeredge service is essentially a telephony platform. Id.; see also 10 ECF No. 13 at 2. Parler, by contrast, is a social media platform that promotes itself as an 11 alternative to larger social media sites like Facebook or Twitter. ECF No. 2 at 911. Plaintiff fails 12 to link the services provided by its own Peeredge platform to the services provided by Parler.
13 There are no allegations in 46 Labs' complaint that the same group of purchasers use both 14 Peeredge and Parler, nor that Peeredge and Parler are similar in use or function, nor that the 15 buying public would reasonably think that goods or services provided by Parler come instead 16 from 46 Labs. Plaintiff's allegation that "customers of 46 Labs contacted 46 Labs based on their 17 confusion that 46 Labs was responsible for or affiliated with Parler" is an unsupported assertion 18 of an element of trademark infringement. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 ("Threadbare recitals of the 19 elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice.").

20 46 Labs also contends in its response that "both parties provide communication services 21 to the general consumer, which enable consumers to communicate through means such as 22 phone calls or published posts." ECF No. 18 at 5. However, this argument is overly expansive in 23 its use of relatedness. While both companies provide a type of communication services, they do 24 not provide similar services: one is a telephone services company and the other is an internet,

1 social media platform. Specifically, Peeredge is an infrastructure system that allows companies 2 to place phone calls. Parler, by contrast, is a social media site/platform wherein users may 3 communicate with other users. Peeredge and Parler have very different users. ECF No. 13 at 7.
4 Peeredge serves businesses with a need for sophisticated telecommunications infrastructure. Id.
5 Parler serves the general audience of social media consumers; that is, the general public. Id.
6 Parler's platform is free-of-cost, while Peeredge is a paid service. Id. The services are also 7 marketed very differently; Parler is available on phone and computer app stores, while Peeredge 8 is available only to 46 Labs' clients. ECF No. 13 at 7. Plaintiff cites to cases from other circuits 9 regarding the availability of phone calls on Facebook, a different social media platform than 10 Parler, yet does not allege that Parler (the actual Defendant in this action) is a platform on 11 which users may place phone calls. See ECF No. 18 at 5, n.3.

12 46 Labs simply cannot allege that users have a plausible likelihood of confusion.
13 Plaintiff's attempt to throw both technology companies into a general "communications" bucket 14 are unpersuasive. ECF No. 18. The difference between the services offered by the parties, 15 uncontroverted by Plaintiff's allegations, is the difference between an individual freely posting 16 on social media compared to a corporate entity purchasing an expensive telecommunications 17 interface. ECF No. 13 at 7.

18 Ultimately, 46 Labs has not alleged facts from which the Court can infer that it is 19 plausible that the services offered by Parler are like the goods and services offered by 46 Labs or 20 Peeredge. For that reason, I do not need to address the Sleekcraft factors – the inquiry ceases with 21 46 Labs' lack of factual allegations regarding the comparability of its services to those of Parler.

22 Based on 46 Labs' lack of allegations that, even if accepted as true, would demonstrate 23 that Parler's use of the similarly stylized 'P' would likely cause consumer confusion, 46 Labs has 24

1 not demonstrated a plausible case for trademark infringement. The first count of Plaintiff's 2 complaint must be dismissed without prejudice, with leave to amend.

3 iv. Federal Law False Association Claim

4 46 Labs false association claim is not sufficiently pled that Parler's use of the stylized 'P' 5 is likely to cause consumer confusion rising to the level of false association. Consequently, the 6 second cause of action must be dismissed. The Lanham Act covers false association of registered 7 trademarks. See generally 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1)(A). Just like infringement claims, a plaintiff must 8 demonstrate that the defendant's usage of the mark "is likely to cause confusion, or to cause 9 mistake, or to deceive as to the affiliation, connection, or association of such person with 10 another person, or as to the origin, sponsorship, or approval of his or her goods, services, or 11 commercial activities by another person." 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1)(A). For the reasons described in 12 the trademark infringement section regarding the lack of likelihood of confusion to consumers, 13 supra p. 5-8, this claim of false association cannot survive Parler's motion to dismiss. 46 Labs has 14 not alleged with sufficient specificity that Peeredge and Parler's services are similar enough to 15 potentially cause consumer confusion, nor has 46 Labs alleged that Parler's use of the stylized 'P' 16 is likely to cause consumer confusion. Accordingly, Defendant's motion to dismiss the second 17 cause of action is granted without prejudice, with leave to amend.

18 v. Common Law Trademark Infringement & Unfair Competition Claims

19 46 Labs' third and fourth cause of actions suffer the same defect as the first two: Plaintiff 20 has not sufficiently pled that Parler's use of the stylized 'P' causes unfair competition at common 21 law.

22 Nevada has adopted the same likelihood of confusion test used by the federal courts; the 23 same "two elements [dispositive of federal trademark infringement actions] are also the 24 dispositive issues with regard to state and common law infringement claims, a claim under 15

1 U.S.C. § 1125(a), and unfair competition under Nevada law.” WEC Holdings, Inc. LLC v. Juarez, 2008
2 WL 345792, at *3 (D. Nev. Feb. 5, 2008) (citing M2 Software, 421 F.3d at 1080); see also New West
3 Corp. v. NYM Co., 595 F.2d 1194, 1201 (9th Cir. 1979) (“Whether we call the violation infringement, 4 unfair competition, or false designation of origin, the test is identical – is there a ‘likelihood of 5 confusion?’”); Caesars World, Inc. v. Milanian, 247 F. Supp. 2d 1171, 1193 (D. Nev. 2003) (“The 6 elements necessary to make out a claim of Nevada common law trademark infringement are 7 identical to the elements necessary under section 43(a) of the Lanham Act...[t]he Court will thus 8 analyze these claims together.”).

9 For the reasons set forth above regarding the allegations of trademark infringement
10 section, supra p. 5-8, 46 Labs’ common law claims cannot survive Parler’s motion to dismiss. 46 11 Labs has not alleged with sufficient specificity that Peeredge and Parler’s services are similar 12 enough to potentially cause consumer confusion, nor has 46 Labs alleged that Parler’s use of the 13 stylized ‘P’ is likely to cause consumer confusion. The third and fourth causes of action are 14 therefore dismissed without prejudice with leave to amend.

15 III. Conclusion

16 For the foregoing reasons, this Court GRANTS Defendant Parler’s Motion to Dismiss
17 (ECF No. 13).

18 Plaintiff 46 Labs is granted leave to amend their complaint to allege factual specificity 19 that cures the deficiencies of their pleading.
