Preliminary Statement

The SEC’s motion seeks leave to take the deposition of Defendant Do Kwon in the United States before October 13, 2023, even though the SEC knows that Mr. Kwon is detained in Montenegro with no scheduled release or extradition date. The motion should be denied because it would be impossible for Mr. Kwon to appear for such a deposition. The SEC’s request for alternative relief—an order precluding Defendants from submitting a statement by Mr. Kwon on summary judgment—should also be rejected. That request violates the Court’s Individual Rules of Practice because the SEC did not obtain the Court’s permission to seek a preclusion order in the parties’ pre-motion call to Chambers. Moreover, the SEC’s request for a preclusion order is not ripe because neither party has filed a summary judgment motion and the deadline for summary judgment motions is a month away.

Background

Mr. Kwon’s detention in Montenegro in March 2023 was widely reported. The SEC (whose Office of International Affairs has expertise in requests for international judicial assistance) first indicated to defense counsel that it wanted to take Mr. Kwon’s deposition in June 2023, and waited over five months after Mr. Kwon’s detention to submit a proposed Letter of Request under the Hague Evidence Convention (“LOR”) to this Court, on August 30, 2023. Mr. Kwon did not oppose the SEC’s proposed LOR, which this Court signed on the same day it was submitted and invited the SEC to pick up the following morning. See Ex. A. The SEC did not deliver the LOR to the Montenegrin authorities until September 14, 2023—one month before the discovery cut-off date (October 13, 2023) that the Court had extended at the SEC’s request. See ECF Docket No. 44.

Contrary to the SEC’s misrepresentations (SEC Mem. at 1, 8), Mr. Kwon has not refused to “provid[e] the SEC an opportunity to depose him” and does not “oppose[] the SEC noticing his own deposition.” The SEC is well aware that Mr. Kwon has never opposed the SEC’s efforts to depose him. Although Mr. Kwon already testified for approximately 21 hours during the SEC’s nearly two-year investigation—two five-hour days of testimony under oath from Mr. Kwon pursuant to an SEC subpoena, five hours of compelled testimony under oath taken by the Monetary Authority of Singapore at the request and with the participation of the SEC, and six hours of voluntary interviews with the SEC—Mr. Kwon consented to the SEC’s request that this Court issue the LOR for his deposition. See Ex. A (SEC acknowledging in its email submitting its proposed LOR to this Court that “Counsel for Terraform and Do Kwon have informed us that they do not oppose this request.”) (emphasis added). Thus, the SEC’s assertion that it is “being denied its fundamental right to gather the relevant facts” (SEC Mem. at 7) is baseless.

In addition, four days before the SEC filed this motion, defense counsel advised the SEC that Mr. Kwon would not oppose a request for leave to take his deposition pursuant to Rule 30(a)(2)(B) provided that the deposition take place in Montenegro in accordance with the terms of the LOR. The SEC rejected that proposal, declaring that “we do intend to notice the deposition for a date certain in the United States.” Ex. B. The SEC subsequently informed Defendants’ counsel that the “date certain” would be on or before October 13, 2023.

Inexplicably, the SEC’s brief says nothing about the location of the deposition, which was the only point of dispute between the parties. Invoking Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(a)(2)(B), the SEC asks the Court to grant it leave to take the deposition of a person “confined in prison,” omitting that it intends to notice the deposition to occur over 4,500 miles away from the jail in which Mr. Kwon is detained by a foreign sovereign. To put it mildly, that is a material omission.

On September 25, 2023, a Montenegrin Court indicated informally (without issuing any ruling or order) that it may hold a hearing on October 13 or October 26, 2023 for the purpose of asking Mr. Kwon the questions that the SEC drafted and included in its LOR.¹ In a call with the Court's law clerk on September 26, 2023, the SEC stated that, even if Mr. Kwon answers those questions in the Montenegrin Court, the SEC may deem that process—which it asked the Court to request—inadequate and seek another deposition of Mr. Kwon in the United States after the discovery cut-off period. The SEC has not asked this Court to withdraw the LOR, which this Court issued at the SEC's request and without objection from Mr. Kwon. Thus, the SEC seeks to have its cake and eat it too by simultaneously (1) permitting the Montenegrin Court to question Mr. Kwon under the LOR requested by the SEC, (2) reserving the right to disregard Mr. Kwon's answers if it does not like them, and (3) seeking leave from this Court to take Mr. Kwon's deposition in the United States while he is detained in Montenegro.²

Argument

I.

THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE SEC LEAVE TO DEPOSE MR. KWON IN THE UNITED STATES

The Court should deny the SEC's motion for the simple reason that it is currently impossible for Mr. Kwon to appear for a deposition in the United States. "The law does not ¹ In the Montenegrin Court's informal statement about the hearing, it also indicated that Mr. Kwon would not have the right to have counsel represent him and participate in the hearing. If the hearing were to proceed on that basis, Mr. Kwon would object to it as inconsistent with his right to due process under the United States Constitution.

² In the call with the Court's law clerk on September 26, 2023, the SEC attempted to justify its position by citing SEC v. Hong, CV-20-04080 MCS (RAOx), 2012 WL 8531666 (C.D. Cal. May 18, 2021). But in that case a Magistrate Judge held only that the SEC would not be precluded from deposing the defendants under Fed. R. Civ. P. 30 if a foreign court limited the SEC's ability to question them (or if the questioning did not occur prior to the discovery cut-off) pursuant to an LOR issued at the defendants' request. The case provides no support for the SEC's effort in this case to obtain a deposition under its own LOR while also reserving the right to take another Rule 30 deposition if it does not like the results of its own LOR.

compel the doing of impossibilities.” Hughey v. JMS Dev. Corp., 78 F.3d 1523, 1530 (11th Cir. 1996) (citing Black’s Law Dictionary 912 (6th ed. 1990)). An order mandating something that is impossible serves no practical purpose and risks undermining judicial authority, because the Court could not mandate compliance. See, e.g., In re Grand Jury Proceeding, 971 F.3d 40, 50 (2d Cir. 2020) (“Compliance with [a subpoena issued by a grand jury whose term had expired] was obviously impossible, and the district court lacked the power to compel the impossible through coercive sanctions.”) (citing Loubriel v. United States, 9 F.2d 807, 809 (2d Cir. 1926) (Learned Hand, J.)). Such an order would also “merely amount to an [impermissible] advisory opinion, as the Court could not order [Mr. Kwon] to do the impossible.” Hilliard v. Murphy Land Co., LLC, No. 1:18-cv-00232-DCN, 2019 WL 6702410, at * 7 (D. Id. Dec. 9, 2019), aff’d, 835 Fed. Appx. 292 (9th Cir. Feb. 4, 2021).

II.

THE COURT SHOULD ALSO DENY THE SEC’S REQUEST FOR A PRECLUSION ORDER

The alternative relief sought by the SEC—an order precluding Defendants from using a declaration of Mr. Kwon on summary judgment—violates this Court’s Individual Rules 2(a) and 2(b). The SEC never advised Defendants’ counsel that it intended to seek a preclusion order and filed the motion without stating during the parties’ pre-motion call to Chambers that it would seek a preclusion order, as alternative relief or otherwise. That failure alone is reason to deny the SEC’s request.

Moreover, even if the Court excused the SEC’s failure to comply with the Court’s Individual Rules, the SEC’s request for a preclusion order is not ripe because “it depends upon contingent future events that may not occur as anticipated, or indeed may not occur at all.” Nat’l Org. for Marriage, Inc. v. Walsh, 714 F.3d 682, 687 (2d Cir. 2013) (internal quotations omitted).

All of the cases cited in the SEC's brief involving preclusion orders (at pp. 8-9) involved motions to strike witness statements that had already been submitted in connection with pending summary judgment motions. In this case, neither side has moved for summary judgment and the summary judgment motions are not due to be filed for another month (by October 27, 2023). The ripeness doctrine therefore prevents this Court from "entangling itself in abstract disagreements over matters that are premature for review because the injury is merely speculative and may never occur." In re Methyl Tertiary Butyl Ether (MTBE) Prod. Liab. Litig., 725 F.3d 65, 110 (2d Cir. 2013).

III.

THE COURT SHOULD DISREGARD THE SEC'S IRRELEVANT MISCHARACTERIZATION OF EVIDENCE

Finally, the SEC misstates evidence in its gratuitous effort to prejudice Mr. Kwon in a procedural motion having nothing to do with the merits (or lack of merit) of the SEC's case. The SEC incorrectly claims that a chat attached to its brief "details how [Mr. Kwon] intended to use Chai to create fake transactions on the Terra blockchain, which would appear real and generate fees." (SEC Mem. at 5.) But that chat actually shows Mr. Kwon and Daniel Shin discussing the possibility of staking LUNA tokens to validators and generating transactions between LUNA wallets, not generating fake Chai transactions. See id. at 6 (Mr. Shin: "i.e., when will we start to stake ..."). The SEC does not allege that the transactions discussed in the chat actually occurred or were not disclosed, and the Amended Complaint alleges instead that TFL did not settle Chai transactions on the Terra blockchain (which Defendants have denied), not that anyone generated fake Chai or other blockchain transactions. In other words, the SEC's motion relies on misrepresentations about irrelevant evidence to support its spurious claim that it has been unable to get discovery from Mr. Kwon.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the SEC's motion should be denied in its entirety.
